General Comment

There are millions of people who are too sick to be employed. My daughter is one. The new amendments to the ERISA RIN-1210-AB30, will help to make claims and appeals easier for the patients who need more financial support and who shouldn't be given a choice of living with a roof over their heads or becoming a homeless individual. The insurance companies are "for profit" and they are so happy to deny bona fide claims.

The majority of people who are disabled and who truly need the help of ERISA amendments must be considered on a fair basis in order to receive the financial aid they are desperate for. The current ERISA rules must be changed, or else I can see more homeless people on the streets.

Is this the way the United States takes care of its citizens? Most have been paying into private long term disability insurance, and it is a crime to find that the insurance companies are only too glad to deny the applications

This must be stopped.

Sincerely yours,
