General Comment

I don't agree that disability should be retroactive, if people are currently receiving benefits they should continue to do so. benefits should be widespread to all that we able to work a job prior but are unable to do so after the procedure or the illness they had. My mom received disability after she had brain surgery in 2004 and was unable to continue working after attempting to go back. While her tumor was non malignant and will never come back she still suffers side effects. I would fear under this current roll back that she would have hers taken away and my family would be reduced to one teachers income (which as we all know weather YOU will admit it or not get paid way to little). I fear that this act to save money will in turn hurt more people that need help and only help the upper class (the people receiving this tax break). Lets Make America Great Again by growing the middle class and supporting hard working people that lost the ability to work although they were at one time working to improve there lives and in turn our economy.
