General Comment

It's utterly ridiculous that religious organizations can be tax-exempt AND dictate what laws will apply to them. I strongly urge you to prohibit such organizations from not providing any health-care services whatsoever to a U.S. citizen based solely on religious doctrine.

Or else start collecting tax from these parasites. According to the Wall Street Journal, churches and religious organizations would contribute a minimum of $100 billion PER YEAR if they were taxed. That would certainly go a long way toward trimming the deficit.

Give Big Religion less power to bypass the laws that apply to the rest of the country, not more.
