General Comment

It would not be in the best interest of retirement investors to take away our rights to use options to grow and protect our portfolios. I have taken much time and effort and expense to learn how to properly use options to both grow and protect our portfolios. When used properly, options are a vital part of our portfolio strategies and we need every opportunity to grow our savings in spite of all the real worries out there.

Perhaps instead, you should consider limiting how computers can trade the market by fractions of cents and manipulate and steal from people.

You continually strip us of our rights one by one and create so many rules and regulations that it is a wonder anyone is able to save anything.

Please change this.
