General Comment

As a retired older senior with 35 years of Federal Government service, I really depend on third party financial advice to protect my retirement income investments. There have been too many questionable and adverse "financial adviser" incidents reported over the last several years to know who to trust, large banks included.

I depend on my representatives to continue to look after my best interest financial and otherwise after having served our country for so many years and giving up so much to do so. Of course, I would serve again if I was able as I've always loved being a public servant along with the satisfaction of representing the best of the US.
