General Comment

At a time that the people want to invest in socially, environmentally and climatically responsible companies, America and America's investors do not need the Trump Administration through the US. Department of Labor to tell money managers to only consider a financial return when deciding on which stocks, bonds and mutual funds to invest in. There are so many things that go into the decision to which companies an investor invests in. By insisting on money manager to only consider the financial return, you are taking away the first amendment opportunity for investors to make a statement, being it political, moral, social, environmental or being climatic responsible, to the administration and to the owners, C.E.Os of companies that investors did not invest in that many investors are not pleased with their plans.

There are many people, myself included, that want to invest in companies that do the right things, in companies that are led by good people that will not do anything for a buck. We the people do not need the Trump Administration to tell me which companies to invest in.

It is true that many people invest in companies as a way of trying to make more for themselves right now or for their future of retirement, but we each have other things we consider. Please do not remove the other things that money managers should consider when investing people's money. Investing money is a very personal thing to consider, please do not stop people from using their values when deciding whom to invest with.
