Representatives at the Department of Labor,

Millions of Americans like me are counting on our retirement savings for a secure financial future—and we've worked hard and made tough choices to grow our savings.

These accounts often involve complex financial decisions, so many of us use investment professionals for guidance.

It is unacceptable that current law permits some investment advisers to put their financial interests ahead of individual investors like me—and the worst part is that most people don't even know that their advisers are profiting at their expense.

That's why I support the Labor Department's proposal to require financial advisers to act solely in their clients' best interests when giving retirement investment advice. It's time to update the law so that it protects Americans like me, rather than Wall Street.

Sincerely,
