General Comment

Dear Gentlemen,

I am an IRA holder and I do appreciate your efforts in this regulation to protect us consumers. However, I am also a knowledgeable investor and would like to be able to trade options in my self-directed IRA account. I am led to believe that this regulation will no longer permit that. If it does I request that this provision be changed so that it is possible for individual investors to be able to engage in trading options. While I understand that options trading can be risky it can also be used to provide income and reduce portfolio risk. Though I do read newsletters and educational material, the investment decisions and results are mine.

Please help correct abuses but please also leave us the liberty to manage our own accounts.
