General Comment

Health care needs to remain firmly separated from religion when it comes to policy making. I firmly support an individual's right to make their own decisions about reproductive health. When religious organizations start to make the decisions for all individuals, including those with different religious views, a line has been crossed. Please do not let out-dated ways of thinking about reproductive health prevent women from receiving the health care they deserve and need. It is morally and ethically wrong to let them hijack individual health decisions.
