General Comment

I understand that NARAL is urging its members to write the Department of Health and Human Services concerning the possible exemption of religious employers from providing contraceptive coverage for women employees. I would ask that the exemption be broadened to allow religious employers to practice their religion as written in the Bill of Rights, which would for many of the organizations, be a refusal to use contraceptives. To force them to pay for others to use contraceptives would be a violation of their right to freely exercise their religion. There are plenty of programs already in place that provide contraceptives for women who cannot afford it. This request for a removal of the exemption seems unnecessary and even coercive. Please act decisively to ensure that such religious liberties are not violated.
