General Comment

I'm opposed to any regulation that might preclude the buying and selling of options within my IRA account. I am not a high stakes trader but rather a soon to be retired investor who has learned methods to generate retirement income through options activity. On a rare occasion I will also use an options position to hedge a long term investment. I neither need nor want "protection" from advisors whether they be institutional or individual. Please don't take away my retirement income alternatives. Thank you for your consideration.
