to whom it may concern,

trading options in a ira account is a very good defense to help against loses of just owning a stock out right. taking time to learn and understand options just isn't all that difficult. options have had a great impact on my portfolio for the positive, they have helped my account grow and have reduced risk. never have i enjoyed investing so much with the proper option to accommodate the trade. just buying stocks and hope they will go up and keep paying dividends can set you back in a market down turn, to rule against trading options in an ira account would probably drive those right out of the market to invest elsewhere.
