Screening Questions BY09

Provide a brief summary and justification for this investment, including a brief description of how this closes in part or in whole an identified agency performance gap:

DisabilityInfo.gov (DI.gov) is a "one stop" Web portal created by Presidential mandate that furthers the President's goal of reducing barriers for individuals with disabilities. Federal, State and local governments collaborate to provide timely, personalized public access to information about employment, housing, transportation, income support, health care, technology, and other programs for persons with disabilities. In addition to providing content, partners contribute through a variety of means including: linking to DI.gov, notifying communities of interest about the site, voluntarily providing financial contributions to fund operation of the site, etc. Prior to the implementation of this IT initiative, myriad government Web sites with duplicative information existed; however, there was no single Web address through which individuals could efficiently access collective disability-related resources. The benefit of having a consolidated online resource library was apparent, but the Federal government did not have an enterprise architecture in place to adequately address this need, so the Department of Labor partnered with private sector consultants to design DI.gov. Unlike its predecessors, the portal reduces data redundancy and maintenance costs by using a distributive content management model. It serves as a centralized repository of information with data control left to the content specialists who originate the data. The portal automatically redirects users to partners' Web sites through a content management system while allowing DOL to retain administrative capabilities. To date, ODEP has partnered with 22 Departments and Federal agencies, including the Departments of Labor, Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, Education, Homeland Security, Interior, Justice, Transportation, Treasury, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Veterans Affairs; the Equal Employment Opportunity and Federal Communications Commissions; Office of Personnel Management; Social Security, Small Business and General Services Administrations; the U.S. Access Board; the Corp. for National and Community Service; and the National Council on Disability to provide disability-related information to interested stakeholders to provide the portal's visitors timely citizen-centric, personalized and relevant information regardless of their geographic location. Site enhancements are envisioned for FY2009 to provide users with access to State and local information and services.
