In 2014, Guinea-Bissau made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict and participated in social programs that target child labor. However, children in Guinea-Bissau are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. The prohibitions on hazardous occupations and activities for children are not comprehensive. The Government has not provided law enforcement officials with appropriate training and resources to monitor, investigate, and prosecute cases of child labor. In addition, programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guinea-Bissau are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging.(1-9) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guinea-Bissau.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	47.3 (219,734)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	56.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	34.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		64.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2010, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(10)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006.(11)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cashews*(4, 8)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (5, 6)
Industry	Mining* (5)
Services	Domestic work (4, 6)
	Street work, including car washing and shoe shining (4, 6, 7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (1, 4, 7)
	Work in domestic service, street vending, begging, and agriculture,* each as a result of human trafficking (1-4, 6, 7, 9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In Guinea-Bissau, organized networks of former male trafficking victims affiliated with Koranic schools traffic young boys to Senegal or to a lesser extent, Mali and Guinea, where they are forced to beg for money.(6) Young boys are increasingly sent to cities within Guinea-Bissau for the same purpose.(1) It is tradition to send boys, known as talibés (in Wolof) and almudus (in Fula), away from their families to be educated by Koranic teachers, called marabouts. Although many teachers carry out the intended tradition of providing education, some instead force students to beg on the streets for money and food and to then surrender their earnings to their teachers.(3, 6) Teachers who force talibés/almudus to beg typically set a daily quota; if the students do not meet the quota,

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

they may be beaten.(3, 6) Research found that politicians in Guinea-Bissau do not confront Koranic teachers for trafficking boys because of the teachers' importance in the Muslim electorate.(2)

Boys are subjected to forced labor in street vending in Guinea-Bissau, and to forced labor in agriculture in the southern Senegalese cities of Kolda and Ziguinchor.(1, 2) Girls are subjected to forced labor in street vending and domestic service and subject to sex trafficking, including sex tourism, in Guinea and Senegal. (1)

Access to education is hindered by informal school fees, such as registration and monthly charges, which are common in public schools.(3, 12) Because of such fees, many parents remove their children from public schools and send them to Koranic schools.(3) While primary school children are often allowed to enroll in school without birth registration documents, secondary school children who lack these documents are denied access to school.(4) Additionally, children often leave school for weeks or months to work in the fields during the cashew harvest season.(4, 13)

During the reporting period, Guinea-Bissau underwent free and national elections after two years of transitional rule following the 2012 coup. The newly elected officials assumed power in June, limiting the Government's ability to undertake meaningful and significant action to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.(14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Guinea-Bissau has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2014, Guinea-Bissau ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.(15)

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 146 of the General Labor Law (16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 148 of the General Labor Law (16)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article 148 of the General Labor Law (16)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 106 of the Penal Code (17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 4 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking; 2009 Child Code (1, 18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 3-5 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking; articles 134 and 136 of the Penal Code (17, 18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 7 of Decree No. 2-B/93 on Narcotic Substances (19)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Law No. 3/80 and Decree No. 20/83 (20)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	17	Article 31 of Law No. 4/99 (15)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 6 of the Basic Education Law (21)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6 of the Basic Education Law (21)

The General Labor Law prohibits children under age 18 from conducting heavy work, work in unhealthy or dangerous conditions, and underground work; however, this legislation is not specific enough to facilitate enforcement.(16)

The use of children ages 16 to 18 for commercial sexual exploitation is not prohibited.(20) Additionally, although the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking prohibits the production of and benefit from pornography, it does not prohibit possession and distribution of child pornography.(18)

Research did not uncover a public version of the Child Code, Law No. 3/80, Decree No. 20/83, and Law No. 4/99 for review.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Justice and Ministry of Civil Service and Labor, in collaboration with the National Institute for Women and Children (INMC)	Enforce child labor legislation.(6)
Inspectorate General of Labor and Social Security	Monitor compliance with the provisions of the labor law, including child labor.(20)
Ministry of Interior's Public Order Police	Lead efforts to combat child trafficking.(6, 8)
Police and National Guard	Conduct child labor prevention and enforcement, including preventing traffickers from entering or exiting the country with children. With INMC and UNICEF, maintain data on child trafficking.(8, 22)

Law enforcement agencies in Guinea-Bissau did not take actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Information is not available on the number of labor inspectors employed in Guinea-Bissau during the reporting period. Moreover, labor inspectors lack appropriate training and resources to carry out child labor inspections.(14) In addition, research found no evidence that labor inspections occurred during the reporting period. According to the Government, there were no child labor violations found and no penalties were issued.(14) Referral mechanisms do not exist between labor enforcement and social welfare services.(8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, there was no information available on the number of investigators, investigations, prosecutions, or convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.(14) Although research found that one group of National Guard officers were trained on human trafficking issues during the reporting period, research did not find any evidence of child labor training for other criminal law enforcement officials.(9)

Referral mechanisms do not exist between the police and social welfare services.(8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Institute for Women and Children (INMC)	Coordinate and monitor NGOs and activities of other rehabilitation partners to defend and protect children.(6)
The Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Trafficking	Coordinate government efforts to combat human trafficking. Led by the INMC and includes representatives from the Ministries of Interior, Justice, Health, Education, and Transportation, as well as various NGOs.(22) The Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Trafficking did not meet during the reporting period.(9)
Ministry of Public Function, Work, and Modernization of the State (MFPTME)	Implement and coordinate actions to combat child labor in Guinea-Bissau. Comprised of the General Inspector of Public Administration; the General Inspector of Social Security; the General Directorate of Public Function; the General Directorate of Work, Employment, and Professional Training; and the National Institute of Social Security.(7)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Guinea-Bissau has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Community of Portuguese-Speaking Countries (CPLP) Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Establishes four target areas to combat child labor: (1) the exchange of information and experiences; (2) awareness-raising campaigns; (3) use of statistical methodologies to collect child labor data; and (4) technical cooperation and training.(23, 24)
National Action Plan on Trafficking	Aims to guide implementation of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking. The Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Trafficking did not make any progress on implementation of the action plan during the reporting period.(8)
UNDAF (2013–2017)	Strengthens the Government's capacity to ensure respect, promotion, and protection of social rights. Assists in the effective implementation of a national action plan against child labor within the framework of the Decent Work Country Program.(25)
Education for All Action Plan (2000–2015)*	Guides Guinea-Bissau's efforts to ensure universal access to free and compulsory education, and facilitate interagency coordination.(7, 26)
Political Letter for Educational Sector (2010–2020)*	Outlines actions to be developed for preschool, primary, and secondary school education; additional higher education; technical/professional training; and higher education and science studies.(7)
National Strategy for Social Protection of Children	Provides orientation to the Government and to national and international partners to adequately address social protection for vulnerable children, including orphans, children who are HIV positive, working children, and children who have been exploited or trafficked for financial gain.(7)
National Action Plan for Birth Registration*	Provides free birth registration to children.(12) The Ministry of Justice partners with civil society organizations to implement mobile birth registration units in rural and urban areas.(27)
National Strategy for Poverty Reduction (2011–2015)	Seeks to reduce poverty from 69.3 percent in 2010 to 59 percent by 2015, and extreme poverty from 33 percent in 2010 to 20 percent by 2015, by improving access to basic services and generating income and employment opportunities. Strengthens government coordination and mechanisms to protect at-risk children, including those engaged in child labor.(28)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Guinea-Bissau funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(29, 30)
Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in West Africa	$5.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 5-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC in collaboration with the Government of Guinea-Bissau.(31) Aimed to strengthen the institutional and legal environment, build local capacity, and improve the knowledge base around child labor through a national child labor survey, conducted with MFPTME.(7, 31)
UNICEF/UN Population Fund Program	Joint UNICEF/UN Population Fund program in collaboration with the Government, to prevent and combat child trafficking in the most disadvantaged communities through social safety nets, education, and other social protection mechanisms. Has rescued 317 talibés and provided them with psychosocial support and community reintegration assistance; has intercepted 139 children at risk of exploitation and human trafficking at border crossings and referred them to social services.(27)
Decent Work Country Program (2012–2015)	Targets the expansion of the social protection system, particularly for women in the informal economy and child victims of the worst forms of child labor. Specific objectives include adopting a national action plan against child labor and publishing results from the national survey on child labor.(13)
School Lunch Program*	Government, WFP, and U.S. Department of Agriculture-funded program implemented by International Partnership for Human Development that provides school lunches to more than 200,000 children.(14)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Research did not find whether results of the national child labor survey had been published.

Although Guinea-Bissau has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

In 2014, Guyana made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor, Human Services and Social Security held a forum on World Day Against Child Labor to discuss the implementation of systems to combat child labor and raise awareness throughout the country. The Ministerial Task Force on Trafficking in Persons released a 2014–2015 Action Plan and held a series of talks to educate communities on human trafficking. The Government continues to provide free uniforms and school meals to encourage school attendance. However, children in Guyana continue to engage in child labor in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Guyana's legislation does not fully protect children from the worst forms of child labor, and the labor inspectorate lacks sufficient funding and capacity to carry out inspections. The Government does not have a comprehensive policy to combat child labor and existing social programs do not fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guyana are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guyana.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	23.0 (44,787)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	94.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	23.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.3

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006-2007.(10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1-8, 12, 17)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Guyana, including girls as young as age 12, are involved in commercial sexual exploitation in Georgetown and in the country’s interior. There are reports of young girls being subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in mining communities as a result of human trafficking.(4-8, 18) In 2011, with assistance from the ILO, the Government conducted a Child Labor Rapid Assessment to better understand the nature of child labor in the country.(19) However, the results of that survey have not yet been released to the public.(4)

Although the Constitution of Guyana guarantees free education, some primary schools continue to charge fees and have even attempted to prevent children from attending school for failure to pay.(20, 21) In attempts to address this problem, the Ministry of Education has publicized guidance advising parents and educators that only the Parent Teacher Association has the authority to approve and collect fees from parents, and that no child may be excluded from school for non-payment.(21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Guyana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 2–3 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Article 17 of the Education Act (1, 22, 23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Part 1, Article 2 and Part 2, Article 3 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 17 and 41 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (22, 24)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations and/or Activities for Children	Yes		List of Hazardous Occupation and Processes in Guyana (11, 25-27)

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3 of the Combatting of Trafficking in Persons Act (29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 3 of the Protection of Children Act (30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 50 of the Protection of Children Act (8)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 18 of the Defense Act (31)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Articles 13 and 22 of the Education Act (23)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 27 of the Constitution (28)

* No conscription (8, 32)

Although the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act prohibits night work in industrial undertakings, and hazardous work for anyone under age 18, the law does not fully protect adolescents ages 16 and 17 from engaging in hazardous work. Part 1, Article 2 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act only prohibits night work for minors employed in industry and provides an exception allowing adolescents over age 16 to perform certain work requiring continuity through day and night, including gold mining reduction work and the production of iron, steel, glass, paper, and raw sugar, without provisions to ensure that their health, safety, and morals are fully protected or that they receive specific instruction or training in these activities.(22) Moreover, the List of Hazardous Occupation and Processes in Guyana only prohibits children under age 16 from engaging in hazardous activities.(11, 25-27)

While Article 351 of the Criminal Law Offences Act prohibits the selling, publishing, and exhibiting of obscene material, Guyanese law does not explicitly outlaw child pornography.(3, 12, 29, 33, 34) In October 2014, a state-owned newspaper published pornographic images of children; the Ministry of Labor, Human Services, and Social Security (MLHSSS) Web site stated that the law should be updated to address cybercrimes.(35)

Article 17 of the Education Act permits children under age 15 to be employed by their parents so long as they do not work on a school day during school hours. The Minister of Labor has indicated that he may propose legislation to further limit the amount of time children can spend working in family-owned businesses. (12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Human Services, and Social Security (MLHSSS)	Monitor and enforce child labor laws in collaboration with the Ministry of Education; Forestry Commission; Geology and Mines Commission; National Insurance Scheme; and the Guyana Police Force. The chief labor officer handles special investigations stemming from child labor complaints and oversees routine labor inspections.(12)
Guyana Police Force	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities.(12)

Law enforcement agencies in Guyana took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the MLHSSS employed 18 labor inspectors. Inspectors participated in various training programs related to child labor, including a child labor training workshop in Turin, Italy attended by two inspectors.(12) In commemoration of World Day Against Child Labor 2014, the MLHSSS hosted a forum to discuss the implementation of systems to combat child labor and raise awareness throughout the country.(12) 2014 funding levels for child labor prevention activities within the MLHSSS were unavailable. However, the MLHSSS stated that funds allocated were insufficient to carry out inspections and that there are sometimes delays in accessing the resources needed to carry out inspections in remote areas where law enforcement presence is low.(12) MLHSSS labor inspectors conducted 597 on-site labor inspections in 2014, but did not assess any fines or penalties, or charge any employers with violations related to child labor.(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Guyana Police Force works on criminal cases involving victims of the worst forms of child labor in consultation with the Ministry of Home Affairs; MLHSS; Ministry of Education; and the Ministry of Amerindian Affairs, depending on the circumstances of the cases.<sup>(4)</sup> The Child Advocacy Center (CAC), established by a MLHSS and NGO partnership, is working to implement child-sensitive investigation procedures, such as video recording of testimony to avoid multiple testimonies.<sup>(36)</sup> 2014 funding levels for programs to combat child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and use of children in illicit activities were unavailable.<sup>(12)</sup>

Between April 2014 and December 31, the Government investigated seven trafficking cases involving an unknown number of suspects and prosecuted four suspected traffickers. The number of cases involving children was unavailable.<sup>(26)</sup> In November 2014, a former police officer was sentenced to 4 years in prison for human trafficking and sexual exploitation of a 14-year-old girl and her sister. In a promising break from past practice in human trafficking related cases, the Chief Magistrate denied the offender's request for bail during the appeal process.<sup>(36, 37)</sup> In general, the Government's capacity to carry out prosecutions is limited. With only 33 justices and magistrates, the courts have a backlog of cases and more than a 2-year waiting period on all matters of law.<sup>(2, 4, 7, 8, 38)</sup> Furthermore, victims of human trafficking who are unidentified as such may be charged for committing crimes as a result of being subjected to human trafficking.<sup>(36)</sup>

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established the Commission on the Rights of the Child and the Ministerial Task Force on Combatting Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
Commission on the Rights of the Child	Protect and promote children's rights in accordance with the UN CRC, which includes addressing the worst forms of child labor. <sup>(4)</sup>
Ministerial Task Force on Combatting Trafficking in Persons	Report on the nature and magnitude of trafficking in persons in Guyana, document the Government's response, and carry out public education and prevention measures. <sup>(39)</sup> Meets regularly; chaired by the Minister of Home Affairs. <sup>(12)</sup>

The National Steering Committee on Child Labor previously recommended policies and programs to eliminate all forms of child labor; however, this coordinating body was dissolved in 2013 at the conclusion of the Tackle Child Labor through Education (TACKLE) project. Although the Government of Guyana re-established the National Tripartite Committee (NTC) to address national labor policies and the Commission on the Rights of the Child exists, research found no evidence that these bodies function as coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms.<sup>(12)</sup>

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Guyana has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Five-year Strategic Plan on the Rights of the Child (2012–2017)*	Protects and promotes children's rights in Guyana and advances the UN CRC. <sup>(4)</sup>
National Education Policy*	Aims to provide equal access to quality education for all children and eliminate barriers to education, especially for the poor. <sup>(41)</sup>
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014–2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through signatories' efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Guyana at the ILO's 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru (October 2014). <sup>(42, 43)</sup>

Policy	Description
Ministerial Taskforce on Trafficking in Persons 2014–2015 Action Plan†	Aims to prevent and raise awareness of human trafficking, provide direct assistance to victims, improve law enforcement's capacity to identify and respond to human trafficking, and strengthen interagency coordination and referral mechanisms.(36, 44)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In September 2014, Guyana participated in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. Held in Bridgetown, Barbados, these discussions promoted the exchange of information on policies and programs that seek to formalize the informal sector, uphold workers' rights, and prevent and eliminate child labor.(45, 46) Throughout the reporting period, government officials conducted a series of talks in schools and with community members to raise awareness of the causes and consequences of human trafficking, as well as of common recruitment techniques.(47)

According to the MLHSS, the Government of Guyana does not have a comprehensive written strategy for combating and responding to child labor.(12)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Guyana funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Trafficking Hotline‡	Government-funded hotline to assist trafficking victims, run by trained operators.(7)
Shelter for Domestic Violence Victims*‡	Government funded, NGO-run shelter that houses victims of domestic violence and human trafficking. Provides services, including psychological counseling and practical skills training.(8) Accommodates teenage girls under age 16 who are placed at the shelter at the request of the Government's Childcare and Protection Agency.(12) Receives $50,000 annually from the Government.(17)
School Meals and Uniforms*‡	Government program to provide hot meals to 16,000 students at schools in the interior, and transportation for students in several remote areas. All students in government-run schools, from nursery to secondary school, receive vouchers to purchase school uniforms, shoes, and backpacks.(2, 4, 41, 48-50)
Child Advocacy Center* (CAC)	MLHSS and NGO partnership, established in 2013, to provide services for abused children. MLHSS' Childcare and Protection Agency oversees and makes referrals to the center; funded by private sector donations.(36, 51)
Board of Industrial Training*	Attempts to deter early school dropouts by providing job skills to at-risk youth between ages 15 and 17 who may not be able to complete their formal education.(12)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Guyana.

In 2014, the Government engaged in efforts to fight trafficking in persons, including in mining areas; the MLHSS developed public awareness ads and posters, trained 100 representatives from civil society organizations, and conducted activities in 30 schools.(17, 52) However, the scope of Government programs to target the worst forms of child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(12) In particular, government resources provided to victims of human trafficking were inadequate in 2014.(17)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Guyana (Table 9).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Haiti made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law, which criminalizes all forms of human trafficking and contains provisions to prevent child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. The law also creates a National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons that provides legal protection and social assistance to victims of human trafficking. The Government also created the Child Protection Working Group to coordinate efforts on child protection, specifically for children in domestic work. Moreover, Haiti ratified UN CRC Optional Protocols on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and Children in Armed Conflict. However, children in Haiti are engaged in child labor, including in domestic work and agriculture. Haiti lacks a clear, easily applicable minimum age for domestic work. Limited resources for the systematic enforcement of child labor laws impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Social programs to combat child labor are also insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Haiti are engaged in child labor, including in domestic work and agriculture. (1-5) Child labor in agriculture occurs throughout the country but is most prevalent in the South and Artibonite regions. (3, 4, 6, 7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Haiti. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some parents unable to care for their children send them to residential care centers (orphanages), or to relatives or strangers expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling to the children in exchange for housework.(1, 2, 4, 7) In practice, some of these children receive care and an education, while many become domestic workers and are victims of labor exploitation and abuse.(2, 4, 7, 17)

Children are trafficked both internally and to the Dominican Republic.(7, 20) NGOs have reported that children crossing the Haiti-Dominican Republic border illegally are often accompanied by adults who are paid to pretend to be the children’s parents or guardians until they reach the Dominican Republic.(16, 21) Some of these children are reunited with relatives in the Dominican Republic, whereas others are illegally recruited by employers to engage in child labor, including in domestic work, agriculture or to work on the streets shining shoes, washing windows, and begging.(4, 22, 23) Many Haitian children’s births are not registered; the 2010 earthquake and ensuing infrastructure and paperwork destruction further exacerbated the lack of identity documentation.(4, 7, 16, 18) In Haiti, personal identification papers are required to enter into an employment contract, gain access to the justice system, and receive social protection services. The lack of personal identification papers makes it more difficult to protect children against Labor Code or Criminal Code violations, and for children to access social assistance services and educational programs from the Government.(24, 25)

The Constitution guarantees free primary education but, in practice, public schools charge fees for books, uniforms, and enrollment. There are also not enough public schools, and many teachers lack official teaching credentials.(1, 5, 26) As a result, most Haitian children who attend school go to private schools that charge tuition.(1, 18) Many others simply do not attend school, especially in rural areas.(1, 21) Out-of-school children are at increased risk of engaging in child labor or of becoming victims of human trafficking.(1, 4, 7, 18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Haiti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 32.1 and 33 of the 1987 Constitution (34)

* No conscription (35)

† No standing military (35)

Article 335 of the Labor Code sets the minimum age for contractual work at 15 in industrial, agricultural, and commercial establishments. The Labor Code does not apply to workers in non-contractual employment.(28) In addition, as the Labor Code does not include a definition of establishments, it is unclear whether family farms, where child labor is prevalent, are covered. Article 73 allows children age 14 to be contracted apprentices, although children ages 14 to 16 may not work as apprentices more than 25 hours a week.(28, 36) Article 340 provides penalties for employers who do not obtain work permits to employ children ages 15 to 18. However, the limited penalties, usually between $68 and $111, are not sufficient deterrents to protect children against labor exploitation.(6, 28, 29). Although there is not a specific penalty for employing underage children, article 513 of the Labor Code notes that a $105 fine may be applied to any violations without specific fines, which is not adequate to prevent violations.(28)

The Act on the Prohibition and Elimination of All Forms of Abuse, Violence, Ill Treatment, or Inhumane Treatment Against Children of 2003 (Act of 2003) effectively annulled Chapter 9 of the Labor Code that had set a minimum age for domestic work at age 12 and had provided for protections for domestic workers and fines in cases of violations.(28, 29) Although in its ratification of ILO C. 138 Haiti specified the minimum age of work to be 14, the Labor Code sets the minimum age for work at 15. Since the Act of 2003 annulled the minimum age provisions for domestic child workers, it is presently unclear whether the minimum age for domestic work is 14 or 15 years.(29, 36) The Government has drafted legislation that includes a provision that sets the minimum age for domestic work at 15 years, but that legislation has not been enacted.(37-39)

The Labor Code prohibits children ages 15 to 18 from working at night in industrial jobs and in establishments where alcohol is served. The Labor Code also contains prohibitions against minors performing work that is dangerous or harmful to their physical or moral health.(28) However, prohibitions related to hazardous work omit most sectors, including agriculture. A specific list of hazardous child labor activities covering sectors where children work has been developed but was not approved by Parliament during the reporting period.(33, 37) Even though the Act of 2003 also contains a general prohibition against work that harms the health, security, or morality of a child, it establishes no penalties for employing children in these activities.(29)

Articles 278–282 of the Penal Code prohibit prostitution and the corruption of minors. Research was inconclusive about whether this includes the use of children in pornographic performances. Research found no penalties in Haitian law for the use of children in other illicit activities, although such conduct is prohibited by the Act of 2003.(28, 29)

In June 2014, the Government adopted the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law, which criminalizes all forms of human trafficking, including the trafficking of children.(4, 5, 30, 40) The law prescribes penalties for those convicted of human trafficking of up to 15 years' imprisonment and a fine up to $33,000, a punishment commensurate with the penalties prescribed for other serious crimes, such as rape.(4, 30, 40)The law also provides for legal protection and social assistance to victims of human trafficking. Under the law, children identified as victims of human trafficking are to receive specialized assistance that addresses the particular needs of minors, including educational support and family reintegration services.(5, 30, 40)

In June 2014, the Government adopted the Responsible Parenthood Act, which establishes equal rights and access to protection services for all children, regardless of their parentage, thereby reducing the vulnerability of children born outside of legally recognized unions to the worst forms of child labor.(41-43)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MAST)	Enforce child protection and child labor laws. MAST labor inspectors investigate Labor Code infractions in the formal sector, including those regarding child labor. MAST's Institute of Social Welfare and Research (IBESR) agents perform inspections in compliance with the Child Protection Law of 2012, with a focus on child protection, and help enforce the Act of 2003.(36, 44-46) In cases of potential criminal violations, MAST labor inspectors and IBESR agents refer cases to juvenile courts for prosecution, while children receive services from IBESR.(6, 7, 14) Collaborate with the Brigade for the Protection of Minors (BPM) to investigate cases of crimes against children and apply the Penal Code to punish those responsible.(6, 14, 44)
Haitian National Police's (PNH) BPM	Lead anti-child trafficking efforts and investigate Penal Code infractions against children.(14, 16) Investigate reports of criminal child or forced labor, in conjunction with routine police patrols in public places where children can be in physical or moral danger and become victims of crime.(6, 44) BPM agents gather and submit information to judicial and/or social protection authorities to allow criminal prosecution of crimes against minors or to provide social protection and placement services for victims (as needed).(46)

Law enforcement agencies in Haiti took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, MAST employed a total of 50 labor inspectors, 11 of which specialize in child labor. MAST also employed 100 child labor technicians to conduct child labor inspections. Although the child labor technicians have similar responsibilities as labor inspectors, resource constraints prevent them from being permanent employees.(5) During the reporting period, some labor inspectors received training on the worst forms of child labor.(47) However, MAST inspectors generally lack sufficient resources, such as means of transportation, fuel, and appropriately equipped workplaces, to enforce the law adequately.(5, 6)

All MAST labor inspectors are required to monitor and ensure compliance with all Labor Code provisions during their inspections, including on child labor.(14, 16) Information is unavailable, however, on the number and quality of inspections, and on whether inspections are unannounced or announced. Additionally, when labor inspectors find cases of child labor, there is no formal referral mechanism to refer these children to the appropriate social services.(45) There have also been delays in issuing penalties for Labor Code violations, because labor inspectorates cannot directly fine employers and must transfer cases of violations to labor tribunals for review. The labor courts are often slow to act and delay the imposition and collection of fines.(45)

Haiti

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, IBESR had 150 employees working in all of Haiti's geographic departments; they included 48 child protection agents and approximately 20 social workers to handle protection cases, including those involving child labor.(6, 38) Each IBESR regional bureau includes a child protection section that employs five to seven agents.(6) Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of child protection agents is insufficient. The Government budgeted approximately $1.1 million to IBESR for child protection activities. In 2014, approximately 60 IBESR agents received training on child protection issues, including child labor.(38, 47) The remaining agents were not trained, in large part due to lack of funding.(4-6, 38, 44)

The number of child abuse violations reported in 2014 was 173, but it is unclear how many were child labor violations; information was not available on the number of those cases that were transferred to judicial authorities and ultimately punished with fines.(38) IBESR does not have a system with sufficient reach or standard protocols to conduct targeted inspections based on analysis of compliance data or patterns of complaints.(38, 46) Information is unavailable on the number and frequency of IBESR protection inspections, the number of working children identified as a result of those inspections, the cases transferred to judicial authorities, and the fines ultimately assessed. IBESR also manages the "133" hotline to receive complaints of situations requiring child protection.(4, 14, 16) However, the hotline functions exclusively in Port-au-Prince, which makes reporting cases to IBESR involving child exploitation more difficult in rural areas.(14) In addition, the number of calls related to child labor that were received during 2014 is unknown.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Haitian National Police's Brigade for the Protection of Minors (BPM) maintained a staff of 80 agents in 19 offices around the country, including four offices along the border with the Dominican Republic. Information on the training of BPM agents on child labor during 2014 is unavailable.(5, 48) Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of BPM agents is inadequate. Reports also indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to effectively conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.(5)

During 2014, BPM handled 953 criminal cases related to child abuse, although it is unclear how many involved child labor. BPM arrested and transferred a total of 600 suspected offenders to prosecutors.(49) Information about the results of those criminal investigations and about any possible convictions and sentences imposed on the perpetrators of these crimes, which are related to the worst forms of child labor, is unavailable.(49) In addition, BPM assisted a total of 542 children in 2014, of whom 474 were transferred to IBESR and 68 were returned to their parents; although information is not available on the number of those cases involving child labor.(49) BPM manages the "188" hotline to receive complaints of situations requiring child protection.(14) However, like the IBESR hotline, this hotline functions exclusively in Port-au-Prince, which makes reporting cases involving child exploitation more difficult in rural areas.(13, 44) In addition, the number of calls related to child exploitation that were received during 2014 is unknown.

Prosecutions of crimes related the worst forms of child labor are rare.(50) Local judges are not trained on Haitian criminal laws protecting children. Although some efforts were made during the reporting period to train law enforcement and judiciary officials in human trafficking, not all of them were trained.(6, 16, 44)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts to Eliminate Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Tripartite Commission for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Elaborate policies; approve programs; and coordinate, supervise, monitor, and evaluate efforts to combat child labor in Haiti.(17, 51, 52) Chaired by MAST and comprises officials from BPM, Citizen Protection Bureau, and the Ministries of Women's Affairs, Interior, Agriculture, Health, Justice, and Education. Also includes nongovernmental stakeholders such as NGOs, labor unions, international organizations, and social partners. (14, 52)
National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons*	Coordinate actions against trafficking in persons and guarantee the protection and rehabilitation of victims at the national level.(4, 30) Committee representatives for member ministries are appointed by presidential order. Chaired by IBESR and includes MAST, BPM, Citizen Protection Bureau, and the Ministries of Women's Affairs, Interior, Health, Foreign Affairs, Justice, and Education.(30, 40)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Protection Working Group*	Implement; coordinate; and monitor government efforts on child protection, including protection of child domestic workers. Chaired by IBESR and comprising officials from the Citizen Protection Bureau; BPM; MAST; and the Ministries of Justice, Women's Affairs, Health, Youth, and Education. (53, 54) Also includes nongovernmental stakeholders such as NGOs, international organizations, and social partners. In 2014, the Working Group conducted a comprehensive study on the prevalence of children in domestic work.(5, 54)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2014, the National Commission for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor met regularly to revise the draft List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children and the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor.(5, 52, 55) The National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons was created as a result of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law.(30, 40) However, the President did not appoint specific representatives from the various ministries represented in the Committee during the reporting period. Moreover, it is unclear how the Committee will provide rehabilitation services to victims of human trafficking.(40, 54)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Haiti has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategic Development Plan (PSDH)	Articulates four pillars—economic, social, territorial, and institutional—for sustained economic growth in Haiti, which includes the goal to end child labor. Built on the 2010 Action Plan for National Recovery and Development, which outlined key initiatives to address the structural causes of Haiti's underdevelopment in order to make Haiti an "emerging country" by 2030.(56-58) The 2010 Action Plan outlined plans to rebuild the country's infrastructure, economy, and state institutions. The Action Plan also mapped plans to improve the country's living standards by increasing employment; providing housing; addressing food insecurity; and providing access to basic services such as health care, education, water, and sanitation. The PSDH expands and provides further detail on these plans.(56, 58)
National Action Strategy for Education for All*	Aims to enroll 1.5 million students in school by 2016.(59) The Strategy is overseen by the Ministry of Education and supported by international donors. Subsidizes school fees for both public and private schools, provides school feeding programs, and offers teacher training to increase the number of qualified teachers.(59, 60)
ILO's 18th American Regional Meeting in Lima, Peru/Declaration of the Establishment of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor†	In October 2014, Haiti participated in the ILO's 18th American Regional Meeting in Lima, Peru, and signed the Declaration of the "Establishment of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor." The Regional Initiative was launched in 2013 at the Third Global Conference on Child Labor; the Declaration reemphasizes signatories' commitments to eradicate all child labor by 2020 as well as their recognition that child labor contributes to social and economic inequality.(61, 62)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During 2014, the Government of Haiti drafted a National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor; however, it is still awaiting promulgation by Presidential Decree.(52, 55)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Haiti funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8). The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government Child Shelter Census and National Child Protection Database*	Government programs to support child protection. IBESR implements the Government's regulatory framework for residential care centers (orphanages), collects information on vulnerable children, and tracks them through the National Child Protection Database.(6, 44)
Protecting the Rights of Children, Women, and Youth in Haiti (AKSE) (2012-2017)	$22.5 million USAID-funded, 5-year project that supports a partnership between the Government and the private sector to promote children's rights and child protection services. Supports efforts by governmental organizations; NGOs; and community-based organizations to assist victims of gender-based violence, human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, forced domestic work, and recruitment into criminal activity. Strengthens institutional capacity to prevent abuse and address challenges that at-risk children, youth, and women face.(63, 64)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. In Haiti, project aims to build the capacity of MAST and works to develop strategic policies to eliminate child labor and forced labor, as well as strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers.(65)
Protecting Children from Child Labor during the Early Recovery Phase (2011-2014)	$1 million USDOS and Government of Brazil-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to protect children from child labor during Haiti's earthquake recovery and reconstruction phases.(66) Part of a larger recovery program developed by the Government of Haiti, and supported by the UNDP and other UN and NGO partners to protect children, including by combating the worst forms of child labor and protecting the rights of adolescents to safe and decent work.(39)
Help People (Ede Pèp) Program*‡	Government social program that assists poor families through 16 government- implemented projects, with a focus on improving children's well-being.(44) Projects include the Ti Manman Cheri project, the Kore Etidyan project, and the Aba Grangou project, among others. Ti Manman Cheri project has provided 105,704 low-income mothers with monthly cash transfers for their children's tuition.(6) Kore Etidyan project provided financial assistance to students in 2013–2014.(44) Aba Grangou project, financed with $30 million from the Government of Venezuela, with additional financial support from the Government of Haiti, aims to cut the number of people suffering from hunger by reaching 2.2 million children through a school food program.(6, 67)
National Free Education Program*‡	Government program that aims to increase poor children's access to education by expanding free public school education. Includes school grants intended to eliminate school fees and accelerated learning programs for students who are behind in school.(64) In the 2013-2014 school year, the Government enrolled more than 1 million school-age children, a significant increase from the 200,000 children enrolled through this program in 2012-2013.(7, 13, 68)
Children's Summer Enrichment Program*	Office of the Citizen Protector program provided training and ran summer programs for children, with the support of the AKSE program. Assists approximately 100 children from Cité Soleil in Port-au-Prince by raising their awareness of Haiti's child protection institutional framework and mechanisms.(6, 13)
IBESR's National Week of the Child*	IBESR awareness-raising campaign funded by international NGOs to increase public understanding of children's rights and the barriers children face to claiming those rights. Engaged local and international NGOs on issues of forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation.(44, 69)
Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America (Phase 4) 2011-2015)	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 3-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor in 19 countries, including Haiti.(39)
Education and Monitoring Program for the Eradication of Child Labor (2012-2014)	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 3-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in Latin America, including Haiti. Includes the objective of developing information systems on the worst forms of child labor.(39)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Haiti.

Despite IBESR's efforts to collect information in the National Child Protection Database, it does not fully capture relevant information, including on the number of displaced street children and of children in domestic work.(14) Although Haiti has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Haiti (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Clarify the minimum age for domestic work and include meaningful penalties for employing children younger than the minimum age.	2009 – 2014

	Ensure that children engaged in child labor found during labor inspections receive appropriate social services.	2013 – 2014
	Strengthen IBESR by initiating routine or targeted child protection inspections, rather than performing inspections solely based on complaints received.	2013 – 2014
	Provide sufficient training and resources to increase the capacity of MAST, IBESR, BPM, and judiciary officials to effectively enforce child labor laws.	2013 – 2014
	Collect and make publicly available information on the number of criminal investigations, convictions, and sentences for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2014

Social Programs	Ensure that all children have access to free quality education by registering children at birth and allocating additional resources for education, including for building additional schools, subsidizing or defraying the cost of school, and providing teacher training, with a focus on educational opportunities in rural areas, where children are particularly vulnerable to trafficking and domestic work.	2009 – 2014
	Expand the National Child Protection Database, including by identifying displaced street children and children in domestic work.	2010 – 2014
	Assess the potential impact of existing social protection programs on child labor.	2010 – 2014
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in domestic work.	2010 – 2014

Honduras

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Honduras made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government signed the Alliance for Prosperity in the Northern Triangle, a development initiative that includes among its many goals increasing educational and vocational training opportunities for youth and combating human trafficking. The Government also created a Prosecutorial Task Force to investigate and prosecute human trafficking and the smuggling of unaccompanied migrant youth.

In addition, the Government created the Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF) to better monitor children's rights and implement national plans concerning children and their families. However, children in Honduras are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. The Government's procedures for enforcement of child labor laws do not sufficiently deter employers from using child labor, and both labor inspectors and criminal investigators lack the resources they need to effectively carry out their mandates.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Honduras are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (1-10) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Honduras.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	7.8 (153,536)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	84.6

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Forced begging (24, 29)
	Used in illicit activities, including by gangs in committing homicides, extortion, and selling and trafficking drugs (1, 24, 26, 28, 30)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2014, Honduras, like El Salvador and Guatemala, was a principal source of the high numbers of unaccompanied children from Central America migrating to the United States. Such children often lack economic and educational opportunities, and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and recruitment by gangs into illicit activities such as committing homicides and drug trafficking.(31, 32) Children often emigrate to escape violence and extortion by gangs, in addition to searching for economic opportunities and family reunification. Once en route, they are also vulnerable to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(31, 32)

In Honduras, children are sometimes trafficked from rural areas into commercial sexual exploitation in urban and tourist destinations, such as the Bay Islands, La Ceiba, San Pedro Sula, and Tegucigalpa. In addition, reports indicate that Honduran children are trafficked to other Central American countries and North America for commercial sexual exploitation.(28, 33)

In Honduras, access to education is often limited. Reports indicate that approximately 220,000 children between the ages of 5 and 17 lack access to the educational system in practice.(17) More than 75 percent of these children live in rural areas, where lack of funding for schools and, in many cases, lack of any secondary schools remain a problem.(17) In urban areas, access to education is often hindered by widespread violence and the recruitment of children into gangs. In addition, school completion rates are low; many children fail to complete primary education and, according to 2011 national data, only 50.5 percent of girls and 37.5 percent of boys completed secondary school.(9, 34)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Honduras has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 7, 13, and 21-23 of the Fundamental Law of Education; Article 36 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence; Article 171 of the Constitution (35, 37, 43)

The Constitution states that children 16 years old or younger may not work unless it is necessary to sustain his or her family and the work does not interfere with schooling. Honduran statutes build upon the protections in the Constitution.(35) The Labor Code and the Code on Childhood and Adolescence allow children ages 14 through 16 to work only with written parental consent and authorization from the Secretariat of Labor and Social Security (STSS).(37, 38) The Code on Childhood and Adolescence states that children ages 14 and 15 may work no more than four hours per day and that children ages 16 and 17 may work no more than 6 hours per day; children ages 16 and 17 can also receive special permission from the STSS to work in the evening if it does not affect their schooling.(7, 37, 38)

Article 120 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence and Article 15 of the Executive Agreement STSS-211-01 set the minimum age for work at 14 in all undertakings and without exception for their size.(36, 37) Article 32(1) of the Labor Code also prohibits children under the age of 14 from working. However, children working in agricultural and stock-raising undertakings that do not permanently employ more than 10 workers are not covered by the Labor Code's minimum age protections because Article 2 of the Labor Code excludes these undertakings from its scope.(38) The ILO has recommended that the Government harmonize the Labor Code with the Code on Childhood and Adolescence to ensure that no child under age 14 is permitted to work, including in agriculture and stock-raising.(45)

Article 8 of the Executive Agreement STSS-211-01 and Article 122 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence both prohibit children under age 18 from engaging in dangerous activities. However, Article 22 of the Executive Agreement STSS-211-01 and Article 122(v) of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence both allow the STSS to authorize minors ages 16 and 17 to perform dangerous activities if they have successfully completed relevant technical training at the National Institute of Vocational Training or a similar specialized technical institute and upon STSS verification that such minors are fully protected in these activities.(6, 36, 37)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Secretariat of Labor and Social Security (STSS)	Inspect labor conditions and enforce child labor laws.(9, 24)
Public Ministry's Office of the Special Prosecutor for Children (OSPC)	Prosecute crimes against children, including trafficking in children, hazardous labor, forced labor, and commercial sexual exploitation. Coordinate with Honduran National Police to investigate crimes and protect victims.(9, 24)
Public Ministry's Technical Criminal Investigative Agency (ATIC)*	Investigate and technically support criminal prosecutions conducted by the Public Ministry, including by the OSPC, such as human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child pornography.(10, 24)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Receive and prosecute cases of child trafficking through its Human Trafficking Unit.(9)
Prosecutorial Task Force to Combat Criminal Smuggling of Unaccompanied Children and Trafficking in Persons*	Investigate and prosecute criminal organizations that engage in the illegal smuggling of unaccompanied children and trafficking in persons. Created in 2014 and overseen by the Special Prosecutor Against Organized Crime and the Special Prosecutor for Children.(29, 46)
Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF)*	Formulate, coordinate, and implement national plans that concern children, adolescents, and their families; monitor children's rights according to national legislation and other statutes; and coordinate state efforts in conjunction with civil society and religious institutions to protect children.(47, 48) Created in 2014 through the Executive Decree PCM-27-2014 to replace the Honduran Institute for Children and the Family (INHFA), and overseen by the Secretariat of Development and Social Inclusion (SEDIS).(47, 48)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Law enforcement agencies in Honduras took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the STSS employed 141 inspectors to conduct all labor inspections, including inspections for child labor. This is the same number of inspectors employed in 2013.(10, 24) Reports indicate that this number of inspectors is inadequate to inspect for child labor violations nationwide.(24) The STSS reported that although labor inspectors did not receive training on child labor during the reporting period from either the Government or international organizations, inspectors were nevertheless prepared to conduct inspections for child labor.(10, 24)

In 2014, the STSS dedicated approximately $1.5 million to salaries of employees in the General Inspection Service.(10, 24) The STSS, labor union confederations, and human rights organizations have indicated that the level of funding and resources for the General Inspection Service, which includes limited office space, telephones, computers, vehicles, and fuel for vehicles, is insufficient for inspectors to adequately perform their responsibilities.(24)

The official process for labor inspections includes a preliminary visit, which may be unannounced, and through which inspectors identify and inform employers of violations but do not issue fines or citations.(7, 24) Employers have three days to remedy the identified violations.(7, 49) Inspectors then conduct a reinspection to determine whether the violations have been remediated. If violations are found during reinspection, inspectors recommend that the Inspector General issue penalties.(49) Reports indicate that if violations involving underage children or children working in hazardous conditions are found during a preliminary inspection, inspectors immediately report them to their supervisors.(50) This two-tiered inspection process puts an additional strain on the limited human and financial resources of the inspectorate and may not sufficiently deter employers from exploiting children in the workplace, particularly in remote, rural areas where conducting reinspections is especially challenging. Furthermore, a lack of publicly available information on the results of preliminary and subsequent inspections, including whether child labor violations are ultimately remedied, prevents a complete understanding of how effective this inspection system is in practice in enforcing child labor laws.(51)

Honduras

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the STSS conducted 3,694 comprehensive labor inspections and 7,164 complaint-driven inspections. This is a significant decrease from the 6,037 comprehensive inspections and the 11,506 complaint-driven inspections conducted in 2013.(24) The STSS and civil society partners have reported that the overall number of inspections is insufficient to address the scope of labor violations in the country, including child labor violations.(24) Moreover, most of the inspections take place in the urban areas of Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula. Inspections in rural areas and in indigenous communities, where hazardous activities in agriculture and fishing or diving are concentrated, have been insufficient to address the scope of the problem.(7, 8, 52) Complete information on the full range of economic sectors and localities in which inspections were carried out does not appear to be publicly available.

In 2014, the STSS reported that, in addition to the comprehensive labor inspections and complaint-driven inspections mentioned above, it conducted 170 child labor inspections in the commercial, agricultural, and mining sectors of Tegucigalpa, San Pedro Sula, La Ceiba, and Choluteca.(10, 24) Out of those inspections, inspectors found 60 child labor violations. In 59 of those cases, violations were corrected and a total of 58 children were removed from child labor; one case remains under investigation.(10, 24) This is a significant decrease from the 795 children the STSS reported removing from child labor in 2013; research could not determine the cause for this decline.(8) While the newly formed Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF) is responsible for ensuring that victims of child labor receive Government services, there does not appear to be a formal mechanism by which the STSS refers victims to the DINAF. It is also not known how many of the 58 rescued children received comprehensive services beyond medical evaluations provided for some children by the Occupational Health Service.(24) Information on the sanctions or fines imposed for child labor violations does not appear to be publicly available.

Although it is not known whether the number of working minors who are legally eligible to work has decreased, the STSS reported that it authorized 416 minors to work in 2014, compared with the 550 minors it authorized in 2013.(51)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Public Ministry's Office of the Special Prosecutor for Children (OSPC) coordinated investigations of criminal cases involving the worst forms of child labor. The OSPC employed two prosecutors to work with two Public Ministry analysts, three Public Ministry investigators, and six police officers to investigate crimes.(24) The OSPC reported that its operational budget for 2014 was approximately $173,000.(10) Both Government representatives and NGOs have stated that this budget is insufficient to fulfill OSPC's mandate. The OSPC reported that in 2014 more than 920 justice officials, including Public Ministry officials, youth, and civil society representatives, received training on the Law Against Trafficking in Persons and on procedures to prevent the re-victimization of trafficking survivors.(24)

In 2014, the OSPC reported that there were 18 trafficking in persons (TIP) cases under investigation, 9 TIP cases in the judicial process, and 1 TIP sentence issued. It also reported that there were 18 cases of commercial sexual exploitation under investigation, 3 cases of commercial sexual exploitation in the judicial process, and 5 sentences issued for crimes of commercial sexual exploitation.(24) Sentences ranged from 5 to 22 years in prison. However, the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions is not considered sufficient.(24) Victims of the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, are now referred to the DINAF for services.(24) Information on how many children were rescued from the worst forms of child labor and how many children received services in 2014 was not publicly available.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinate all matters related to child labor. Members include the STSS, the Supreme Court, the Social Security Administration, the Public Ministry, DINAF, and other Government entities.(51, 53, 54) Operates through a Technical Committee for the prevention and eradication of child labor and through an Executive Unit for Public Policy.(10, 24)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Institutional Commission Against Exploitation and Commercial Sex Trafficking (CICESCT)	Coordinate the efforts of Government institutions and civil society groups to combat commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking, including of children.(26, 53) Consists of representatives from 52 organizations, including several Government ministries and various NGOs.(26, 40, 53)
Unaccompanied Children Task Force (UAC Task Force)*	Provide for the safe repatriation of unaccompanied migrant children and coordinate their reintegration into their communities of origin. Led by the First Lady and comprised of officials from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; DINAF; the Ministry of Human Rights, Justice, Governance, and Decentralization; the Migration Institute; and the Public Ministry, with specialized services for returnees provided by the Ministries of Labor, Education, Health, and Development and Social Inclusion.(29, 51)
Ministry of Social Development	Coordinate social protection policies and the provision of services to vulnerable populations, including child and adolescent victims of violence, trafficking, and sexual and economic exploitation.(9)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2014, the Inter-Institutional Commission Against Exploitation and Commercial Sex Trafficking (CICESCT) was granted its first official budget and convened state authorities and civil society organizations to inaugurate a public awareness campaign to combat human trafficking.(24, 55-57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Honduras has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Second National Plan of Action to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor (NPAPECL II) (2008 – 2015)	Aims to prevent children from dropping out of school before they can legally work, to withdraw children who are currently engaged in the worst forms of child labor, and to ensure that the laws that protect children are enforced.(9, 53, 54) Establishes regional subcommittees in Choluteca, Comayagua, Danlí, El Progreso, Juticalpa, La Ceiba, and San Pedro Sula to oversee local implementation of NPAPECL II.(25) Specific components for 2012-2014 include working with the Municipal Association of Honduras (AMHON) to develop a checklist of indicators for certifying a municipality as free from child labor; working through the regional subcommittees to arrange for surprise, nighttime inspections in locations known for child labor; and building new educational centers in Santa Barbara, Ocotepeque, Copan, Lempira, Intibuca, and La Paz to provide more educational opportunities for at-risk children.(10, 24)
Roadmap for the Eradication of Child Labor in Honduras	Aims to improve coordination of the Government's responses to child labor issues. Works at the national, regional, and sub-regional levels and incorporates issues related to poverty, education, health, and social mobilization.(9, 53, 58) Implemented by the STSS.(9)
First Public Policy and National Action Plan on Human Rights	Aims to implement the Government's national and international human rights commitments, including those addressing child and forced labor. Approved by the President's Council of Ministers in January 2013.(24) In 2014, representatives from various ministries signed an Inter-Institutional Agreement of Cooperation regarding the implementation of this policy.(24)
National Strategy to Reduce Poverty (ERP) (2001 – 2015)	Seeks to reduce poverty nationwide by fostering economic development and assisting vulnerable populations. Prioritizes the elimination of child labor and increased school attendance, recognizing that both are necessary to national development.(59)
Alliance for Prosperity in the Northern Triangle†	Aims to create economic growth, increase educational and vocational training opportunities for youth, and reduce violence in Honduras, Guatemala, and El Salvador, in part to reduce the number of unaccompanied minors who leave Honduras and other Central American countries for the United States and who are vulnerable to human trafficking. Signed by the presidents of each country in 2014.(60-62)
Education for All Plan (2002 – 2015)	Seeks to increase school attendance to ensure that all Honduran children complete primary schooling, recognizing that a lack of schooling both contributes to and is a consequence of child labor.(59)
Executive Decrees PCM-011-2011; PCM 056-2011	Mandates that all Secretariats and their dependencies incorporate the issue of child labor elimination and prevention into their institutional strategic planning in accordance with the framework of the National Plan.(3, 4, 63-65)
Country Vision (2010 – 2038) and National Plan (2010 – 2022)	Guides national policy to reduce extreme poverty. Both Plans address education, the creation of social protection systems, and child labor.(7, 58, 66)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Honduras funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Targets 5,150 children and youth for improved educational and livelihood opportunities.(80)

Program	Description

Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America (Phase 4) (2011 – 2015)	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor in 19 countries, including Honduras.(84)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Honduras.

Although the Government of Honduras funds or participates in social programs that aim to eliminate child labor in street work, garbage dumps, commercial sexual exploitation, and the illegal recruitment of children into gang-related activities, research did not identify programs that specifically target children working in other dangerous activities, such as agriculture, fishing, mining, and domestic service.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Honduras (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age protections in the Labor Code extend to agricultural and stock-raising undertakings that do not permanently employ more than 10 workers to ensure consistency with the protections provided in the Code on Childhood and Adolescence.	2013 – 2014
Enforcement	Ensure adequate funding for the STSS, including resources for sufficient numbers of labor inspectors and inspections in areas where child labor is prevalent, such as rural areas and indigenous communities where children engage in hazardous activities in agriculture and fishing or diving.	2010 – 2014
	Ensure all labor inspectors receive training in child labor law enforcement issues.	2014
	Ensure that the two-tiered inspection system does not undermine effective child labor law enforcement and consider how the system may strain the limited resources of the inspectorate.	2011 – 2014
	Make information publicly available on all the sectors and localities in which inspections were carried out, as well as on the sanctions imposed for child labor violations.	2012 – 2014

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that there is a formal referral mechanism through which the DINAF receives child labor victims, designates a service provider, and monitors comprehensive services to victims of child labor, including its worst forms, and publicly report on the number of children rescued and the number of children who receive services.	2014
	Ensure that minors who work have authorization from the STSS.	2011 – 2014
	Ensure adequate funding is provided to the OSPC to effectively investigate and prosecute all crimes concerning the worst forms of child labor.	2014

In 2014, India made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government implemented its National Child Labor Project to assist child laborers through the provision of loans and alternative livelihoods, and several social protection programs to address the root causes of child labor. The Ministry of Home Affairs also launched an online human trafficking portal to coordinate efforts of state and national government agencies. However, children in India are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and manufacturing. Basic legal protections for children remain weak. Legislation to prohibit work by all children under the age of 14 and to proscribe hazardous work for children under age 18 was approved by the Prime Minister's Cabinet in 2012, but it has yet to be passed by Parliament.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in India are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and manufacturing. (1-6) The 2011 National Census data was released during the reporting period, and it shows that 4,353,247 children ages 5 to 14 work for 6 or more months during the year. (7, 8) The Census data also show that 3,875,234 children ages 5 to 14 work for 3 to 6 months during the year, while 1,900,182 children ages 5 to 14 work for less than 3 months during the year. (8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in India.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are forced to work as bonded laborers in brick kilns to pay off family debts owed to moneylenders and employers.(62) Children from India’s rural areas migrate for employment in industries, such as carpet making, spinning mills, and cottonseed production, where they are forced to work in hazardous environments for little or no pay.(3, 5, 6) Children are trafficked within India for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in domestic service.(19, 55, 63) Children from marginalized groups, such as low-caste Hindus, members of tribal communities, and religious minorities, are more likely to be victims of forced labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation.(56)

Children are reportedly recruited to serve as soldiers in Maoist armed groups in the states of Bihar, Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand, and Odisha.(46, 64) Children are reportedly recruited, and in some cases kidnapped, to fight in armed liberation groups in the northeastern states of Assam and Manipur.(64) There are also reports that children from Jammu and Kashmir are forcibly recruited by insurgent separatists and terrorist groups to launch attacks against the Indian Government.(56, 64)

Although the primary education completion rate is high in India, many children in India still face barriers to accessing education, particularly due to high rates of teacher absenteeism, lack of schools in remote and rural locations, and lack of drinking water and functioning toilets.(46, 65) Children from marginalized groups are sometimes subject to discrimination and harassment by their teachers.(66) Some schools reportedly refuse admission to such children.(46)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

India has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Section 3 of the Right of Children to Free and Compulsory Education Act (79)

In addition to national legislation, state governments also have the authority to pass legislation on child labor, including establishing a minimum age for work. The Delhi and Rajasthan State governments have passed legislation that makes 18 the minimum age for child labor.(13) However, the lack of a national minimum age for employment may increase the likelihood that young children may engage in child labor. The minimum age for hazardous work is also not consistent with international standards and may jeopardize the health and safety of young people ages 14 through 17. Additionally, children working for household-based enterprises do not have the same legal protections as those working in the formal sector.(67)

In 2012, legislation was proposed to prohibit work for children under the age of 14, proscribe hazardous work for children under age 18, and increase penalties for violations of the law related to child labor.(15, 81) The proposed legislation is pending approval by the Parliament.

There is no compulsory military service in India. The voluntary military age is set by military regulations and varies depending on the branch of the military, starting at 17 years.(78) However, the Government states that the minimum age to serve in combat is 18 years.(61, 82, 83)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Government Labor Inspectorates	Enforce state and national labor laws. Refer cases in violation of the law to state police.(15) Refer children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services.(69)
State and Local Police	Enforce laws pertaining to child labor and human trafficking.(84) Submit information to District Magistrates to determine if a case should be prosecuted in District Court.(85) Refer children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services.(69)
Anti-Human Trafficking Units (AHTUs)	Investigate cases of human trafficking. AHTUs have been established in 300 local police jurisdictions throughout India.(19) In 2014, the Karnataka State Police and International Justice Mission jointly published an AHTU training manual for law enforcement against bonded labor and human trafficking.
Vigilance Committees	Rescue, release, and rehabilitate bonded laborers and family members. Assembled at the district and sub-division levels by the District Magistrate.(70)
State Revenue Department	Issue release certificates to free bonded laborers and family members from debt.(86)
District Court Magistrates	Prosecute cases involving violations of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking laws in District Courts.(85)
Child Welfare Committees (CWCs)	Refer children in need of care and protection to welfare service providers under the Integrated Child Protection Scheme, including children involved in hazardous work, begging, and human trafficking, as well as those living on the streets.(87) CWCs have been established in 619 of India's 660 districts.(88)
Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA)	Provide guidance and training to all state governments on how to handle cases of child trafficking by outlining the specific steps that state police and officials must take when handling cases of child trafficking and forced child labor.(89)
Central Bureau of Investigation's Anti-Human Trafficking Unit	Investigate and prosecute cases involving the kidnapping and trafficking of women and children by professional gangs operating across multiple states. Take on cases by request or concurrence of state governments.(90, 91)

Law enforcement agencies in India took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Indian Constitution gives state governments primary responsibility for the enforcement of labor laws.(92, 93) While some state governments do report labor law enforcement data to the national Government, data on the number of labor inspectors and labor inspections conducted and the number of child labor law violations and penalties issued were not available for the reporting period.(94) Between April 1, 2013, and March 31, 2014, 64,050 child workers were rescued from hazardous work conditions and rehabilitated by the National Child Labor Program.(94)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the state governments of Tamil Nadu, Karnataka, and Maharashtra provided human trafficking and bonded labor training to law enforcement officials.(60) Research did not find information on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing the laws on the worst forms of child labor. The Indian Constitution gives state governments primary responsibility for the enforcement of criminal law, and the national Government does not systematically collect and make public data on investigators, trainings, and referrals across India's state and union territories.(93)

In 2013, the latest date for which data are available, the National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB) reported that there were 1,330 crimes reported, 805 charges filed, and 24 convictions involving the commercial sexual exploitation of minor girls that violated the Indian Penal Code. However, the NCRB did not provide disaggregated data for crimes reported, charges filed, and convictions for violations involving the Immoral Traffic Prevention Act, the Protection of Children from Sexual Offenses Act, and the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act.(95)

Despite the rescue and rehabilitation of child laborers, prosecutions have not always taken place. In cases for which child labor prosecutions were launched, resolution has been unduly delayed because the judicial system is backlogged and overburdened.(19) The penalties for employing children in violation of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act are imprisonment for 3 months to 1 year and/or fines ranging from $160 to $320. These penalties are insufficient to deter employers from employing children in the worst forms of child labor.(15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Central Monitoring Committee	Supervise, monitor, and evaluate actions of the National Child Labor Projects (NCLPs) across India. Some state governments maintain State-Level Monitoring Committees to monitor the NCLPs in their states.(96, 97)
Core Group on Child Labor	Coordinate the integration of social protection programs to reduce child labor. Composed of members from the Ministries of Human Resource Development, Women and Child Development, Housing and Urban Poverty Alleviation, Rural Development, Social Justice and Empowerment, Panchayati Raj (community government), and Home Affairs and chaired by the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE).(98)
MHA Anti-Human Trafficking Cell	Implement the Government's nationwide plan to combat human trafficking by coordinating with states to establish Anti-Human Trafficking Units and train thousands of officials to combat human trafficking.(15, 84) In 2014, MHA launched an online human trafficking portal to coordinate efforts of state and national government agencies. Stakeholders can access anti-human trafficking trainings, meetings, statistics, laws, and shelter information on the portal.(60)
National Human Rights Commission (NHRC)	Monitor implementation of the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act. Monitor state government actions to identify, release, and rehabilitate bonded laborers through quarterly submissions and through exploratory and investigative missions.(92, 99)
National Commission for the Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR)	Ensure that all laws, policies, programs, and administrative mechanisms are in accordance with the Constitutional protections for children and the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. Make inquiries into child rights violations and failure to properly implement laws relating to child protection.(15, 100) Commissions have been established in all 29 states and in 3 union territories, including Delhi.(100)

In 2014, the National Human Rights Commission issued notices to several state labor departments and District Magistrates to provide information on the status of rehabilitating rescued bonded laborers and their families in Telangana, Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka, Tamil Nadu, Uttar Pradesh, and Bihar.(101, 102)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of India has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on Child Labor	Describes actions for combating hazardous child labor for children under age 14, including implementing legislation and providing direct assistance to children.(103)
State Action Plans on Child Labor	Details state governments' activities and programs to eliminate child labor from hazardous industries. Only 9 of 29 state governments have child labor action plans, including Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Gujarat, Jharkhand, Karnataka, Maharashtra, Orissa, Tamil Nadu, and Telangana.(104-108)
National Policy for Children	Seeks to guide laws, policies, plans, and programs affecting children. Sets out the policy that state governments should take all necessary measures to track, rescue, and rehabilitate child laborers, trafficked children, and other vulnerable children, as well as ensure that out-of-school children can access education.(109)
National Skills Development Policy	Includes provisions for alternative education and skill development for child laborers and children removed from the worst forms of child labor.(110)
Twelfth 5-Year Plan (2012 – 2017)	Details how the Government should implement its social protection schemes, including provisions for education, health, and increased livelihood support.(111)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of India funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description and Objectives
National Child Labor Project (NCLP) Scheme‡	MOLE scheme that operates at the district level to identify working children under age 14, withdraw them from hazardous work, and provide them with education and vocational training. Sets up and administers NCLP schools, mainstreams children into formal education, and provides them with stipends, meals, and health checkups.(92)
Rehabilitation of Bonded Labor Scheme‡	MOLE program that rescues and rehabilitates child and adult bonded laborers. Provides rescued bonded laborer with approximately $312 and offers assistance through additional social protection schemes.(92) Supports the funding of surveys at the district level on the prevalence of bonded labor and the rehabilitation of bonded laborers identified through the surveys.(112)
Grants-in-Aid Scheme‡	MOLE scheme that funds NGOs to provide rehabilitation services to working children.(92)
Skill Development Initiative Scheme‡	MOLE scheme that provides vocational training programs and gives priority to children withdrawn from child labor.(113)
Rashtriya Swasthya Bima Yojna (RSBY) Health Insurance Scheme*‡	Government of India health insurance scheme for families below the poverty line. RSBY beneficiaries receive up to approximately $470 to cover the cost of hospitalization.(15, 114)
Integrated Child Protection Scheme (ICPS)‡	Ministry of Women and Child Development (MWCD) scheme that provides children who have been withdrawn from hazardous work, forced labor, and human trafficking with food and shelter in children's homes, shelter homes, and open shelters, as well as non-institutional care in foster homes and adoptive families. Provides rehabilitation and reintegration services to rescued children.(87)
Welfare of Working Children in Need of Care and Protection‡	MWCD scheme that provides non-formal education and vocational training to street children and working children living in urban areas not covered by MOLE schemes.(115) The number of projects funded by this scheme was reduced from 105 to 89, as this scheme is being phased out because ICPS provides similar services under its open shelter component.(87)
Anti-Trafficking Activities‡	Anti-trafficking activities operated by MWCD in collaboration with NGOs and state governments.(87) The Ujjawala scheme supports projects to help reintegrate, rehabilitate, and repatriate trafficking victims, including children. The Swadhar Greh scheme provides short-term housing and rehabilitation services, including vocational training for women and adolescent girls.(87)
Childline	MWCD-funded 24-hour toll-free emergency telephone service for children in distress. Childline India Foundation operates the telephone service in 278 cities across India and connects children in need of assistance with hospitals, child welfare committees, shelter homes, and police.(87)
Education for All Scheme ( Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan )‡	Ministry of Human Resource Development (MHRD) scheme that ensures the achievement of universal elementary education and addresses the education needs of 192 million children, including the provision of appropriate schooling facilities and qualified teachers.(116) Linked to NCLP scheme to ensure children's smooth transition from NCLP schools into the formal education system.(92)
Midday Meal Program‡	MHRD scheme that provides free lunch to more than 100 million children in more than 1 million government-run primary and upper primary schools, and provides lunch to NCLP students.(117)
National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme‡	Ministry of Rural Development (MRD) scheme that provides 100 days of employment to every rural adult living under the poverty line. Research has shown that this program can lead to a reduction in child labor and increased household expenditures on children's education.(118, 119)
National Rural Livelihoods Mission (NRLM)*‡	MRD scheme that enables poor households to access gainful self-employment and skilled wage employment opportunities through social mobilization, institutional building, financial inclusion, and livelihood promotion.(120) Under the NRLM, projects in 10 districts in 5 states identify and rehabilitate bonded laborers through the provision of loans and the promotion of alternative livelihoods.(121)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of India.

While state governments continued to conduct district-level surveys on bonded labor under the Bonded Labor Scheme, data were not received on the number of victims of bonded labor, including children, in surveyed districts.(92)

In 2014, Indonesia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor completed the third and final phase of the National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002–2022) by adopting the Roadmap for the Acceleration of Making Indonesia Free of Child Labor by 2022. Local governments issued regulations to harmonize local legislation with national legislation to reinforce the legal and regulatory framework regarding the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the Government allocated significant increases in funding to the Unconditional Cash Transfer program, which works to increase livelihoods of the poorest families, and the Block Grants for Schools program, which compensates schools for the loss of income incurred when waiving fees, thereby ensuring free education for poor and vulnerable children. However, children in Indonesia continue to engage in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service. The Government has yet to adopt the Domestic Worker's Protection Bill which would be a stronger source of protections for child domestic workers. In addition, enforcement of child labor laws remains a challenge due to a lack of labor inspectors and sufficient resources to carry out effective inspections, and the Government lacks comprehensive, publicly available data on child labor and trafficking investigations, violations, and convictions.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Indonesia are involved in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service.(1-3) Data from the 2013 Indonesian Child Profile, published by the Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Child Protection, indicate that there are 3.6 million working children between ages 10 to 17.(3) The report indicates that child labor is predominantly found in rural areas with 12.5 percent of children ages 10 to 17 working, in comparison to 5.9 percent in urban areas.(3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Indonesia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10-14 yrs.	3.7 (816,363)
Attending School (%)	10-14 yrs.	92.4
Combining Work and School (%)	10-14 yrs.	2.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Indonesia is primarily a source country for child trafficking. Children, mostly girls, are trafficked internally and abroad, where they are subject to commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude.(3, 31, 32, 35, 38). Girls are also trafficked internally for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation at mining operations in Jambi, Maluku, and Papua provinces, the Batam District, North Sulawesi, Riau Island, and West Papua provinces. In addition, children are trafficked for sex tourism in Bali and Riau Island.(36)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Indonesia has ratified ILO Convention 138 and established the minimum age for employment at 15 years old.(39) The Government has since enacted Law No. 13/2003, Manpower Act, which permits children ages 13-15 to engage in light work and prohibits entrepreneurs from employing children under 18.(40)

In 2014, the Government enacted the Law on Regional Government No. 23/2014 which shifts the authority for labor inspections from local governments to the Ministry of Labor (MoL).(3) Local governments often lack funding and capacity to carry out effective inspections. The Government passed Law No. 35/2014, which amended Law No. 23/2002, the Child Protection Act, to impose stronger penalties for perpetrators of narcotics crimes involving children.(3, 49) The amendment also includes special provisions for restitution to children who are victims of trafficking crimes.(50)

During the reporting period, the former President of Indonesia issued Presidential Instruction No. 5/2014 on a National Movement Against Sexual Crimes Against Children.(50) This Instruction directs all stakeholders, government, society, and business sectors to coordinate their efforts to prevent sexual exploitation of children. It also mandates that all relevant ministries prioritize child protection in policy development and implementation.(50)

Local governments also issued several provincial-, district-, and municipal-level regulations related to child protection. The East Java provincial government issued Provincial Regulation No. 2/2014 on the Implementation of Child Protections, which strengthens existing provisions to combat child exploitation.(3) The Bali provincial government issued Provincial Regulation No. 6/2014 on Child Protection. At the local level, the District of Demak, Central Java, issued District Regulation No. 3/2014 on the Implementation of Child Protection Measures. These regulations harmonize local legislation with national legislation to reinforce the legal and regulatory framework on the worst forms of child labor.(3)

A draft of the Domestic Workers Protection Bill continued to be deliberated upon by the legislature in 2014.(51, 52) The adoption of the Domestic Workers Protection Bill would include enforceable penalties for violations, thus ensuring stronger protections for child domestic workers than under the Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Child Protection's current guidelines on child domestic workers. The current guidelines do not include penalties enforceable by law, and are intended for implementation by all stakeholders of child domestic worker issues with enforcement by local governments which often lack the necessary resources.(53-55)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MoL) Directorate General of Labor Development and Supervision	Monitor and enforce child labor laws.(3) Provide information to employers on child labor laws and regulations, report child labor violations, and work with law enforcement officials to prosecute any child labor violations.(7) Refer children found during inspections to the local Women’s Empowerment and Family Planning Body and/or Integrated Service Center for Empowering Women and Children to access appropriate social services.(3)
MoL Directorate of Norms Supervision of Women and Child Workers	Receive child labor complaints via telephone, fax, or e-mail.(3)
Ministry of Women’s Empowerment and Child Protection (MOWECP)	Operate a children’s helpline to receive complaints of children in need of protection, including child workers. Created in 2006, 17 regions have established the service in their areas.(3)
National Police, including Women and Children’s Service Unit	Conduct inspections and raids as well as make arrests in response to all crimes, including those related to forced child labor and trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and children participating in illicit activities.(11, 15)

Law enforcement agencies in Indonesia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor (MoL) employed 2,400 labor inspectors to oversee an estimated 225,000 businesses and workplaces.(3) Of those amounts, 1,460 are general labor inspectors, 593 are civil servant investigators, and 363 are specialized inspectors tasked with enforcing the labor laws, including laws related to child labor, in specific industries such as medicine or engineering.(55) Government, ILO, and NGO officials have stated that there are not enough labor inspectors to address the child labor problem in Indonesia adequately, and that labor inspectors are not provided with sufficient resources to carry out labor inspections effectively.(3, 11, 56)

Due to insufficient personnel and resources, the MoL often encourages NGOs to take action directly with families and employers, as well as perform spot inspections on homes and workplaces to determine whether school-aged children are at school. In 2014, the MoL reached out to 1,500 NGOs from across Indonesia to partner with local MoL offices in more than 100 districts and municipalities.(3) From this program, the MoL reports that 15,000 children were removed from workplaces and were either returned to their homes, or, in cases in which families were unable or unwilling to support the child in transitioning back to school, placed in shelters run by the Ministry of Social Affairs for up to 3 months to prepare them for reintegration into schools.(3, 57)

The MoL reports that it provides 4 months of training— including instruction on issues related to the worst forms of child labor—to labor inspectors, and 2 months of training to civil servant investigators. The ILO also provides labor inspectors with a guidebook that addresses the worst forms of child labor.(3, 11) In 2014, the MoL allocated $29.9 million to the Directorate General of Labor Development and Supervision for enforcement of labor laws, including child labor, at the federal level. In addition, each province and district head allocates a portion of funds for labor inspections and investigations.(3, 55) With the recentralization of the labor inspection function, it is unclear whether local governments will continue to allocate budgetary resources for labor inspection.(3)

MoL inspectors have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections in all sectors; however, NGOs report that inspectors sometimes inform companies in advance of their inspection, either out of deference to powerful local economic interests or because of corruption.(57) In addition, although inspectors have inspection authority in the informal sector, in practice, fewer inspections are conducted, particularly in the area of domestic work. Inspectors often rely on NGOs and social workers to inform them of child labor violations in private homes or farms.(3)

Research did not find the number of child labor inspections conducted, the number of violations identified, or the number of children assisted as a result of inspections because the Government does not have a system in place to disaggregate data.(3, 11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, 1,093 police investigators and 593 MoL civilian investigators were deployed nationwide to focus on criminal investigations pertaining to crimes against children and women.(3) Child labor cases are handled by members of special police units who focus exclusively on crimes against women and children. The Indonesian National Police provides training to members of these special units on the prevention and investigation of cases involving the worst forms of child labor.(3)

Despite the Government's attention to anti-trafficking, the National Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons reports indicate that the police and prosecutors are often unfamiliar with anti-trafficking legislation and are unclear about their role, especially in remote regions.(57, 58)

No data are available regarding the complete number of investigations or prosecutions, violations, or convictions involving the worst forms of child labor because the Government does not have a system in place to disaggregate data.(3, 57)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Action Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinate and monitor policy and program efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor at the national level. Worked to promote children's rights, supervised the recruitment of workers, and assisted regional governments to budget for regional action committees.(7, 11) Chaired by the MoL, with members from 13 ministries, law enforcement institutions, trade unions, NGOs, and employers' associations.(7, 11, 59) Dissolved in 2014 pursuant to the adoption of the Roadmap for the Acceleration of Making Indonesia Free of Child Labor by 2022, with functions reverted to the MoL as the authoritative body to enforce laws regarding child labor.(3, 57)
Provincial-level and District-level Child Labor Committees	Coordinate and monitor policy and program efforts, and develop action plans to eliminate the worst forms of child labor at the local level.(60)
Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Child Protection (MOWECP)	Coordinate the development and implementation of policies related to child protection.(61)
National Commission on Child Protection	Disseminate information related to child protection, including child labor legislation; receive complaints, including those that pertain to child labor; monitor and evaluate the implementation of child protection efforts; and provide feedback on child protection to the President of Indonesia.(61)
National Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate the country's anti-trafficking efforts, including child trafficking.(3) Chaired by the Ministry for People's Welfare with direction from the MOWECP. Coordinates the Task Force across 19 ministries and 5 state agencies.(50) Includes six working groups that develop action plans and budgets for programs to address trafficking in persons.(62)
Subtask Force on the Prevention of Child Participation in Trafficking in Persons	Organize regular coordination meetings, provide technical training, and produce publications on the prevention of trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Ministry of National Education and Culture's Director for Early Childhood, Nonformal, and Informal Education with members from six ministries, the police, JARAK (network of NGOs working for the elimination of child labor), the Indonesian Journalists Alliance, and the National Commission on Child Protection.(3)
Provincial and District Task Forces for the Prevention and Handling of Human Trafficking	Coordinate prevention and anti-trafficking efforts at the local level.(36) In 2014, increased to 31 of 34 provinces and 166 of 497 districts/towns.(50)

In December 2014, the Government dissolved the National Action Committee (NAC) for the Elimination of the Worst forms of Child Labor pursuant to the adoption of the Roadmap for the Acceleration of Making Indonesia Free of Child Labor by 2022, and reverted the functions of the NAC to the MoL.(57) The responsibilities of the NAC were established under the Manpower Act, Law No. 13/2003, so the legal mandate remains in place and must be assumed by the MoL.(3) At the time of this report, it is unclear whether the Minister's authority to coordinate former members of the NAC will continue as before. To date, the National Action Committee had established 33 provincial action committees and 162 district and city-level action committees, and it is not yet clear what impact the national-level changes will have on these local committees.(3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Indonesia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002–2022)	Provides the Government’s policy framework for the elimination of child labor in three operational phases.(11, 51, 63, 64) In 2014, adopted the Roadmap for the Acceleration of Making Indonesia Free of Child Labor by 2022, the third and final phase of the action plan.(3) Includes the December 2014 inauguration of a child labor-free industrial zone in Makassar, Sulawesi, as the first step in implementing the Roadmap.(3)
National Plan of Action on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons and Sexual Exploitation of Children (2009–2014)	Provides coordination of policies and promotes the prevention of trafficking in persons, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Developed by the Ministry of Women’s Empowerment and Child Protection.(51, 65)
National Midterm Development Plan (2010–2014)	Incorporates various child labor prevention and reduction strategies into these development agendas.(66)
UN Partnership for Development Framework (2011–2015)	Tracks the Government’s ability to implement the NAP effectively by measuring the number of district action committees and action plans formed, of provincial child labor monitoring systems developed, and of district child labor committees with representation from youth and/or women.(67)

Prior to the decision to dissolve the NAC, the NAC adopted the Roadmap for the Acceleration of Making Indonesia Free of Child Labor by 2022.(3) The Roadmap is the third phase of the Government’s National Plan of Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002–2022) and focuses on mainstreaming the elimination of child labor into broader national policies. The immediate impact of the dissolution of the NAC has yet to be determined; however the new Minister of Labor has made a public commitment to fulfill the Roadmap.(3)

In 2014, the Government included the Roadmap in its 2014–2016 midterm development plan as part of a comprehensive policy to address child labor. The plan commits to reviewing regulations on child workers, expediting the elimination and prevention of the worst forms of child labor, and mainstreaming child labor issues into all relevant sectors of the Government.(3) While a division of labor has not yet been established, the midterm development plan includes a concrete timeline (2014–2016), and the Roadmap’s target for completion is 2022.(3)

The National Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons notes that some Provincial and District Task Forces to Combat Trafficking in Persons lack plans of action on the elimination of trafficking of women and children.(58)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Indonesia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Reducing Child Labor to Support the Family Hope Program ( Pengurangan Pekerja Anak- Program Keluarga Harapan )‡	MoL program that removes child laborers ages 7 to 15 from their workplaces and temporarily places them for 4 months in shelters where they receive counseling, remedial education for reentry into school, and financial assistance of $21 each month.(3, 11, 68) In 2014, the program worked across all provinces and almost 400 districts. The program reached its target of 15,000 child laborers removed from work during the year, and the MoL reports that 90 percent of those children returned to school.(3, 51) Funding for the program rose from $5 million to $8.3 million during the reporting period.(3)
Family Hope Program ( Program Keluarga Harapan )‡	Ministry of Social Affairs (MOSA)-managed conditional cash transfer program, which provides services for child laborers who have dropped out of school. Targets the poorest 5 percent of the population and provides cash assistance to families that meet the education criteria, including school enrollment and attendance.(11, 69-71) In 2014, assisted 3,000,000 households.(55) Research shows that conditional cash transfer programs have slightly reduced child labor in Indonesia.(72)
Child Social Welfare Program ( Program Kesejahteraan Sosial Anak )‡	MOSA-administered conditional cash transfer program, which provides conditional cash transfers to street children, abandoned children and infants, children facing criminal charges, and children with disabilities Also provides grants to implementing partners for the reintegration of trafficked children.(3, 11, 15)

Program	Description
Family Welfare Card ( Kartu Keluarga Sejahtera )*‡	Ministry of People's Welfare initiative to integrate all cash-transfer assistance programs under one government program. Provides a bank account to each household in the assistance programs, including the fund for children's education and health.(3)
West Java Street Children Program‡	West Java provincial government program to assist street children.(63)
Bandung Municipality Street Children Program‡	Municipality of Bandung program to assist street children.(63)
Promote: Decent Work for Domestic Workers to End Child Domestic Labor	USDOL-funded 4-year, $5 million program implemented by ILO-IPEC. Expands legal protections for child domestic workers; builds capacity of domestic worker organizations to address child domestic work; and promotes national and regional knowledge, awareness, and research of domestic service.(29)
Eliminate Exploitive Child Labor Through Education and Economic Development (EXCEED)	USDOL-funded 4 year, $5.5 million program implemented by Save the Children that provided educational services to children at risk of, or engaging in, exploitative labor in domestic service, commercial agriculture, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation by providing educational services.(10) Withdrew 6,130 children and prevented 5,293 children from exploitative labor and supported one city to develop a district action plan to become a 'child friendly' city.(10)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor, improve the evidence base on child labor and forced labor through data collection and research, and strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers in Indonesia. In 2014, completed a sectoral survey on child labor in tin mining.(73)
Social Protection Cards ( Kartu Perlindungan Sosial )*‡	Government program that provides a social protection card in order for beneficiaries to access social protection programs, such as the unconditional cash transfer program, rice for the poor program, and education scholarships program.(69) For the 2013 – 2014 program, 15.5 million households received social protection cards.(55)
Unconditional Cash Transfer Program ( Bantuan Langsung Semetara Masyarakat )*‡	Government unconditional cash transfer program to increase livelihoods of the poorest families.(69) In 2014, received an approved budget of $744 million up from $96 million the previous year.(55)
Rice for the Poor ( Raskin )*‡	Government subsidized food program that provides rice for the poorest 25 percent of households.(69)
Social Security Organizing Body for Health ( BPJS Kesehatan ), plus Regional Health Security ( Jamkesda )*	Government national health program that incorporates several existing health programs and provides health services to more than 100 million Indonesians. Incorporates an existing health program which pays the health fees of 86 million poor Indonesians. Additionally, assists millions more poor Indonesians through their local governments.(54, 69, 74, 75)
Education Scholarship ( Bantuan Siswa Miskin )*‡	Government primary, junior secondary, and senior secondary scholarship program that targets the poorest 25 percent of the population.(59, 66, 69, 70) Research has shown that educational cash transfers and related assistance programs significantly decrease the time children spend on income-generating activities in Indonesia. Households receiving educational transfers, scholarships, and assistance were also found to spend more on educational goods.(76)
Block Grants for Schools ( Bantuan Operasional Sekolah )*‡	Government block grant program that compensates schools for the loss of income incurred when waiving fees, thereby ensuring free education for poor and vulnerable children in primary, junior secondary, and senior secondary schools. (11, 77) Began implementation of grants to senior secondary and senior vocation schools during the reporting period in order to accelerate progress towards the government's goal of a 97% high school attendance rate in 2020.(3) In 2014, assistance provided to senior high schools increased from $83.3 million to $803 million.(3)
Minimum Service Standards of Basic Education Program (2011–2014)*	Aims to improve access to and quality of public education by limiting the distance that elementary and junior secondary schools can be located from children's households, specifying minimum allowable teacher-student ratios, and identifying minimum teacher education qualifications.(55)
UNICEF Country Program (2011–2015)*	Program that supports the Government of Indonesia in realizing the rights of children, paying particular attention to vulnerable children. Contributes to priorities identified in the National Plan of Action for Children and Women and the Government's National Midterm Development Plan (2010–2014). (78)

Child Trafficking Services	MOSA and other government program that provides services for child victims of trafficking.(58)

* The impact of these programs on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Indonesia.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Iraq made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs and UNICEF conducted a study on child labor. The Council of Representatives drafted a revised labor law and a child protection law. However, children are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. The compulsory education age is lower than the minimum age for work and child labor laws are not sufficiently enforced. The Government continues to lack programs that target children in relevant worst forms of child labor, particularly those used by armed groups.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Iraq are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Iraq.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	5.3 (454,330)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	75.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	4.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		66.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2007, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(8)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2011.(9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of trafficking (14, 20, 22-26)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or extent of the problem is unknown.

Iraq

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Iraq witnessed large-scale violence committed by various armed groups, most importantly the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL), leading to approximately 12,000 fatalities and 22,000 injuries.(27) According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), as of July 2014, Iraq hosted more than 250,000 refugees, including Syrian refugees. By the end of 2014, there were also over two million internally displaced persons (IDPs).(28)

ISIL recruited children and used them in combat operations, including as suicide bombers, military training, patrolling the streets, and manning checkpoints. UN and media reporting indicate that armed groups involved in the conflict with ISIL recruited and used children to patrol with convoys and man checkpoints.(1-6, 29) There was evidence ISIL forcibly recruited children.(21, 30, 31) Some were used in combat and support roles, including human shields, suicide bombers, bomb makers, informants, or were forced to donate blood to treat injured ISIL fighters.(6, 28) Research found no evidence of the Government recruiting children into the Iraqi armed forces.(7)

Throughout the country, some girls are subject to commercial sexual exploitation by their families, who seek financial gain through temporary marriages.(20, 26) This practice involves a dowry paid to the girl's family, and an agreement to dissolve the marriage after a predetermined length of time.(20) In the Kurdistan Region, child commercial sexual exploitation was reported to be on the rise due to a large increase in Syrian refugees.(18) ISIL fighters subjected girls, primarily from the Yezidi community but also other ethnic and religious groups, to commercial sexual exploitation, forced domestic work or other forms of forced labor in Iraq and Syria.(21, 32, 33)

Children faced barriers to access to education because of attacks on schools, including the targeting of teachers and school personnel, and the use of schools as shelters by IDPs and as detention centers by ISIL.(22, 23, 34, 35) Only 35 percent of Syrian refugee children were enrolled in formal education, leaving nearly 38,000 children without any form of education.(36) Enrollment rates decreased drastically for refugee children past the age of 12.(35) For these refugees, the majority of whom live in the Kurdistan Region, access to education was limited because of school-related costs such as transportation and uniforms, security concerns, and the language of instruction due to insufficient number of Arabic-language schools in the Kurdistan Region.(37)

The Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) and UNICEF conducted a study on children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in Baghdad, Basrah, Kirkuk, Najaf, and Ninewa provinces. The results of the study are expected to be published in 2015.(28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Iraq has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 90.1 of the Labor Law (38)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 90.2 and 91.1 of the Labor Law (38)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article 91.2 of the Labor Law (38); Ministry of Labor's Instruction 19 of 1987 (25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 91.3(a) and 91.4 of the Labor Law (38); Articles 1 and 6 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking (39)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 91.3(a) and 91.4 of the Labor Law (38); Articles 1 and 6 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking (39)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 91.3(b) and 91.4 of the Labor Law (38); Paragraphs 399 and 403 of the Penal Code (40)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 91.3(c) and 91.4 of the Labor Law (38); Articles 1 and 6 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking (39)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Section 6(2) of the CPA Order 22 (41)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	12	Article 11.1 of the Education Law (42, 43)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 34.2 of the Constitution (44)

* No conscription.(41)

The Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) needs to endorse laws passed by the Government of Iraq after 1991 for such laws to enter into force in the Kurdistan Region, which is comprised of the provinces of Erbil, Dahuk, and Sulaymaniyah.(21, 45) Because the KRG has not endorsed the Law to Combat Human Trafficking, this law is not enforced in the Kurdistan Region.(7, 46)

In 2014, two committees of the Council of Representatives drafted a revised labor law and a child protection law, neither of which was passed.(7) Likewise, the KRG Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs submitted a new draft labor law to the KRG Council of Ministers; however, the draft law has not been adopted.(7)

Article 91.3(a) of the Labor Law, as amended by the Coalition Provisional Authority Order 89, prohibits the forced use of children in armed conflict. Article 97 sets the penalty of short-term imprisonment and a fine for infringements of the Labor Law.(38) These penalties are insufficient for the recruitment of children for armed conflict. Article 91.4 of the Labor Law augments these by asserting that violations will be prosecuted in accordance with the Penal Code.(38) However, the Penal Code does not specify a penalty for forced use of children in armed conflicts.(40) The ILO CEACR has requested that the Government ensure that penalties for compulsory recruitment of children for armed conflict are sufficient.(25)

In the Kurdistan Region, under Articles 6 and 10 of the KRG Ministry of Education Law, children are required to attend school for 9 years, which is typically up to around age 15.(46) However, under Articles 8 and 11 of the Iraqi Education Law, children are required to attend school for 6 years, which is typically up to around age 12.(42, 43) This standard makes children ages 12 to 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work either.

In addition, Iraqi law does not provide for circumstances in which children ages 13-15 may engage in light work.(38) The ILO CEACR has requested that the Government regulate the employment of children 13-15 in light work, noting the significant percentage of children that age working already.(47)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Enforce child labor laws and regulations through its Child Labor Unit.(12) Conduct research on child labor through its Childhood Welfare Authority.(47)
Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs	Enforce child labor laws and regulations in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region. KRG Ministry of Interior's Police units play a supporting role in the daily activities of the Ministry.(28)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Enforce criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. Collaborate with MOLSA, the Iraqi Industries Federation, and the Confederation of Trade Unions to conduct inspection campaigns.(12, 25) Maintain a hotline for victims of human trafficking that is routed directly to MOI's Anti-Trafficking Department.(20) In 2014, the hotline received 41 calls. It is unknown how many of these calls involved children.(18)

Law enforcement agencies in Iraq took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, the KRG does not enforce some of the central Government's laws, including the Law to Combat Human Trafficking.(7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, MOLSA employed two to three inspectors for each of the 15 provinces, excluding the 3 provinces in the Kurdistan Region and areas under ISIL control. These inspectors were assigned to investigate child labor, as well as all other labor violations.(12) This number is insufficient to enforce child labor laws. The number of inspectors in the KRG Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs is not known.(28) Due to the conflict with ISIL, MOLSA did not have access to large areas of the country, including Anbar and Ninewa Provinces.(7) While updated statistics were not available from MOLSA, there were ongoing cases against factory owners in which child labor occurred, particularly in brick factories.(7) Research did not find information on the number of inspections, violations, penalties, referral mechanisms between enforcement and social services agencies, training of inspectors, type and quality of inspections, and whether unannounced inspections were permitted.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Interior employed two to three inspectors for each of the 15 provinces, excluding the 3 provinces in the Kurdistan Region and areas under ISIL control.(7) These inspectors were in charge of investigating criminal violations of labor laws including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Although in 2012 the Government compiled and reported statistics on trafficking in persons for the first time, it has not made this information publicly available since then.(7) The Ministry of Interior conducted training within the Ministry on human trafficking to raise awareness, increase sensitivity and assist victim identification. Likewise, officials of the KRG Ministry of Interior and the KRG Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs participated in training sessions on human trafficking, victim identification and assistance.(21) The Ministry of Interior reported its initiation of 18 prosecutions related to human trafficking in 2014; it is not known how many of these cases involved child victims or whether these cases were concluded.(21) Research did not find information on the number of investigations, convictions, the implementation of penalties and referral mechanisms between law enforcement and social welfare services.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-ministerial Committee on Child Labor	Coordinate overall government efforts to combat child labor, research policies regarding child labor, and design and manage projects. Members include MOLSA, MOI, and the Ministries of Health, Education, and Foreign Affairs.(7)
Joint Committee on Street Children	Coordinate the implementation of measures for removing and rehabilitating street children. Members include MOLSA and MOI.(25)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Central Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Oversee implementation of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking and serve as the national coordinating body on trafficking in persons. Includes representatives from the Ministries of Health, Finance, Migration and Displacement, Labor and Social Affairs, Human Rights, and Justice, the State Ministry for Women's Affairs, the Council of Ministers Secretariat, the High Commission on Human Rights, as well as a representative from the KRG's Ministry of Interior.(48) In 2014, the Committee held training for its staff on countering human trafficking and shelter management.(18)

A source indicates that there was not sufficient coordination between the central Government and the KRG, including in the Central Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons.(18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Iraq has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Coalition Provisional Authority Order No. 89	Lays out government policy to address the worst forms of child labor. Order 89 calls for programs to be designed to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor, to provide direct assistance for the removal of children in these labor situations, and to ensure the children have access to basic education.(38)
National Action Plan on Human Rights (NAP)	Establishes goals and discrete steps to be taken in specific timeframes to promote and protect human rights as a core value, in line with recommendations adopted by Iraq following its submission to the Universal Periodic Review. NAP recognizes Iraq's obligations to international conventions, including the CRC and its optional protocols and ILO C.182 and C.138 with respect to child labor, and states that such conventions may be applied in Iraqi courts.(49) Sets an action plan to fulfill the right to education in Iraq, including through financial incentives to families living in poverty, to encourage completion of primary- and secondary-level education.(49)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Iraq funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Rights Hotline*	Operated by the KRG to receive calls for advice or complaints with respect to children's rights.(12) In 2014, the hotline received approximately 4-5 calls per day related to human trafficking. The number of cases related to children is not known.(18)
Informal Education*‡	Government-supported informal education systems, including evening school programs and fast education mode, to encourage children ages 12 to 18 years who have dropped out of school to continue their education.(25)
Programs for Vulnerable Populations*	Programs funded by international organizations and foreign donors, including the United States, to address the needs of vulnerable populations, such as internally displaced persons (IDPs) and refugees, at risk of the worst forms of child labor.(7)
Shelters for Human Trafficking victims‡	MOLSA-operated shelter for human trafficking victims, including children involved in the worst forms of child labor in Baghdad; other facilities are located in Basrah, Ninewa, and Kirkuk provinces.(7) The KRG operated three shelters for female victims of human trafficking and violence.(18)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Iraq.

In the reporting period, the child rights hotline received approximately 100 calls per month.(7)

Research found no evidence of specific programs targeting children engaged in street work, commercial sexual exploitation, or brickmaking, as well as children involved in armed conflict.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Iraq (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Increase penalties for the use of children in armed conflict to deter violations.	2013 – 2014
	Regulate the employment of children aged 13-15 in light work.	2014
	Increase the age of compulsory schooling to at least 15, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2014
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors and ensure adequate funding in order to effectively enforce legal protections against child labor, including its worst forms, in all provinces where children are known to work, including in the Kurdistan Region.	2011 – 2014
	Collect and make data publicly available information on the number of labor inspections, violations and penalties, and criminal investigations, prosecutions, convictions as well as referral mechanisms between law enforcement and social welfare services, the implementation of penalties, training of inspectors, the type and quality of inspections, and whether unannounced labor inspections are permitted.	2013 – 2014
Coordination	Ensure sufficient coordination between the central Government and the Kurdistan Regional Government, particularly in efforts to combat human trafficking.	2014
Social Programs	Ensure universal access to education, including for refugee and internally displaced children.	2013 – 2014
	Assess the impact that existing social programs have on child labor.	2011 – 2014
	Implement programs to address relevant child labor sectors in Iraq, such as street work, commercial sexual exploitation, and brickmaking.	2010 – 2014
	Implement programs to demobilize and reintegrate children engaged in armed groups.	2009 – 2014

Jamaica

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Jamaica made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government conducted three assessments on child labor and released the Jamaica Multiple Cluster Survey report, which included information about children in the areas of health, education, child protection, and HIV/AIDS. Jamaica also expanded the Program for Advancement through Health and Education, a conditional cash transfer program, to reach more vulnerable families. In addition, the Government updated the curriculum for new police recruits by including an anti-trafficking training module. However, children in Jamaica are engaged in child labor, including in street work and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Although the Government has laws prohibiting the use of children in some illicit activities, it does not prohibit the use of children for drug trafficking and production. In addition, programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Jamaica are engaged in child labor, including in street work. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jamaica.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	5.4 (28,298)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	99.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	6.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		88.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2004, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2011.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming activities,* activities unknown (1, 4, 7)
	Fishing activities,* including diving* and cleaning fish* (8)
Industry	Construction,*† activities unknown (4)
	Garbage scavenging,* items include scrap metal* (4, 9)
Services	Work in shops and markets* (4, 8)
	Domestic work* (1, 4, 10, 11)
	Street work, including as beggars and vendors (1, 2, 4, 12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4, 7, 12, 13)
	Used in the production of pornography* (14, 15)
	Forced labor in domestic work* and street vending (1, 3, 4, 12)
	Used in Illicit activities, including executing financial scams and serving as drug and gun couriers* (16-18)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are commercially sexually exploited in Jamaica's resort areas. In Jamaica, trafficking victims are often young girls from low-income and single-parent homes.(2, 4, 10, 11) In 2014, the Government conducted three assessments in the township of May Pen and the capital of the Parish of Clarendon, which indicated that children were vulnerable to child labor in street, domestic, and agricultural work. The Government also reported that it conducted assessments in Savanna La Mar, Westmoreland, and Hanover.(19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Jamaica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription (34)

The Child Care and Protection Act establishes the minimum age for employment at 15, but allows children ages 13 to 14 to engage in light work; however, the list of occupations and hours considered light work has not been finalized by the Government. The draft list includes hair braiding, clerical work, newspaper vending, supermarket

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

packing, and household chores.(20, 21, 36) Although the Government has some prohibitions on hazardous work for children in specific industries, in 2010 the Government drafted the Occupational Safety and Health (OSH) Act that would introduce a comprehensive list of prohibitions on hazardous work for children but it has yet to be adopted. The list under review by Parliament would specify 45 hazardous occupations prohibited for children under age 18.(1, 30, 31, 36). The draft statute identifies those hazardous occupations to include, among others, fishing at sea, working on construction sites, participating in the production of pornography, and engaging in illicit activities that involve weapons. If adopted, the OSH Act will increase current fines for employers who illegally utilize child labor and will enable labor inspectors to access formerly prohibited workplace environments in the informal economic sector.(1, 2, 36)Although the Child Care and Protection Act prohibits the use of children in selling alcohol and tobacco, it does not prohibit the use of children in other illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.(37)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) –Child Labor Unit and the Occupation Safety Health Department	Enforce and administer child labor laws, including monitoring of violations under related laws, in the formal economy.(1, 2, 38) Develop flow charts to facilitate multiple-agency responses. Share information with all other agencies involved in child labor issues.(38)
Child Development Agency (CDA)	Enforce child labor laws, monitor related violations, and oversee efforts to address the problem.(1, 2)
Office of the Children's Advocate (OCA)	Enforce and protect children's rights, including maintaining records of complaints, conducting investigations, providing legal services for children, and educating the public on the office's services.(3, 39)
Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF)	Enforce criminal laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Includes a Trafficking in Persons Unit that investigates and prosecutes cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(2, 14, 40)
Centre for the Investigation of Sexual Offences and Child Abuse	Investigate and prosecute sexual offenses and child abuse. Work in victim rehabilitation and conduct public education programs. Branch of the JCF.(41)
Office of the Children's Registry (OCR)	Receive complaints about child abuse, including criminal violations of child labor laws.(3, 39)

Law enforcement agencies in Jamaica took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security's (MLSS) Child Labor Unit (CLU) is responsible for child labor enforcement monitoring and inspection efforts. The Office of the Children's Advocate (OCA) serves as a monitoring and public awareness-raising agency, while the Office of the Children's Registry (OCR) is the repository for mandatory reports of child abuse.(8) The MLSS's Occupation Safety and Health Department (OSHD) employed 16 inspectors assigned to investigate labor issues, including child labor.(8) Evidence indicates that the number of inspectors is inadequate. Additionally, the OSHD is charged with referring child labor issues to the relevant child advocacy agencies, such as the CLU and the Child Development Agency (CDA). The OSHD reported that it conducted child labor training for labor inspectors and police officers throughout the year.(8) For fiscal year 2013 – 2014, the Government allocated approximately $41,619,000 to the OSHD, and between January and June of 2014, the OSHD carried out 464 inspections.(19) No cases of child labor were found and, as a result, no penalties or fines were issued. Inspections are performed in the formal sector, in factories, building sites, docks, and ships and not in the informal sector in urban and rural communities .(19) In addition, the labor inspectorate does not grant authority to labor inspectors to issue fines.(8)

The Government has established a system to file and respond to complaints about child labor. The OCR maintains a 24-hour hotline to report offenses against children, including child labor, child abuse, and human trafficking.<sup>(8)</sup> During the year, the OCR published the Child Abuse Report Statistical Bulletin, which included data on the percentage of children who were reported as victims of physical and sexual abuse, trafficking, and child labor.<sup>(42, 43)</sup> Advertisements for the hotline and public service announcements were broadcasted across country in high trafficked areas and occasionally on television and radio. Reports received by the hotline are relayed to the Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF) and the CDA.<sup>(8)</sup> The high visibility of this hotline has increased awareness of labor exploitation issues and services available to victims.<sup>(8)</sup>

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, research found no information on the number of criminal investigators responsible for addressing the worst forms of child labor. The JCF has the independent authority to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Both the MLSS and the JCF collaborate with the CDA, the OCA, and the OCR to carry out investigations and report violations.<sup>(8)</sup> During the reporting period, the JCF developed an anti-trafficking module for the curriculum used to train new police recruits; the module was designed by the lead human trafficking investigator.<sup>(8)</sup> In 2014, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs reported that there were two child labor prosecutions, but both cases are still pending. As a result, there were no convictions during the year.<sup>(8)</sup>

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MLSS's Program for the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinate the Government's child labor policies and programs and identify gaps in legislation across ministries. The MLSS collaborates with the other ministries such as the Ministry of Youth and Culture (OCA, OCR, CDA), the Ministry of Justice (National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons), and the Ministry of National Security to address the legislative gaps. <sup>(3, 19, 42)</sup>
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons	Facilitate information exchanges between government agencies and external stakeholders, and create momentum for counter-trafficking efforts. Oversee the implementation of the country's National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking. <sup>(31, 40)</sup> Led by the Ministry of Justice and includes representatives from the Ministries of National Security and Foreign Affairs, the JCF, and the Department of the Public Prosecutor, as well as representatives from the Ministries of Health, Education, Labor, and Youth and Culture. <sup>(2, 3)</sup> Meets regularly with the JCF, Director of Public Prosecutions, and other ministries. <sup>(38)</sup> Held a 4-day training seminar in January 2014. <sup>(44)</sup>

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Jamaica has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action on Child Labor	Aims to strengthen current legislative frameworks to address all forms of child labor, specifically focusing on children engaged in domestic service, prostitution, forced labor, and hazardous work within the agricultural and fishing industries. Identifies four primary objectives: to collect current and reliable data on child labor, to establish public awareness and sensitize the Jamaican people to the problem, to improve the Labor Ministry's personnel capacity to be able to identify child laborers, and to work with trade unions, as well as the Jamaican Employers' Federation, to raise awareness among employees. <sup>(2, 18, 45)</sup>
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking (2012 – 2015)	Targets law enforcement officials to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children, conducts public awareness campaigns, and implements outreach programs. <sup>(46)</sup>

Policy	Description
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through signatories' efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013) and signed by Jamaica at the ILO's 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru (October 2014).(47-49)
Compulsory Education Policy*	Ensures that all children between the ages of 3 and 18 have access to a learning institution or vocational training program. Includes the Career Advancement Program, which provides 16- to 18-year-olds with two additional years of schooling upon completion of the 11th grade.(50)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Government has drafted a National Policy on Child Labor in an effort to implement the National Plan of Action on Child Labor and address some of the current challenges, but it continues to be under review.(27, 31, 42) Implementation of the current National Plan of Action of Child Labor has faced difficulties, including the lack of adequate resources and an institutional tracking system.(18, 51) The Government drafted a Plan of Action to Combat Human Trafficking in Persons (2012 – 2015) in an effort to strengthen current priority areas and ensure that shelters are available to victims. The Plan is implemented by the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons; the task force meets regularly and implements the Plan through three subcommittees: the Prevention, Protection, and Prosecution subcommittees.(31, 42, 52) In 2014, the Government published a new standard operating procedure (SOP) to guide local law enforcement officers on counter-trafficking initiatives, including child labor trafficking victims. The SOP covers topics including use of special investigating techniques, arrests and presentation of human trafficking cases before the courts, and assessment of local intelligence.(8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Jamaica funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Tackling Child Labor through Education Project (2008 – 2015)	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states.(53) The Government worked closely with NGOs RISE and Children First to provide direct support to children engaging and at risk of engaging in child labor activities.(54, 55)
Program for Advancement through Health and Education (PATH)‡	Funded by the Government of Jamaica and the World Bank, the conditional cash transfer program helps to reduce child labor by requiring participants to attend school at least 85 percent of the academic days within a month.(56-58) Recent evaluations of the PATH program reveal that children at the primary and secondary levels are not likely to reach that target.(19, 58) In 2014, the Government expanded the program and serviced 330,000 beneficiaries. The education compliance rate was 81 percent boys and 85.5 percent girls at the primary level and 73.5 percent for boys and 80 percent for girls at the secondary level.(8) PATH beneficiaries received a total of $70 million in payments throughout 2014, an increase of 15 percent over the previous year.(8)
Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development	USDOL-funded research project implemented by the ILO to increase the knowledge base around child labor by collecting new data, analyzing existing data, and building capacity to conduct research in this area.(59)
Shelters‡	Government shelters to aid women and children trafficking victims.(2, 27, 30, 46)

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Jamaica.

Although Jamaica has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem of children working in domestic work and street work, as well as in the worst forms of child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Jamaica (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Enact the new Occupational Safety and Health Act that would specify prohibitions on hazardous occupations and activities for children under age 18.	2009 – 2014
	Determine the specific light work activities and hours permissible for children between the ages of 13 to 14 to facilitate enforcement.	2014
	Ensure that legislation prohibits the use of children for all illicit activities, including drug trafficking and production.	2009 – 2014
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor in order to provide coverage of the workforce.	2014
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted in not just the formal sector (factories, building sites, docks, and ships) but also in the informal sector in urban and rural communities.	2014
	Ensure that labor inspectors have authority to issue fines and determine penalties for child labor law violations to facilitate enforcement of child labor laws.	2014
	Ensure information is made publicly available on the number of criminal investigators employed to address the worst forms of child labor.	2014
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Compulsory Education Policy.	2014
	Ensure that the National Plan of Action of Child Labor is implemented by providing adequate resources and an institutional tracking system.	2010 – 2014
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children who are working, especially for children working in agriculture and construction.	2013 – 2014
	Expand programs that assist children in the worst forms of child labor and develop programs to aid children in domestic labor and street work.	2013 – 2014

59. ILO-IPEC. Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP). Geneva; 2014.

In 2014, Jordan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted a new law that expands protection for child laborers including children engaged in street work and garbage collection; worked with international organizations to improve access to education for Jordanian and Syrian refugee children; increased the number of work inspections, including inspection campaigns in targeted sectors; and finalized a child labor monitoring system in cooperation with the ILO. However, children in Jordan are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work as a result of human trafficking. Child labor remains prevalent among Syrian refugee children, whose access to education is limited. In addition, programs to combat the worst forms of child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Jordan are engaged in child labor, including agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service as a result of human trafficking. (1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jordan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	0.8 (11,255)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	94.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	0.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		92.8

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Commercial sexual exploitation* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (22, 23)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

According to a Ministry of Labor official, about half of the child laborers identified by the Ministry of Labor during inspections in 2014 were Syrian refugee children.(14) Many of these children are the sole breadwinners of their families.(10, 24) Syrian refugee boys work primarily in retail and services, while some Syrian girls work in domestic service and agriculture.(10) Reports state that Syrian refugee children peddle goods inside and outside the Za’atari refugee camp; there are also increasing numbers of Syrian refugee children begging in Jordanian cities.(19) The influx of refugees has led to economic distress in the country; as a result, more Jordanian families have put their children to work as well.(25)

In places where the refugee population is steadily increasing, such as in the northern regions and in Amman, primary schools are not able to meet the increasing demand and lack sufficient space and teaching staff to accommodate all school-aged children.(26) Syrian children living in host communities are granted access to Jordanian public schools. However, as of January 2015, only 129,000 of the 220,000 school-aged Syrians in Jordan were enrolled in schools, and approximately 90,000 had no access to formal education due to space constraints and other issues.(27) The Ministry of Education has initiated a split school day (two shifts) at almost 100 schools, for Jordanian children to attend in the morning and Syrian children to attend in the afternoon in order to accommodate the large number of students. Yet, more children drop out of school and more children attending double-shifted schools have time to work, even while remaining enrolled in school, because school hours are shorter.(14)

There is limited evidence of temporary marriage of Syrian refugee girls as a form of commercial sexual exploitation.(9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Jordan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In November 2014, Jordan adopted a Child Law that expanded the definition of “juveniles in need of protection” to include child laborers, such as street vendors and garbage collectors. The Child Law gave the Ministry of Social Development the responsibility for protecting children in these categories and for establishing a new Child Labor Unit under the law to work in coordination with the Ministry of Labor’s Child Labor Unit.(14)

The Ministry of Labor developed a draft manual to simplify the categorization of hazardous work in the Ministerial Order of 2011.(37)

The Government does not accept volunteers to join the armed forces.(38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)’s Child Labor Unit	Coordinate the Government’s child labor programs, direct child labor inspections, and ensure the enforcement of child labor laws.(2, 17)
MOL’s Directorate of Labor Affairs and Inspection	Carry out labor inspections, including child labor violations.(1, 39) Identify cases of child labor through work site visits and refer to relevant services. Register child labor cases into a National Child Labor Database, which allows ministries to monitor and track children as they are identified and referred to services.(40) Maintains a hotline to receive labor-related complaints, including complaints of child labor.(41)
Minister of Justice’s (MOJ) Public Security Directorate (PSD), Criminal Investigation Unit (CID)	Investigate and prosecute human trafficking crimes and violations of Jordan’s Penal Code, including allegations of the worst forms of child labor.(14)
MOJ’s National Screening Team	Identify victims of human trafficking.(19)
Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit of MOL and PSD	Investigate cases of human trafficking and forced labor, refer cases for prosecution, and coordinate with foreign embassies to identify victims of human trafficking and repatriate workers.(19)
Municipal Business License Inspectorate	Inspect the business licenses of businesses in the municipality.(37)

Law enforcement agencies in Jordan took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor employed 160 labor inspectors who were responsible for enforcing all aspects of the Labor Code, including child labor. The Ministry of Labor's Child Labor Unit held 11 training sessions, in which 139 labor inspectors were trained on child labor issues.(14) However, due to frequent rotations of Government employees within and among ministries, currently, only 80 of the 160 labor inspectors have been trained on child labor issues. The Child Labor Unit has identified the need for updating the training modules to include information on child labor among Syrian refugees.(14) The lack of resources prevented the Ministry of Labor's Directorate of Labor Affairs and Inspection from inspecting the agricultural sector.(14)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor's Child Labor Unit carried out 1,426 inspections, including unannounced visits, as well as inspections in response to complaints, and identified 1,060 child laborers. In 2014, the Child Labor Unit conducted inspection campaigns targeting the auto-repair and mechanical industry, the restaurant industry, and highway coffee shops, which is largely an informal sector.(14) During the inspections, the Ministry of Labor issued 633 warnings and 235 fines.(14) A warning requires the employer to sign a pledge certifying that it will cease employing children within one week. Without a signed pledge, the Ministry can close a business within one week.(14)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit participated in and contributed to almost 30 training sessions offered by international organizations and NGOs.(25) These organizations also held training sessions for prosecutors and border guards. As a result of the training sessions, observers noted that the Unit has expanded its definition of human trafficking.(25) The Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit published awareness-raising brochures about the indicators of human trafficking, which they distributed in police stations, customs offices, and specific sectors in which human trafficking occurs. The Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit investigated 311 potential cases of human trafficking in 2014.(25) Of these, 53 were identified as human trafficking cases and were referred to the Prosecutor General. The 53 cases involved 121 female and 40 male victims, including 11 girls involved in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking.(25) The Unit referred 91 male and 24 female suspects to the Prosecutor General. The Unit received information for potential cases from various sources, including the Ministry of Labor's hotline.(25) Research did not find information regarding the number of investigators.

A technical subcommittee of the National Committee for the Prevention of Human Trafficking was reviewing the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking to close loopholes, as well as drafting an official referral mechanism for referring human trafficking victims to an under-construction shelter. Meanwhile, an informal referral network is operating to place human trafficking victims in temporary shelter.(25) The Government referred 122 human trafficking victims to three organizations for services and assistance in 2014.(25)

The Ministry of Justice registered 83 cases under the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking in 2014. Of these, 20 resulted in convictions, 2 in acquittals, 1 case was dropped by general amnesty, and the rest were pending.(25) The sentences for the convictions ranged from 1 to 10 years' hard labor, 3 to 5 months' imprisonment, payment of court fees, a fine, or some combination thereof.(25)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role &amp; Description
National Committee on Child Labor	Form new policy, amend legislation as necessary, and oversee the implementation of current child labor policy, including the National Framework to Combat Child Labor. Led by MOL.(27) Includes the Ministry of Labor, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Social Development, the National Council on Family Affairs, as well as international and civil society organizations.(27)
The National Center for Family Affairs	Coordinate policy issues involving abused or exploited children.(2)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Steering Committee of the National Framework to Combat Child Labor	Coordinate referrals between Ministries of Labor, Education, and Social Development to identify child laborers, withdraw them from work, provide them with services, and monitor their progress.(27, 42)
National Committee for the Prevention of Human Trafficking	Coordinate the implementation of the National Strategy and Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking.(43) Chaired by MOJ. Other members include representatives from the Ministries of Labor, Foreign Affairs, Interior, Social Development, Health, Trade and Industry, as well as the National Council for Family Affairs, the National Commission on Human Rights, and the Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit of the Ministry of Labor and PSD CID.(25)

In 2014, the Steering Committee of the National Framework to Combat Child Labor usually met on a biweekly basis. The Ministries of Labor, Education, and Social Development, in cooperation with the ILO, finalized a child labor monitoring system (CLMS) that will act as a coordinating and referral mechanism, as well as a Web site for centralized data collection.(14) The Ministry of Labor manages the CLMS in coordination with the other two Ministries. In 2015, the pilot phase, conducted during the reporting period in Amman, Irbid, and Zarqa will be expanded to three additional governorates.(14) Likewise, in 2015, a bilingual (Arabic and English) Web site integrated with the CLMS will be launched for the public to be able to report cases of child labor. The Ministry of Education will track school dropout in efforts to encourage children to re-enter school.(14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Jordan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Framework to Combat Child Labor	Outlines the roles and responsibilities of the key government agencies, including the Ministries of Labor, Education, and Social Development; NGOs; and other stakeholders involved in identifying and responding to cases of child labor.(42) The Ministry of Labor's Child Labor Unit held training for 25 Ministry of Labor's inspectors on their role in the implementation of the National Framework to Combat Child Labor.(37)
Jordan Response Plan	Facilitates the country's humanitarian and development response to the needs of incoming Syrian refugees and Jordanian host communities, a joint effort of the Government and the UN.(44) Includes elements aimed at reducing refugees' vulnerability to child labor through improved access to education.(45, 46)
The National Agenda (2007–2017)*	Provides a comprehensive reform framework for political, economic, and social policies, including the restructuring of Jordan's social safety net system.(47)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Jordan funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Nonformal Education Centers‡	Consisting of 51 centers under the Ministry of Education throughout the country that seek to bring school dropouts, including those engaged in or at risk of child labor, back into the educational system. Children attend classes 3 hours a day in a flexible learning environment.(14) Target children aged 13 and older. Specially trained teachers work with small classes of about 20, and at the end of the curriculum, students earn a certificate equivalent to a 10th-grade education.(14)
Social Center in Marka‡	Funded by the Ministry of Labor and operated by the Ministry in cooperation with the ILO. Its activities include identifying child laborers, providing services, including nonformal education, training, and rehabilitation for school dropouts and child laborers, assisting families in finding alternate forms of supplemental income, and conducting awareness-raising sessions in the community. Served 165 children in 2014.(14)

Program	Description
Nonformal Education Center in Petra‡	Part of a trilateral project between UNESCO, the ILO, and the Petra Authority that operates a nonformal education center and provides services to children at risk of child labor in the local tourism industry in the Um Sayhoun community and in Petra.(41, 48)
Moving Towards a Child-Labor Free Jordan (2010–2016)	$4.04 million USDOL-funded, 6-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to facilitate the Government of Jordan's implementation of the National Framework to Combat Child Labor, including conducting a national child labor survey.(49) During the reporting period, an online child labor monitoring database was launched and piloted for key government and nongovernment stakeholders to document cases of child labor and refer victims to services, including cases involving Syrian refugee children.(37)
Promising Futures: Reducing Child Labor in Jordan through Education and Sustainable Livelihoods (2010–2014)	$4 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by Save the Children to reduce the number of children working in construction, manufacturing, informal services and the storage industry, as well as in domestic service. Serves beneficiaries in poverty-stricken areas with high numbers of child refugees, including East Amman, Mafraq, and Zarqa.(50)
Child Begging Assistance Campaign‡	Ministry of Social Development's program that implements an identification and services referral system for child beggars. Links children with shelter and education services. Returns children to their parents who must then pledge in writing that their children will not return to the street.(51)
Sustaining Quality Education and Promoting Skills Development Opportunities for Young Syrian Refugees in Jordan (2013–2015)*	$5.6 million EU-funded, 2-year project implemented by UNESCO in cooperation with the Ministry of Education to offer informal and nonformal education for Syrian and Jordanian youth in Jordan.(52)
The National Aid Fund*‡	Ministry of Social Development's conditional cash transfer program that pays families approximately $50 per month for withdrawing a child from the labor market and reenrolling the child in school.(41)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Jordan.

As the Ministry of Social Development does not have a mandate regarding protection of Syrian refugee children, Government officials refer Syrian children identified through the child labor monitoring system to international and NGOs. The Ministry of Labor's Child Labor Unit has a process to refer Syrian child laborers to United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.(14)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor's Child Labor Unit broadcast 20 radio and TV spots and supported 3 public awareness sessions. In February 2014, in coordination with Save the Children, the Child Labor Unit hosted a conference entitled "My Dream is My Right" on child labor.(14)

Although Jordan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs does not address the extent of the problem, including in human trafficking, domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, begging, and other forms of street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Jordan (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor's inspectors have the resources to carry out inspection in the agricultural sector.	2014
	Collect and make publicly available data on the number of investigators responsible for criminal enforcement of child labor laws.	2013 – 2014
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention into the National Agenda.	2014
Social Programs	Expand programs to ensure equal access to education for all refugee children.	2013 – 2014
	Assess the impact that existing programs may have on child labor.	2010 – 2014
	Institute programs to address the worst form of child labor in domestic service as a result of human trafficking, domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, begging and other forms of street work.	2013 – 2014

In 2014, Kazakhstan made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Kazakhstan has received an assessment of minimal advancement because its President issued a decree in February 2014 placing a moratorium on inspections of small and medium-size businesses, resulting in the Government not enforcing its child labor laws. This gap in enforcement delays the advancements made in eliminating child labor during the reporting period. In addition, there is limited comprehensive and current research on child labor and programs to combat the worst forms of child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem. Children in Kazakhstan are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in cotton farming. Despite these gaps, the Government did make efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor, including making children engaged in the worst forms of child labor eligible for social protection services and developing a new national action plan on human trafficking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kazakhstan are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in cotton farming. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kazakhstan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	3.2 (79,690)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	90.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	3.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.2

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

There is no current, comprehensive research on child labor in Kazakhstan. The last national child labor survey was conducted in 2006; since then, a baseline study prioritizing child labor in agriculture in the Almaty and South Kazakhstan areas was completed in 2012.(11) There is limited evidence that children from the neighboring countries of Uzbekistan and the Kyrgyz Republic migrate with their families to work in Kazakhstan's cotton fields.(2, 7, 12)

Access to education is a challenge for some migrant children who do not have an Individual Identification Number, which became a requirement for school enrollment in September 2014.(4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kazakhstan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In July 2014, the Parliament adopted a new Criminal Code, which strengthens the penalties for certain criminal offenses, such as engaging a child in the commission of a crime. This law entered into force on January 1, 2015 and repealed the previous Criminal Code.(19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Committee on Labor, Social Protection and Migration*	Enforce child labor laws under the newly formed Ministry of Health and Social Development. Manage child labor cases in the course of broader investigations.(4)
Ministry of Education and Science	Receive complaints of child labor and determine if law enforcement should investigate the case. Mediate cases of child labor in the agricultural sector to encourage parents to keep their children in school.(4)
Ministry of Education and Science's Center for the Adaptation of Minors	Refer and provide assistance to child victims of forced labor, human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, or children involved in illicit activities, to the appropriate government services or NGOs for further assistance.(20, 21)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforce child labor laws in criminal offenses and train criminal and migration police in investigating the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.(20, 22)
Ministry of Internal Affairs' Criminal Police Department, Anti-Trafficking Unit	Investigate allegations of human trafficking, including trafficking of children.(4, 23)
Assistance Hotlines	Ministry of Internal Affairs and Ministry of Education and Science hotlines for child-related issues, including child labor and child trafficking. Refer all child labor and trafficking cases to the police or NGOs, which in turn refer victims to shelters or crisis centers.(24)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Labor law enforcement agencies in Kazakhstan took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection was merged with the Ministry of Health to form the Ministry of Health and Social Development, which is responsible for enforcing child labor laws. The Ministry employed approximately 320 labor inspectors.(4) In accordance with ILO's Strategies and Practice for Labor Inspections, the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to handle the labor force in Kazakhstan.

The Ministry of Health and Social Development reported that, while it did not conduct specific training on child labor for its inspectors during the reporting period, its periodic recertification requirement mandates competence in all facets of labor inspection, and that preparation for recertification includes review of materials on combating child labor. According to the Ministry, labor inspectors did not carry out any inspections for the purpose of enforcing child labor laws because of a moratorium on inspections of small- and medium-size businesses announced by the President's Decree No.757 in February 2014.(4) The moratorium covered the period of April 2, 2014 through January 1, 2015 and was intended to improve the conditions for the development of entrepreneurship in Kazakhstan. Reports state that despite the Government's national laws that comply with international standards on child labor issue, its efforts to combat child labor are hindered by the lack of adequate inspection of workplaces where children are commonly employed, such as cotton or vegetable fields.(4) Research did not find information on the number of complaints received on Ministry of Internal Affairs and Ministry of Education and Science hotlines, including those that may have been related to child labor.

Articles 16.10 and 16.11 of the Law on State Control allows for unannounced inspection of workplaces only under certain conditions.(25) In general, unannounced inspections are not carried out.(4) Inspectors conduct announced inspections according to the annual and publicly available plan of labor inspections, which are developed by each oblast's (each province's) labor department under the supervision of the Ministry of Health and Social Development. The plan is designed to cover large agricultural enterprises.(4) Small agricultural businesses that may employ children are usually inspected only in response to complaints.(4)

The Government has a system for filing and responding to complaints about child labor. Instances of illegal child labor may be reported to the police, an education official, a labor inspector, or one of the several government-operated hotlines.(4) An official from the oblast-level Department of Education will respond to the report and determine whether law enforcement should investigate the claim. For cases in which the alleged child labor occurs in an agricultural setting, local officials will meet with the child's parents and with school administrators to reinforce the message that, during the school year, children should be in school and not in the fields.(4)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Internal Affairs' Anti-Trafficking Unit employed approximately 40 operational officers who were responsible to identify crime and collect evidence, covering issues of trafficking in persons, including forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. This number is not sufficient for Kazakhstan.(4, 21) The Ministry of Internal Affairs annually trains police officers dealing with cases that involve the worst forms of child labor at the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Training Center at the Ministry's Legal Academy in Karaganda.(4) In 2014, 84 police officers were trained on identifying victims and conducting human trafficking investigations; they comprised 34 migration police officers, 16 community police officers, 17 school inspectors, and 17 investigators who investigate crimes and prepare cases for the prosecution.(4, 21)

In 2014, the police investigated 17 criminal cases related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Eleven child victims were removed from such situations and provided assistance by the government as a result of these investigations.(4) Investigations related to 8 of the 17 criminal cases were completed and resulted in 11 convictions, with sentences ranging from 1 year of probation to 10 years imprisonment.(4) Research did not find information on whether these penalties had been implemented.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Council on Child Labor (NCCCL)	Coordinate efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, and prepare proposals and recommendations on implementing state policy to eliminate child labor.(11) Chaired by the Minister of Health and Social Development, includes representatives from the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Ministry of Education and Science, the Prosecutor General's Office, the Human Rights Ombudsman, and NGOs. Required to meet semiannually, but did not convene in 2014.(4)
Committee for the Protection of Child Rights	Work to protect children against exploitation. Operates under the Ministry of Education and Science.(4)
Interagency Trafficking in Persons Working Group	Coordinate efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Minister of Internal Affairs; its coordinating role is shared on a 2-year rotation basis between the Ministry of Internal Affairs and the Ministry of Health and Social Development.(26) Includes representatives from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Education and Science, the Ministry of Culture and Sports, the Committee for National Security, the office of the Prosecutor General, the National Human Rights Commission, and the Supreme Court. Met twice in 2014.(26)

NGOs reported that the work of the Committee for the Protection of Children's Rights has slowed after the Committee's reorganization of its 14 oblast-level and 2 city-level Departments for the Protection of Children's Rights were abolished in 2013; the Committee's duties were transferred to oblast-level Departments of Education in 2014.(4) The National Coordination Council on Child Labor did not meet in 2014 and, therefore, could not monitor the implementation of the Joint Workplan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.(4) The Council also lacks data on child labor migration in the regions.(27)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Kazakhstan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Joint Workplan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Implementation of ILO International Convention 182 in the Republic of Kazakhstan (2012–2014)	Maps out legislation and policies in Kazakhstan on the worst forms of child labor, as well as both oblast and national programs on child labor and youth employment, to facilitate collaboration between the Government and its partners on these issues.(28) Provides measures for conducting investigations into the production of tobacco and cotton to prevent the worst forms of child labor and to check on children's school attendance.(29)

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking (2012–2014)	Prioritizes the development of standards for shelter assistance for trafficking victims and the provision of services to vulnerable population groups, including children.(30, 31) Also includes the development of recommendations to improve regulation of the domestic labor market and the accession of Kazakhstan to the ILO Convention on Domestic Workers, the ILO Convention on Migration for Employment, and the ILO Convention on Migrant Workers.(31) Contains provisions that specifically address child labor, in particular to conduct joint inspections of businesses engaged in cultivation of cotton and tobacco in order to prevent illegal labor migration and exploitation of child labor; to study school attendance during cotton and tobacco harvest season; and to provide social assistance to children who are victims of human trafficking.(4)

Implementation of the Joint Workplan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor was completed in 2014; however, no study was conducted to assess its impact on the worst forms of child labor. No new plan for future years was developed in 2014.(4)

The National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking was also completed in 2014; a report on the Government's accomplishments in implementing this Plan will be published in 2015.(4) A new plan for 2015–2017 was developed by the Interagency Trafficking in Persons Working Group and presented to the Prime-Minister's Office in November 2014.(4, 21)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Kazakhstan participated in and funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms.(Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Combating Child Labor in Central Asia — Commitment Becomes Action (PROACT CAR Phase III) (2010–2015)	$3.7 million Government of Germany-funded, 5-year regional project implemented by the ILO, to mainstream child labor issues into national policies and legislation, build the capacity of stakeholders, and provide direct services to children withdrawn from the worst forms of child labor.(8)
Assistance to trafficking victims‡	Provides medical and legal assistance, pretrial safe houses, security services, housing, food, clothing, and transportation to trafficking victims. Authorities can help victims or witnesses change residence, find another job, or change their physical appearance.(27)
Ministry of Education and Science Program of Education Development (2011–2020)*	Aims to provide equal access to education, transition to a 12-year education model, and improve technical and vocational training.(32)
Improving Identification and Referral of Victims of Human Trafficking†	USDOS-funded project implemented by IOM aiming to improve identification of human trafficking victims and referring them to services. Government of Kazakhstan has committed to extend identification functions to all police units, such as migration police and administrative police, as well as to labor inspectors and train them on how to identify victims and refer these victims for further assistance.(26)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

In 2014, the Government funded social, educational, and crime-prevention campaigns, including “Road to School” and “12 Days Against Child Labor,” in all the regions of Kazakhstan, reaching just under half a million children from socially vulnerable families.(4) Likewise, the Ministry of Culture and Sport funded awareness-raising campaigns designed to prevent human trafficking, including television programs, and Web site and print newspaper articles.(26) The Ministry of Justice provided a grant to an NGO to allow a shelter to serve victims of human trafficking in Astana.(26)

In March 2014, the Minister of Education and Science signed Order No.75 that extended the category of children eligible for placement in the Centers for Adaptation of Minors to include children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(4)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although the Government of Kazakhstan implemented programs to combat human trafficking and provide assistance to trafficking victims in 2014, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in services and agriculture, particularly in the production of cotton.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Kazakhstan (Table 9).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Kenya made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government put into effect its List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children and conducted a trafficking in persons survey. The Government also provided cash transfers to an additional 90,000 households as part of its National Safety Net Program for Results, and participated in several programs to combat the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Kenya are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and fishing. Moreover, Kenya has yet to ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography and has not committed sufficient resources to enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kenya are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and fishing.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kenya.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6-14 yrs.	32.5 (2,943,310)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	74.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	32.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		90.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2005, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 2, 2000.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of tea, coffee, miraa,† rice, sisal, sugarcane, tobacco, corn,* and cotton* (4, 5, 8-13)
	Herding livestock*† (4, 13)
	Fishing,† including for tilapia* and sardines* (4, 14, 15)
	Burning wood to produce charcoal* (4, 15, 16)
Industry	Construction,*† including carrying heavy loads (4, 13)
	Quarrying,† including for stones* and coral* (4, 5, 9, 16)
	Harvesting sand*† (4, 15-17)
	Making bricks*† (13, 16)
	Mining† for gold,* gemstones,* and salt* (4, 5, 9, 13, 18-20)
Services	Working in slaughterhouses,*† including disposal of after-products and cleaning (21)
	Domestic work† (4, 5, 15, 17, 21, 22)
	Street work, including vending (5, 13, 21)
	Transporting goods and people† by bicycle, motorcycle, and handcarts (4, 16)
	Scavenging for scrap materials† (4, 5, 15, 21, 23)
	Begging† (4, 24)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4, 5, 15, 25, 26)
	Used in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (13, 20)
	Begging and work on tobacco* farms each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4, 5, 11, 25, 26)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Kenya scavenge dumpsites and streets for scrap material, including metal and glass.(4, 15) These children earn about $1–$2 per day, while often risking injury and exposing themselves to infectious diseases, such as tetanus, by sorting through waste. Evidence suggests such children are also exposed to mercury.(4, 5) The commercial sexual exploitation of children is also a problem in Kenya, especially in Eldoret, Kisumu, Nairobi, Nyeri, and in coastal areas.(4, 5, 15, 26, 27) The majority of children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation are girls, but boys are also involved.(4, 5).

While education in Kenya is free, access to education is limited for a number of reasons. Teacher shortages in Kenya hinder children’s access to education and contribute to overcrowding in schools.(28) School administrators also limit some children’s access to education by denying pregnant girls admittance to schools.(28) Difficulties to access education are made worse by the prevalence of sexual abuse in schools.(5, 29) Although the Basic Education Act and the Children Act provide for free education and the Basic Education Act prohibits schools from charging tuition fees, the costs of unofficial school fees, books, and uniforms keep some children from attending school.(30-33) In addition, even though the Births and Deaths Registration Act makes birth registration compulsory, many children in rural areas are not registered at birth. Unable to prove their citizenship, nonregistered children have difficulty accessing services such as education.(5, 34)

The last national child labor survey was conducted in 2000.(7) As a result, data may no longer be reflective of the current child labor situation in Kenya.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kenya has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Section 30 of the Basic Education Act (43-45)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 7.2 of the Children Act; Sections 28-29 and 32 of the Basic Education Act; Article 53(b) of the Constitution (36, 38, 44)

*No conscription (42)

The minimum age protections in Kenya only protect children working under a contract.(35, 36) In 2014, the Government issued the Employment (General) Rules, which includes a list of hazardous work. The Rules also set forth a list of light work permissible for children between thirteen and sixteen under certain conditions.(21, 37) In Kenya, children are only required to attend school until the age of 14. This standard makes children ages 14-15 particularly vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work.(43, 45)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Social Security, and Services (MLSSS)	Enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor, through county labor officers in Kenya's 47 counties.(4, 46, 47) Through its Child Labor Division, coordinates activities to eliminate child labor.(4)
MLSSS's Department of Children's Services	Coordinate services provided to children, ensure that child protection activities are being implemented countrywide, and maintain records on children and the services provided to them.(4)
National Police Service	Enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(4)
Anti-Trafficking Police Unit	Enforce laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities.(4)
Tourism Police Unit	Enforce laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children related to the tourism industry.(48)

Law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor, Social Security, and Services (MLSSS) employed 95 labor officers and 500 child protection officers.(4) Information was not available on whether labor officers were provided training on enforcement of child labor laws during the year. The Government allocated approximately $116,000 to the MLSSS's Child Labor Division in previous years; however, the MLSSS's budget is inadequate to address Kenya's labor enforcement needs.(4, 49) Research found no information on the number of labor inspectors, the number, type, frequency, location, or quality of the inspections. Research found no information on the number of child labor law violations found, how many citations were issued, or whether appropriate penalties were applied.(4, 21, 49) Additionally, labor inspectors do not have the ability to issue fines or penalties when they encounter a workplace violation.(50) The Government implements an emergency, toll-free, nationwide child hotline to report child abuse, including child labor, and refer callers to organizations for social protection services.(4, 51, 52) In 2014, the Child Helpline received 227 calls regarding child labor, and 4 calls regarding child trafficking.(21)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research found no information on the total number of investigators. However, approximately 120 members of the National Police Service received training on trafficking in persons during the year.(25) Other criminal law enforcement personnel also received training on trafficking in persons from the IOM, the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and the International Law Enforcement Academy in Botswana.(25) In 2014, the MLSSS identified 23 cases of child trafficking.(21) Research found no information on the number and quality of the investigations. Some child victims were referred to social services and counseling, and others were reintegrated into their families.(25) Research did not find comprehensive statistics on the enforcement of criminal laws, including prosecutions, convictions, and the implementation of penalties related to the worst forms of child labor.(21)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role &amp; Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Oversee efforts to eliminate child labor.(4) Composed of government agencies, private employers, workers' organizations, and civil society organizations. Chaired by the Permanent Secretary, with coordination duties performed by the MLSSS's Child Labor Division.(21, 53)
National Council for Children's Services	Coordinate, on a quarterly basis, government efforts on child-related issues, including child labor.(4) Operate the National Children Database, which collects comprehensive data on children, including child labor.(4) Led by a presidential appointee and composed of 18 NGOs, private sector representatives, faith-based organizations, and representatives from various ministries.(53)
National Labor Board	Advise the Cabinet Secretary on all issues related to labor and employment, including legal and policy issues.(21)
Counter-Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee	Coordinate the implementation of policies related to human trafficking and provide prevention and protection services to victims. Mandated by the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act.(40)
Local, Advisory, and District Child Labor Committees	Coordinate activities to eliminate child labor at the local level.(4)

The National Steering Committee on Child Labor met twice during the reporting period, and the National Council for Children's Services met quarterly.(21) Members of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee were nominated in March 2014.(26) This Advisory Committee met five times in 2014.(54)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Kenya has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2004–2015)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2015 by targeting vulnerable populations and addressing the root causes of child labor, such as poverty and lack of access to education. Prioritizes law enforcement, awareness raising, and universal basic education.(55)
National Plan of Action Against Sexual Exploitation of Children in Kenya (2013–2017)	Aims to prevent, protect, and reintegrate child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Emphasizes identifying children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, raising awareness of community leaders, parents, and tourism employees on commercial sexual exploitation, and implementing programs to assist victims.(52)
Framework for The National Child Protection System for Kenya (2011)	Describes the laws and policies that protect children from violence and exploitation and the roles and responsibilities of the Government to protect children from exploitative work.(56)
Vision 2030: Second Medium-Term Plan (2013–2017)	Identifies child labor as a major challenge Kenya faces, and aims to finalize and implement the National Policy on Child Labor.(57)

Policy	Description
County Integrated Development Plan	Serves as a guide for a county's development planning processes. Required of all 47 counties in Kenya.(58) In the case of Kiambu County, for example, it addresses child labor on coffee and tea estates.(59) In Turkana County, it addresses the issue of street children.(60)
The National Children Policy (2008)	Seeks to protect children from exploitative labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation through the enforcement of relevant laws.(61)
The National Education Sector Support Programme (2013–2018)*	Aims to enhance access to and quality of basic education.(62)
Kenya National Social Protection Policy (2011)*	Aims to reduce the vulnerability of Kenyans to social, economic, and environmental shocks. Seeks to provide children with access to education and health services.(63)
UNDAF (2014–2018)*	Promotes improved access to education and provides adequate technical and financial capacities to the National Council for Children's Services to align national law with international standards.(64)
Policy for Alternative Provision of Basic Education and Training (2009)*	Provides guidelines for the development and implementation of alternative basic education and training for vulnerable groups.(65)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

The National Plan of Action Against Sexual Exploitation of Children in Kenya did not include a corresponding budget.(52) The Government did not adopt the drafted National Policy on Child Labor, which seeks to eliminate child labor by 2015.(21)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Kenya funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Protection Centers‡	Government-implemented child protection centers that provide counseling and reintegration services for children in Eldoret, Garrisa, Malindi, and Mombasa. Four additional centers were built in Kakamega, Nairobi, Nakuruat, and Siaya, but they were not yet operational.(25, 26)
Child Labor-Free Zones	Government-implemented program, with support from the ILO and an Italian NGO, Cooperazione e Sviluppo (CESVI), to create child labor-free zones in fish farms and commercial fishing operations. There are 70 child labor-free zones in 50 villages and on 20 beaches.(4)
Child Labor-Free Supply Chain Certifications	Government program supported by CESVI that develops child labor-free supply chain certifications. Kenya's largest vegetable processor was awarded a certificate in February 2014.(4, 66)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project (2011–2016)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010.(67) Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research. Also aims to strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers in Kenya.(67)
Tackling Child Labor Through Education Project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and through the Pacific group of states.(68) Aims to withdraw and prevent children from engaging in child labor, improve child labor-related legislation, build the Government's capacity to implement child labor policies, and enhance the knowledge base on child labor in Kenya, including through the release of a study on project interventions during the reporting period.(69)
National Safety Net Program for Results‡	Government-implemented, 5-year cash transfer and social safety net program, with support from the World Bank, that assists families of working children, orphans, and vulnerable children to meet their basic needs and pay for school-related costs. Added an additional 90,000 households in 2014, bringing the total number of beneficiaries to 240,000 households across Kenya.(4, 21, 70) Approximately $411 million has been committed by the Government of Kenya to the program.(4, 21) An impact evaluation found that this program led to a significant reduction in child labor on family farms.(71)
National Labour Force Survey with Child Labour Module	Government survey to determine the prevalence of child labor in Kenya. Government currently lacks funding to conduct the survey.(21, 72)
Decent Work Country Program (2013–2016)	ILO-IPEC program that seeks to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by establishing a referral system for victims and implementing child labor legislation and policies.(73)

Program	Description
Trafficking in Persons Survey†‡	Government survey to determine the prevalence of human trafficking in Kenya; began in February 2014.(25)
School Meals Program*‡	Government program that provides school meals to vulnerable children. Since its inception, has provided over 1.5 million children with school meals, which has resulted in improved school attendance.(74)
Wings to Fly Program (2011–2016)*	Government program, in partnership with USAID, the Equity Group Foundation, the MasterCard Foundation, and UK aid that provides secondary school scholarships to children from needy backgrounds. Provided education support to 2,000 children in January 2014.(21, 75)
Kitui County Child Rescue Center†‡	Government program that aims to withdraw and rehabilitate child laborers by providing counseling and life skills training. The Government-funded center cost approximately $34,500.(76)
Refugee Assistance Programs*	Government program, with support from UNICEF, provides educational and nutritional services to 320,250 children.(77)
Regional Counter-Trafficking Project	Government project, with support from the IOM, that aims to combat human trafficking through prevention, protection, and support for victims.(78)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Kenya.

Although Kenya has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Kiribati

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Kiribati made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. It continued initiatives to raise awareness about child protection issues, including commercial sexual exploitation. The Government also trained police and prosecutors on trafficking in persons. However, children in Kiribati are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. The law does not prohibit hazardous occupations or activities for children, and existing laws fail to fully protect children under age 18 from all forms of commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the Government did not make sufficient efforts to provide services to children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kiribati are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kiribati. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		115.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2008, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2015.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street vending* (6, 7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1, 3, 8)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In Kiribati, a small number of minors are reported to be engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in hotels and bars.(9) Evidence suggests that crewmembers of foreign fishing vessels account for much of the demand for children in the commercial sex sector.(1, 3, 10, 11) Girls are reported to receive financial support, food, alcohol, or goods in exchange for sexual services.(3)

While education is free and compulsory for all children until age 15, children face barriers to accessing education due to prohibitive costs of education and lack of schools in remote areas.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kiribati has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 85 of the Employment Act (12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 87(1) of the Employment (Amendment) Act (13)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 6 of the Constitution; Sections 244 and 249 of the Penal Code; Section 75 of the Employment Act (12, 14, 15)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 43 of the Measures to Combat Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (16)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 136, 141, and 142 of the Penal Code (14)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 142 of the Penal Code (14)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A†
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	N/A†
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 7 of the Education Act (17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 11 of the Education Act (17)

The law does not prohibit hazardous occupations and/or activities for children. With the support of the ILO, the Government has drafted a hazardous list, but it has not yet been approved by the Decent Work Agenda Steering Committee.(1, 2) Legislation that criminalizes human trafficking is limited to international movement of people, not domestic trafficking of humans.(3, 16) Laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation do not extend to male children ages 15 to 17. The legal framework also lacks explicit prohibitions on child pornography. The law fails to protect children ages 15 to 17 from use in illicit activities.(14)

If passed, the Employment and Industrial Relations Act would prohibit commercial sexual exploitation for all children under age 18, child pornography, and the use of children for illicit activities.(1) The Juvenile Bill, which is also awaiting parliamentary approval, will address child abuse, violence, sexual abuse, child labor, and commercial exploitation of children.(2, 19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Human Resources Development (MOL)	Enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor. Refer child labor cases to the Ministry of Women, Youth, and Social Affairs (MWYSA).(6)
Kiribati Police Force	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Investigate cases of human trafficking and sexual exploitation of children through a specialized Domestic Violence and Sexual Offenses Unit.(6) Refer cases requiring protective services for minors to the MWYSA.(6)
Kiribati Director of Public Prosecutions	Responsible for criminal prosecutions, including those related to the worst forms of child labor.(20)
Director and Social Welfare Officers, MWYSA	Remove children from harmful situations, including as a result of sexual exploitation and harsh or exploitative labor. Bring children in need of care and protection to the Court Magistrate to ensure their health and safety.(21)
Court Magistrate	Issue care and protection orders for children who have been harmed, including as a result of sexual exploitation and harsh or exploitative labor.(21)

Law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms, during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Human Resources Development’s (MOL) labor officers conducted inspections. MOL does not have dedicated labor inspectors but has seven labor officers, six of whom are based in the capital city of Tarawa, tasked with conducting inspections.(2, 6) The MOL does not have adequate manpower to provide inspection services and did not provide training on the enforcement of child labor during the reporting period.(6)

Information on the number of inspections conducted during the reporting period is not available.(2) During the reporting period, there were no reports of violations of child labor laws, and there were no reports of children being removed or assisted. However, the MOL does not keep records of the number of child labor violations, penalties, fines, or children assisted as a result of inspections.(2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Kiribati Police Force conducted anti-human trafficking training for police and prosecutors to learn how to identify victims, enforce, and prosecute crimes involving the trafficking of persons.(2) The Ministry of Women, Youth, and Social Affairs (MWYSA) provided training to magistrates on implementing the Children, Young People and Family Welfare Law in order to enhance the care and protection of child victims of human trafficking.(8) The Government does not employ investigators to specifically enforce laws dealing with the worst forms of child labor.(2) During the reporting period, there were no reports of investigations, prosecutions, or convictions for crimes involving the worst forms of child labor.(2, 8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although mechanisms exist to coordinate Government efforts to improve the welfare of children, the Government has not established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Secretary of MWYSA	Coordinate Government authorities and other stakeholders to respond to abuse, neglect, and exploitation of children and young people.(21)
Kiribati National Advisory Committee on Children	Implement the Convention on the Rights of the Child, including with regard to the worst forms of child labor. Members include the MOL, Ministry of Education, and Kiribati police.(2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Kiribati has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Children, Young People, and Families Welfare System Policy	Focuses on strengthening the welfare system, in part by implementing services to prevent the abuse, violence, neglect, and exploitation of children and young people, including in the forms of sexual abuse and hazardous labor.(22)
UNDAF for the Pacific Region (2013 – 2017)*	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island countries and territories: Cook Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Fiji, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.(23) In Kiribati, includes initiatives to prevent and respond to abuse and exploitation of children.(24)
Education Sector Strategic Plan (2012 – 2015)*	Sets out the goals to guide the planning and delivery of high-quality and relevant education for all children. Includes providing conducive learning environments in schools and professional development for teachers and staff.(25)
The Beijing Declaration on South-South Cooperation for Child Rights in the Asia Pacific Region	Commits signatories to advancing efforts to protect children's rights, including with regard to child labor, child trafficking, and child pornography.(26)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Kiribati funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Safenet	MWYSA-coordinated program that allows government, churches, and NGOs to collect data, share information, and provide assistance to child victims found in exploitative and violent situations.(2, 9)
Hotlines‡	MWYSA-supported 24-hour hotline for children to report violations, request information, or obtain access to services.(6) Domestic Violence and Sexual Offenses unit operates two 24-hour phone-line services for reporting exploitation and abuse.(3)
Awareness-Raising Programs	MWYSA weekly radio program and workshops with community and educational leaders to address child protection issues, including commercial sexual exploitation of children.(3) Government-UNICEF collaborative programs to increase children's awareness about human rights issues in Kiribati.(6)
Kiribati Educational Improvement Program*	Multi-partner aid program to provide greater protection and educational opportunities to children through policy and legislative review, workforce development, improvement of school curriculum, and infrastructure development in the education sector. Partners include the Government of Kiribati, Australian Agency for International Development, UNICEF, and UNESCO.(27)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Kiribati.

Although Kiribati has programs that target the commercial sexual exploitation of children, these programs are insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem. Specifically, the Government does not have programs that offer targeted services to victims.(3)

The Government worked with ILO-IPEC to conduct a child labor survey in 2012, but the results have yet to be finalized and released.(2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Kosovo made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government conducted a study on child labor as part of the implementation of its National Strategy and Action Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Kosovo (SAP). The Government also drafted the 2014–2020 Sectorial Strategy and Action Plan to address issues of child labor in Kosovo. In addition, the Government issued two decisions determining the roles and responsibilities of educational institutions and agriculture sector employees in preventing and eliminating child labor. However, children in Kosovo are engaged in child labor, including in street work and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children from minority communities continue to face barriers to accessing education. In addition, both the Labor Inspectorate and the Kosovo Police's Directorate of Trafficking in Human Being Investigation face gaps in the availability of resources and the collection and publishing of data on enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kosovo are engaged in child labor, including in street work.(1-5) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1, 2, 5-7) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

Kosovo

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Kosovo is a source and destination country for child trafficking. The majority of child trafficking victims in Kosovo are girls ages 14 to 17, who are primarily trafficked domestically for commercial sexual exploitation.(6, 13, 14)

Children from Kosovo and neighboring countries were also subjected to forced begging in Kosovo.(13) The majority of children involved in begging and other street work are members of the Roma, Ashkali, and Egyptian minority ethnic groups.(1, 3) Roma, Ashkali, and Egyptian children, as well as children from Albania, are sometimes subject to forced begging by criminal groups.(1, 6)

Children from the Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities continue to experience difficulty accessing education. A shortage of native-language teachers continues to contribute to low school attendance rates for ethnic minority children, despite some Government efforts to ensure the right to native language education.(4, 15) In addition, the prohibitively high fee for birth registration leaves some children in these communities without registration. Lack of birth registration sometimes hampers children from enrolling in schools.(4, 15, 16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kosovo is not a UN member country; therefore, the Government is not eligible to ratify any ILO or other UN conventions. Article 22 of Kosovo's Constitution, however, incorporates the UN CRC by reference.(17)

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In January 2014, the Kosovo Ministry of Education, Science, and Technology (MEST) issued Decision 217, which establishes the roles and responsibilities of educational institutions in preventing and eliminating hazardous child labor.<sup>(5)</sup> Decision 217 requires schools to be the primary identifier of child labor practices at the community level and obligates schools to notify the local Municipal Local Action Committee (MLAC) when action is needed. The decision also requires schools to raise community awareness on the issue of child labor.<sup>(16)</sup>

Also in January 2014, the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry, and Rural Development (MAFRD) issued Decision 185, which obligates MAFRD employees to participate in the prevention and elimination of hazardous child labor in the agriculture sector.<sup>(5)</sup> Decision 185 will result in increased awareness of the issue of child labor within municipal departments of agriculture, and will also mobilize personnel in these departments to raise awareness among farmers and their families.<sup>(16)</sup>

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW) Labor Inspectorate	Conduct inspections to enforce labor laws, including child labor laws, with a focus on protecting children who are legally employed. Refer all cases of children under age 15 involved in hazardous child labor practices to the MLSW Regional Centers for Social Work. <sup>(5)</sup>
MLSW Department of Social Welfare	Investigate for underage child labor. <sup>(24)</sup>
MLSW Regional Centers for Social Work	Address cases of children under age 15 involved in child labor and enter these cases into a nationwide database accessible by all relevant stakeholders. <sup>(5)</sup>
Kosovo Police	Enforce criminal laws against forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Enforce criminal laws against human trafficking, including child trafficking, through the Directorate of Trafficking in Human Beings Investigation (DTHBI). <sup>(5)</sup>
Ministry of Justice	Enforce criminal laws against forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children. <sup>(5)</sup>
Ministry of Education, Science, and Technology (MEST)	Ensure that students have an appropriate balance of school and work hours through the work of education inspectors. <sup>(25)</sup>

Law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW) Labor Inspectorate employed 51 inspectors.<sup>(5)</sup> The Labor Committee of the Kosovo Assembly has noted that the Labor Inspectorate's budget, personnel, resources for transportation, and equipment are insufficient to effectively enforce labor laws.<sup>(5, 11)</sup> Labor inspectors did not receive any training, including on the worst forms of child labor, during the reporting period.<sup>(5)</sup>

The Labor Inspectorate is authorized to conduct both announced and unannounced inspections in all relevant sectors, both proactively and in response to complaints. However, due to a significant lack of resources, the Labor Inspectorate was only able to conduct unannounced inspections in the construction industry.<sup>(5)</sup> In 2014, the Labor Inspectorate conducted 9,337 inspections, which included inspecting for child labor. The Labor Inspectorate did not find cases of child labor during any of these inspections.<sup>(5)</sup> The MLSW's Regional Centers for Social Work identified 206 children engaged in child labor in agriculture, street work, scavenging, and mining. The DSW was able to remove 46 of these children from hazardous work situations and reintroduce them into the education system.<sup>(5)</sup>

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Kosovo Police's Directorate of Trafficking in Human Being Investigation (DTHBI) Victim's Assistance Unit had 54 investigators. During the year, these investigators received training on cyber child pornography, street child labor, and interviewing at-risk victims, including children.<sup>(5)</sup> The Kosovo Police report the number of investigators to be adequate. However, in its annual report, the DTHBI notes that it still lacks sufficient funding for official vehicles and advanced technology for undercover investigations.<sup>(5)</sup>

Kosovo

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During 2014, the DTHBI did not report any investigations of the worst forms of child labor.<sup>(5)</sup> The Kosovo Police reported having removed 18 children from prostitution. These children were referred to the Regional Centers for Social Work, or to shelters for human trafficking victims. However, the Kosovo Police do not systematically track whether children involved in child labor were referred to providers of social services as a result of the investigations.<sup>(5)</sup> The Kosovo Judicial Council does not publish quantitative data on cases tried; therefore information on the number of prosecutions, convictions, and implementation of penalties related to criminal laws on child labor was not available.<sup>(5)</sup>

Research found that judges and prosecutors sometimes incompletely or incorrectly apply the legal framework for human trafficking, which hinders effective prosecutions. Human trafficking incidents have sometimes been classified as less severe offenses, resulting in lighter penalties for the perpetrators.<sup>(6, 26)</sup>

In addition, a source reported that cases of child begging are only investigated when the child involved is being prosecuted for a crime, and that there are no investigations into whether children engaged in begging are subject to forced labor or use in illicit activities. The Director of the Center for Social Work (CSW) in Pristina has stated that although the CSW undertakes to remove beggars from the street on a bimonthly basis in cooperation with the Kosovo Police, there are no shelters or rehabilitation centers to which child beggars can be referred, nor are there any facilities capable of providing social reintegration services to children who have been used for begging activities.<sup>(1, 27)</sup>

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Kosovo Committee for Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor	Oversee and provide policy guidance for activities to prevent and eliminate child labor. Members consist of representatives from government agencies, the Kosovo Police, trade unions, the Kosovo Chamber of Commerce, and a child protection NGO. <sup>(11)</sup>
Counter-Trafficking Inter-Ministerial Working Group	Coordinate policy implementation, monitoring, and reporting on the implementation of actions to combat trafficking, including child trafficking. Efforts are led by a National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator through the Ministry of Interior Affairs (MOIA). <sup>(7, 28)</sup>
Child Labor Monitoring System (CLMS)	Coordinate approach to child labor at the municipal level, including by overseeing Municipal Local Action Committees. Addresses child labor by promoting best practices, documenting child labor trends in specific sectors, planning for measures to be undertaken at the local level for the prevention and elimination of the worst forms of child labor, and evaluating the efficiency of existing responses at local levels. <sup>(5)</sup>
Municipal Local Action Committees (MLACs)	Coordinate municipal-level approach to preventing and eliminating child labor, and report to the CLMS. Members consist of representatives from local schools, municipal education departments, the Kosovo Police, and the MLSW. <sup>(11, 16)</sup> In 2014, MLACs continued activities to prevent and eliminate child labor, despite government formation delays that stalled state-level coordination mechanisms. <sup>(16)</sup>

All 38 municipalities in Kosovo have a Directorate of Health and Social Welfare and a Municipal Center for Social Work (CSW) as child labor monitoring bodies.<sup>(27)</sup> Directorates and CSWs are individually responsible for monitoring the child labor situation in a given municipality, and they share data at the local level. Although data are periodically shared among municipalities on an informal basis, and despite the existence of the Child Labor Monitoring System, government officials, representatives of international organizations, and NGOs reported that the Government lacks a sustainable and comprehensive mechanism to collect nationwide data on child labor, analyze lessons learned, and take follow-up actions.<sup>(11, 16, 27, 29)</sup>

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Kosovo has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy and Action Plan (SAP) for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Kosovo (2010–2016)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Kosovo by 2016, with a focus on prevention, as well as withdrawal of children from the worst forms of child labor, protection of young workers, and integration of gender concerns into anti-child labor efforts.(30)
National Strategy and Action Plan against Trafficking in Human Beings (2011–2014)	Calls for the elimination of trafficking and organized crime in Kosovo through four main strategies: (1) prevention of trafficking; (2) protection of victims and witnesses; (3) prosecution of trafficking crimes; and (4) special protection for children.(14) According to the most recent reports from early 2013, the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator led regular meetings to review the Plan and revise standard operating procedures. The procedures were aligned with the goal of the new Criminal Code and Criminal Procedure Code to focus on achievable objectives and activities; they included requirements for the police and social workers to communicate with victims' advocates after they have identified potential trafficking victims.(28)
Strategy for the Integration of Roma, Ashkali, and Egyptian Communities (2009–2015)	Promotes the protection of the Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities, and calls for their full integration into Kosovar society. Includes actions in various areas, including education, and establishes a fund specifically dedicated to improving these communities' access to educational opportunities.(31)

In 2014, the MLSW drafted a 2014–2020 Sectorial Strategy and an Action Plan for 2014–2016 that includes actions to address child labor.(5) The strategy aims to increase the effectiveness of the MLACs and to review the database of social assistance beneficiaries to ensure that children vulnerable to worst forms of child labor are included.(16) The Government also drafted a 2014–2019 Anti-Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan and National Strategy.(13) Neither plan was adopted during the reporting period, in part due to a 6-month delay in government formation after early elections were held in June.(13)

During 2014, the Government did not allocate funds for the National Strategy and Action Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor.(16) The MLSW used residual implementation funding allocated from previous years to support activities in 2014. The MLSW reported that this funding was inadequate.(16)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Kosovo funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8). The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Kosovo Shelter Coalition and Hope and Homes for Children‡	MLSW-funded coalition of 8 NGOs that provide shelter to victims of trafficking and domestic violence, as well as at-risk youth.(13) Beneficiaries include Hope and Homes for Children, which provides services only to victims of child trafficking. In 2014, the Government increased funding to the Coalition by more than $160,000.(7, 13)
Social Assistance Benefits*‡	MLSW program that provides monthly social assistance benefits to needy families. Benefits are increased per child, conditioned on the child's school attendance.(11) In 2014, the MLSW began to fully implement new data collection software that categorizes social welfare recipients to reduce fraud, which resulted in reducing the number of families and individuals who received social welfare. In 2014, the number of social welfare recipients dropped to 27,389 families with approximately 60,000 children, compared to 29,500 families with approximately 65,000 children in 2013.(5) The amount received per family varies from $45 to $90 per month, based on the number of family members.(16)
Study on Child Labor Practices	UNICEF-funded study on child labor practices implemented by the MLSW in cooperation with the Kosovo Agency of Statistics and the ILO as part of a general study on labor practices in Kosovo. Originally intended by the SAP to be conducted in 2013, the study was conducted in 2014, and the report is expected to be finalized and published in June 2015.(5, 15)
Free School Meals and Text Books*‡	MEST program that provides free school meals for children up to age 15, and free textbooks through fifth grade.(11)

Program	Description
Social Inclusion and Improvement of Living Conditions for Roma, Ashkali, and Egyptians, and Other Vulnerable Groups in Kosovo (2009–2015) ‡	Government and foreign donor-funded project implemented by Terre des Hommes and a local NGO.(32) Focuses on four basic areas: (1) empowerment and advocacy; (2) basic, secondary, and tertiary education; (3) sanitation and housing; and (4) vocational education, employment, and income to improve the lives of minority communities in Kosovo. Based on the Government’s Strategy for the Integration of Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities.(32)
Minority Support Project*	USAID-funded project implemented with the Government; goals include connecting Kosovo minorities with government social assistance. Part of USAID’s Strategic Plan in Kosovo.(33-35) USAID also supports implementation of another project focused on Kosovo’s education sector, and a third project in Northern Kosovo to promote integration by targeting areas of economic integration, community development, and capacity building.(29)
Trafficking Awareness Campaign‡	Annual government program to raise awareness of human trafficking among potential trafficking victims. In 2014, focused on potential victims of child trafficking.(13)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Kosovo.

In addition, the MLSW Department of Social Welfare reported that the social welfare does not adequately meet Kosovo’s social welfare needs.(16)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kyrgyz Republic

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, the Kyrgyz Republic made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government began conducting a national child labor survey in collaboration with the ILO. However, children in the Kyrgyz Republic are engaged in child labor, including in cotton cultivation, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in tobacco cultivation. Interagency coordination on child labor continued to be poor and legal protections, such as minimum age of employment and prohibition on hazardous work, are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Kyrgyz Republic are engaged in child labor, including in cotton cultivation. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in tobacco cultivation.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the Kyrgyz Republic.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

According to the most recent child labor survey conducted in 2007, child labor is concentrated in agriculture, primarily in the oblasts (provinces) of Issyk Kul and Osh.(15) Children also transport and sell items in local bazaars.(15)

Labor migration from southern to northern areas of the Kyrgyz Republic and from the Kyrgyz Republic to Kazakhstan and the Russian Federation is a common occurrence. Some parents leave their children behind, oftentimes without birth certificates and guardianship documents. As a result, some children cannot enroll in school and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(8, 11, 12) Similarly, many ethnic Lyuli children, a subgroup of the Roma people living in Central Asia, are out of school, and child labor is prevalent in this community.(6) Children with disabilities and those living and working on the street also have difficulty accessing education.(7, 15, 18, 23) Some schools require residence registration known as propiska for enrollment, even though according to the Ministry of Education and Science, this is not mandatory.(7, 9, 19)

In 2014, the National Statistics Committee, in cooperation with the ILO-IPEC, began conducting interviews with 6,000 households for a national child labor survey.(24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

According to Article 6 of the Labor Code, protections, such as the minimum age of employment and prohibition on hazardous work, are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment.(25) Most incidences of child labor occur in employment relationships where the child does not have a signed employment contract with the employer.(8, 11) Children in the Kyrgyz Republic are also required to attend school only until grade nine, which is typically until they reach age 14 or 15.(8, 9, 23, 33) This standard makes such children between the ages of 15 and 16 vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work either.

The Ministry of Social Development and the ILO indicate that the list of hazardous work in Decrees 314 and 548 is outdated.(34) The Government has drafted a revised list in 2011, which has not yet been approved.(35)

In 2014, the President signed the decree on Social Support for Children and Families in Difficult Living Conditions to address the root causes of child labor.(35)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety	Monitor work sites and refer child laborers to social services. Cooperate with the Inspectorate for Minors' Affairs in the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Prosecutor General's Office, and regional State District Administration authorities to enforce child labor laws.(35)
Ministry of Internal Affairs' Inspectorate for Minors' Affairs	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor; conduct independent inspections and joint raids with the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety to find neglected or abused children; and refer children to social institutions for care.(35)
Prosecutor General's Office	Enforce and apply laws concerning labor, including by conducting labor inspections and investigating child labor violations in coordination with the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety.(35, 36)
Oblast Administration	Enforce child labor laws at the oblast level.(35)
Ministry of Social Development	Serve as the key government agency for child issues charged with protecting children and families in difficult conditions, including child laborers.(6) Child labor issues are covered by the Ministry's Department of Child Protection. Monitor for children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(6) Coordinate with oblast -level authorities to pursue violations of child labor laws.(33)

Law enforcement agencies in the Kyrgyz Republic took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety employed 23 inspectors charged with investigating all labor issues, including child labor. Given the size of the workforce, the number of labor inspectors was inadequate to ensure appropriate enforcement of child labor laws.(6, 18) State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety officials noted that insufficient funds hindered enforcement efforts. Inspectors attended weekly personnel meetings where they received updates and training on issues, including child labor.(18) During the reporting period, labor inspectors identified 243 children engaged in child labor and issued penalties for employers.(18) Unannounced inspections are not permitted; in accordance with Article 6.6 of the Business Inspections Act, labor inspectors must inform businesses of inspections 10 days in advance.(37)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, a total of 22 cases of human trafficking, forced labor, and commercial sexual exploitation were investigated. The Prosecutor General's Office prosecuted 9 cases involving 21 suspected offenders and 6 child victims.(38) Fifteen offenders were convicted.(38) Research did not find information on the number of investigators, their training, and the implementation of penalties.

In 2013, some child victims of commercial sexual exploitation were treated as criminals or were further abused by law enforcement officials, including while in custody.(3, 21, 39) Concerns about law enforcement's treatment of child victims of commercial sexual exploitation remained in 2014 because the Government did not investigate allegations of police misconduct. Some law enforcement officials acknowledged that more should be done to protect child victims.(33)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.<sup>(6)</sup> The National Coordination Council on Child Labor was previously in charge of developing policies to eliminate child labor, but it is no longer operational.<sup>(11)</sup>

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of the Kyrgyz Republic has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program Against Human Trafficking and Action Plan for the Implementation of the Program (2013–2016)	Aims to provide protection to children in difficult situations to prevent them from becoming victims of sexual, labor, or criminal exploitation. Does not, however, have a specific focus on the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Action Plan is overseen by the Ministry of Labor, Migration, and Youth. <sup>(35)</sup>
Sustainable Development Plan (2013–2017)	Addresses child labor by undertaking a child labor survey, strengthening enforcement mechanisms for monitoring child labor, and replicating best practices to improve access to education. <sup>(35, 40)</sup>
Roadmap on Out-of-School Children	Seeks to collect information on the problem of school nonattendance and develop a comprehensive list of activities to address the issue. Developed by UNICEF, the ILO, the Ministry of Education; currently under revision. <sup>(40)</sup>
National Education Strategy (2012–2020)	Seeks to improve access to education, develop skills based on labor market needs, and increase access to elementary education for illiterate individuals and those who dropped out of school. <sup>(41)</sup>
Social Protection Development Strategy (2012–2014)	Aims at formulating the guidelines for the Child Labor Monitoring System, revising the list of hazardous work prohibited for children, and preparing for the replication of the Child Labor Monitoring System in other regions of the country. <sup>(35)</sup>

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Combating Child Labor in Central Asia—Commitment Becomes Action (PROACT CAR Phase III) (2010–2015)	Government of Germany-funded, $6.7 million, 5-year project implemented by the ILO-IPEC to mainstream child labor issues into national policies and legislation, build the capacity of stakeholders, and provide direct services to children withdrawn from the worst forms of child labor. <sup>(40)</sup> There is a pilot program in two districts that consists of evening classes for children engaged in child labor and child labor monitoring by teachers and social workers. <sup>(7, 42)</sup>
Implementing Practices to Address Child Labor in Tobacco in Kyrgyzstan (IMPACT) (2013–2015)	Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation-funded, $709,943, 2-year project implemented by the Alliance on Protection of Child Rights that works to eliminate child labor in tobacco-growing communities in southern areas of the Kyrgyz Republic. Objectives include preventing 3,000 children from entering child labor and improving access to education, water, and sanitation. <sup>(43)</sup>
Evening Classes for Child Laborers ‡	ILO and Ministry of Education and Science project that provides evening classes to secondary school students in districts where there is a high concentration of child laborers. Includes weekly or biweekly family consultations with social workers who observe the children during which the parents receive information on the hazards of child labor. <sup>(44)</sup>
Social Support for Children and Families in Difficult Living Conditions ‡	Social workers monitor places where children may be working, with a primary focus on bazaars. <sup>(33)</sup> The decree indicates that social workers will assist with returning children to school and ensure that they are no longer working. <sup>(33)</sup>
World Day Against Child Labor	ILO-IPEC media campaign for World Day Against Child Labor in 2014, highlighting extending social protections to eliminate child labor. <sup>(33)</sup>
Toll-Free Hotline for Human Trafficking ‡	Ministry of Labor, Migration, and Youth's toll-free line provided to the IOM that offers information to potential labor migrants and assistance to victims of human trafficking. <sup>(23)</sup>

Program	Description
Ministry of Education and Science National School Attendance Database‡	Launched in 2014, pilot national electronic database to track children who do not attend school. Although not operational, database information will be shared with the Ministry of Social Development to assist children engaged in child labor.(9) The Ministry of Internal Affairs will also be informed of cases of criminal violations of child labor laws. In addition, social pedagogues will work with families to ensure that children attend school.(9)

‡ Program is funded by the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic.

Research found no evidence that the Government has carried out programs to assist children in domestic work, cotton cultivation, and herding during the reporting period.

Lebanon

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Lebanon made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. While both the anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan and the National Action Plan for Human Rights await formal adoption by the Parliament, Government agencies in cooperation with other organizations began to implement them. The Government allowed Syrian refugee children to access education. The Reaching All Children through Education project, which aims to improve access to education, was launched. Also, the Ministry of Social Affairs in cooperation with UNICEF formed a program to enroll children in schools and improve working conditions for children. However, children in Lebanon continue to engage in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Labor law enforcement is weak due to a lack of resources, and enforcement agencies do not maintain enforcement data. There are not sufficient programs and services that target children engaged in agriculture, street work, domestic service, or commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lebanon are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture.(1-3) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1, 4-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Lebanon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

	Work in agriculture as a result of human trafficking* (3, 6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children who work in agriculture, mainly in the districts of Akkar, Hermel, Baalbek, and South Lebanon, often do not attend school during harvesting and planting seasons.(13, 21) Children working on the streets are sometimes forced into commercial sexual exploitation and illicit work by criminal gangs and acquaintances. A 2011 study found that boys working on the street are at a high risk of sexual exploitation by peers and by men.(4) Lebanon is a source country for children, especially girls, trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, domestic service, and criminal activity. Lebanon is also a destination country for children trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation.(4, 6) Syrian girls, particularly, are trafficked into Lebanon for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation under the guise of marriage.(4, 6)

The Syrian conflict has caused a large influx of refugees to Lebanon. The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) reported that as of December 2014, more than half of the 1.15 million Syrians who had sought refuge in Lebanon were children.(22) Working in the streets is especially common among refugee children, including Palestinian, Iraqi, and Syrian, as well as Dom children (an ethnic minority).(12, 23) Refugee families face extreme poverty, making their children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(6, 24) There is limited evidence of recruitment of children for use in armed conflict in Syria.(25, 26)

The law guarantees free compulsory education for children, but only for Lebanese citizens.(27) Noncitizen children, including stateless and refugee children, have limited access to education. While Palestinian refugees cannot access public schools, they are required to attend schools operated by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA).(21, 24, 28) Although Syrian refugees can access public education, the public school system in Lebanon does not have the capacity to accommodate the large number of school-age Syrian refugee children.(24) As of summer 2014, only 20 percent of school-age Syrian refugee children attended schools in Lebanon.(28) Lack of awareness about education opportunities, school fees, costs of transportation and supplies, use of schools as shelters, and lack of security are among the barriers to education.(25, 28, 29) Lebanese children face similar barriers in accessing education.(21) Likewise, Iraqi refugee children may not be enrolled in school due to such reasons as school-related costs, reliance on child labor income, and discrimination.(30) Additionally, in Lebanon many classes are taught in French or English, whereas Syrian and Iraqi children are used to learning all subjects in Arabic.(29, 30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Lebanon has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓

	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government of Lebanon has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 22 of the Labor Code (31)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Decree No. 8987 (32)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Annex 1 of the Decree No. 8987 (32)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 586.1 and 586.5 of the Law on the Punishment of Human Trafficking (33)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 586.1 and 586.5 of the Law on the Punishment of Human Trafficking (33)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 523-527 and 507-510 of the Penal Code (34); Articles 586.1 and 586.5 of the Law on the Punishment of Human Trafficking (33)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 618 of the Penal Code (34); Articles 586.1 and 586.5 of the Law on the Punishment of Human Trafficking (33)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 30 of the National Defense Law (35)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	12	Article 49 of Education Law (21, 27)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 49 of Education Law (27)

The law requires Lebanese citizens to attend school only until the age of 12. This standard makes children ages 12-14 particularly vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work.(37) Additionally, according to the Ministry of Labor's Unit for the Combat of Child Labor, penalties for criminal violations of child labor and related laws are not sufficient to deter future violations.(12) Draft legal amendments to address compulsory education age and insufficient penalties remain pending.(12, 38)

Lebanese law is not consistent in its treatment of children working in begging. Article 610 of the Penal Code criminalizes begging.(34) Reports refer to limited cases in which children working as beggars have been arrested.(23) However, Articles 25 and 26 of the Delinquent Juveniles Law stipulate that child begging endangers children and that such children are entitled to protective measures.(23, 39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws through workplace inspections.(12) Maintain a hotline to receive labor-related complaints, including cases of child labor.(3)
Internal Security Forces	Enforce laws regarding the worst forms of child labor through the Anti-Human Trafficking and Morals Protection Bureau.(12, 40)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecute violations of the Penal Code in coordination with the Internal Security Forces and the Ministry of Social Affairs' Higher Council for Childhood. Maintain general data and statistics on criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor.(12) Refer at-risk children to shelters and protection services.(3)
Ministry of Justice's Union for Protection of Juveniles in Lebanon	Refer ill-treated children, children in conflict with the law, and child victims of human trafficking and other forms of worst forms of child labor to social services. Coordinate juvenile justice procedures and advise juvenile court judges on referring child labor victims to appropriate social services.(12, 16)
Ministry of Social Affairs	Refer children identified by the Internal Security Forces and the Ministry of Justice to protective institutions, such as health centers.(3, 16) Refer children to shelters through its Higher Council for Childhood.(12)
Directorate of General Security's Hotline	Receive complaints, including on human trafficking.(41)

Law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) employed 90 labor inspectors, including administrators. Labor inspectors did not receive child labor training in the reporting period. MOL did, however, provide a guide, developed in cooperation with the American University in Beirut, on best practices for implementing Decree No. 8987.(3) Additionally, MOL does not have the resources to provide inspectors with the necessary office equipment or transportation to enforce child labor laws.(3) Although, in theory, labor inspectors can initiate both routine and complaint-based inspections, including unannounced, desk reviews, and on-site inspections, due to a lack of resources, almost all inspections are generally complaint-based. MOL did not receive any child labor complaints in the reporting period, thus no inspection was performed.(3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the head of the Anti-Human Trafficking and Morals Protection Bureau of the Internal Security Forces stated that the Bureau lacks sufficient staff and that officers are routinely pulled from their duties to perform other tasks.(3) The Human Rights Institute of the Beirut Bar Association published an informational manual on the legal provisions and best practices to combat human trafficking as well as 500 copies of a handbook on human-trafficking indicators to help officials identify victims. Trainings were also provided for the staff of the Directorate of General Security, the Internal Security Forces, and the Lebanese Armed Forces.(40) However, officials of the Ministry of Justice indicate that judges need more training on the application of the Law on the Punishment of Human Trafficking.(41) The Internal Security Forces investigated five cases of human trafficking, including those that involved child victims. The Ministry of Justice prosecuted 34 cases of human trafficking, including cases of forced child labor in begging.(41) Six individuals were convicted under the Law on the Punishment of Human Trafficking. In addition, two cases of forced child labor in begging, initiated prior to 2014, resulted in convictions of 10-year imprisonment and fines.(41) Research did not find information on the number of child labor and human trafficking complaints received through the Ministry and Labor and the Directorate of General Security's hotlines.

The Government did not generally provide protection, including shelter, to victims of human trafficking and continued to arrest, detain, and deport victims for crimes committed as a direct result of being trafficked.(6) Only one child was removed from a situation of commercial sexual exploitation and was handed over to NGO Abaad for further assistance.(3)

When a child is found to be involved in or a victim of criminal activities, the Internal Security Forces take the child into protective custody and contact the Ministry of Justice's Union for Protection of Juveniles in Lebanon, which then refers the child to appropriate social services. Given the Union's limited resources, the Ministry of Justice is in talks with more organizations to boost the number of social workers.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MOL's Unit for the Combat of Child Labor	Raise awareness; coordinate efforts among government agencies; establish standard practices; and develop, enforce and recommend changes to the law and ensure they comply with it.(42) Led by the Minister of Labor, includes representatives from the National Social Security Fund; Ministries of Social Affairs; Public Health; Justice; and Agriculture; and National Employment Office.(43)
Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Human Trafficking	Coordinate efforts against human trafficking, including child trafficking.(44)

The UN coordinates efforts to address the needs of children affected by the Syrian refugee crisis in Lebanon and maintains interagency standards for child protection. Its agents identify crucial concerns, including factors that make children vulnerable to child labor, and make recommendations to the Government on the use of resources, including referral services.(24, 45)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Lebanon has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2013-2016)	Establishes strategies for addressing the worst forms of child labor. Includes a National Awareness Strategy to be carried out by the ILO.(12, 46)
National Social Development Strategy	Establishes a plan for a comprehensive social, health, and educational program.(47) Includes the protection of working children and the implementation of the Higher Council for Childhood's strategy to address the needs of street children.(48)
Ministry of Education and Higher Education's Education Sector Development Plan (2010-2015)*	Aims to improve quality learning during pre-school, general, and higher education levels; integral part of the National Social Development Strategy.(49)

In 2014, MOL's Unit for the Combat of Child Labor was in the process of finalizing the National Awareness Strategy against the Worst Forms of Child Labor. The Unit also announced that it will update its website to become the main portal of information on all types of child labor.(3) The revamped website, expected to be launched in 2015, will also include an online child labor complaints system. Likewise, the Ministry of Social Affairs' Higher Council for Childhood launched its consultations with World Vision to draft a sectoral action plan on child trafficking, part of the National Action Plan for Child Protection.(3)

In 2013, government agencies, including the Internal Security Forces, and the Ministries of Justice, Interior, and Social Affairs introduced a draft of an Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan that outlines the roles and responsibilities of agencies involved in the identification of victims of human trafficking and in their referral to services. Based on the Plan, a national database is to be established to facilitate counter-trafficking activities.(5) Additionally, in 2012, the Government drafted the National Action Plan for Human Rights. The Plan provides recommendations on child labor coordination between relevant authorities. It also proposes legislative and executive procedures on 21 human rights topics, including children's rights.(12, 50) While both Plans await approval by Parliament, they are already being implemented by government agencies in cooperation with civil society and non-governmental organizations.(3)

The Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Social Affairs, and the Internal Security Forces, in cooperation with UNICEF, finalized a standard operating procedure (SOP) on child protection, including protection against human trafficking. The SOP defines the role of each of the agencies in implementing the law. The Ministry of Social Affairs is expected to approve the SOP in 2015 for it to become effective.(3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Lebanon funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Reaching All Children through Education†	Part of the No Lost Generation initiative, a joint effort of the Ministry of Education and Higher Education, United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), UNICEF, and the World Bank.(3) Addresses needs of Syrian refugee children to increase access to education and provide a protective environment as well as life-skill building opportunities.(51) Enroll up to 200,000 children in first and second school shifts in 2014-2015 (i.e., the school day was divided, with some children attending in the morning and others in the afternoon, to accommodate the large number of students) and increased targets in subsequent years. Aims to provide a productive, safe alternative to child labor.(3)
National Poverty Alleviation Program‡	Funded by the Government, the Italian Foreign Ministry, the World Bank, and the Canadian Embassy, this Ministry of Social Affairs' program pays school tuition and book costs for 74,000 families living in extreme poverty.(12)
Higher Council for Childhood's program to eliminate child labor and street children	Funded by the Arab Council for Children and Development, the program includes training for the media on how to cover child labor cases, a study on street children in collaboration with St. Joseph University, training programs for social workers, and awareness campaigns for the general public.(12)
Education Program for Syrian Refugee Children	The Ministry of Education and Higher Education, and UNHCR support the War Child Holland initiative, which provides education to qualified refugee children in 13 public schools in Beirut and Mount Lebanon. Supports second shift courses and informal educational activities, designed to give students the necessary skills to enroll in public schools.(52)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor and forced labor through data collection and research.(53) In 2014, in preparation for a national child labor survey in Lebanon, the ILO finalized the questionnaire and the planning of geographic areas to be covered in the survey.(53)
Child Protection Committee†	Joint program by UNICEF and the Ministry of Social Affairs. Addresses worst forms of child labor interventions, including through counseling, enrolling children in school, and working with employers to decrease working hours for children and improve work conditions.(3) Currently implementing programs for children in armed conflict and refugee children from Syria.(3, 21)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

As shown in Table 8, NGOs and UN agencies are the main providers of children's social protection services, including for child victims of trafficking.(4) The scarcity of shelters for child-trafficking victims results in some children being placed in juvenile detention centers.(21) The lack of shelters and resources to effectively handle child labor and trafficking cases puts children at a heightened risk of further exploitation.

Lebanon lacks programs to address child labor in agriculture, street work, domestic service, and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Lesotho made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC). In addition, the Ministry of Labor and Employment disseminated new guidelines on the protection of herd boys and the protection of children under age 18 from hazardous work. The Government fully funded the Lesotho Child Grant Program and the Orphans and Vulnerable Children Scholarship Program, allocating $3.6 million and $2.9 million, respectively, to their 2013 and 2014 budgets. The Government also finalized and publicly launched the National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Strategic Framework and Action Plan. In addition, the government launched the Southern African Development Community (SADC) data collection software. However, children in Lesotho continue to engage in child labor, including in domestic service and in the worst forms of child labor, including in cattle herding. Lesotho law does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, and a gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for employment that leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. A lack of government resources for enforcement and social programs also remains a major challenge to combat child labor in Lesotho.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lesotho are engaged in child labor, including in domestic work. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in cattle herding and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lesotho.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	28.1 (124,632)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	80.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	25.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		72.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 2, 2000.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding animals, including cattle† (1, 6-9)
	Farming,* including planting,* applying pesticides,* and harvesting* (2, 10, 11)
Services	Domestic work* (1, 8, 9, 12)
	Street work,* including vending* (8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation,* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (3, 6, 8)
	Used in illicit activities,* including burglary* and theft* (8)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Lesotho's HIV/AIDS rate of 23.3 percent, the third-highest rate in the world contributes to the situation of approximately 364,000, or 34 percent of children in Lesotho, child orphans.(10, 13, 14, 15) Children, mostly HIV/AIDS orphans driven by poverty, migrate to urban areas to engage in commercial sexual exploitation for survival.(3, 10, 16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Lesotho has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

* No conscription (23)

Lesotho does not have a law that prohibits children from engaging in illicit activities. Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts noted the Government's pending adoption of a revised Labor Code since 2006 and urged the Government to implement measures to prohibit the use and procuring of children under 18 for illicit activities.(27) In addition, although there are maximum penalties for violations of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (CPWA), it does not set minimum penalties for employing underage children in night work, industrial undertakings, or hazardous work for first-time offenders.(18)

Lesotho

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the Government of Lesotho does not have a law that specifies the minimum age for voluntary service, the Lesotho Defense Force has a policy prohibiting the recruitment of children under age 18.(28, 29) Education is compulsory in Lesotho through the age of 13, but the minimum age for work is set at 15. This standard makes children at age 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work.(4, 10, 17, 30) Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts urged the Government to collaborate with the Ministry of Education and Training to ensure that compulsory education is up to the minimum age of employment.(31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE)	Enforce child labor laws, including hazardous child labor, and as a part of general labor inspections assess compliance with child labor laws.(1)
National Police, Child and Gender Protection Unit (CGPU)	Investigate child labor violations, and works in conjunction with MOLE to enforce child labor laws, including those related to hazardous and forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and child trafficking.(1)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecute child labor law offenders.(1)
Children's Court	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(1)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) employed 38 labor inspectors who investigate labor issues, including child labor violations. Funding for inspections was inadequate, and inspectors lacked adequate resources and needed vehicles and telephones to conduct labor investigations to combat and address child labor violations.(9) As of August 2014, inspectors carried out 1,330 labor inspections, an increase from 1,000 inspections in 2013.(9, 32) Inspections were mostly unannounced.(9, 32) The Ministry of Labor and Employment did not report child labor violations or issue citations during the year.(9)

Research found no information on referral mechanisms to receive complaints of violations of child labor laws. The Labor inspectorate does not have the authority to issue penalties for Labor Code violations.(9, 17)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, there was no Lesotho Mounted Police Service (LMPS) funding dedicated specifically to the enforcement of child labor laws.(9) The LMPS is responsible for the enforcement of criminal laws pertaining to child labor.(32) According to the Child and Gender Protection Unit (CGPU) of the LMPS, 116 police officers were employed during the year to enforce law nationwide. However, there were no crime related child labor investigations or prosecutions during the year.(32) The CGPU does not have guaranteed funding; rather, it receives funding from the general operations budget of the national police.(1) In June 2014, the Ministry of Home Affairs partnered with UNODC, in conjunction with the IOM and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, to conduct a train-the-trainers workshop.(34) It was attended by 15 police officials, 15 immigration officials, 2 Home Affairs legal representatives, 4 National Security Services officials, 1 Social Welfare official, 5 prosecutors, and 10 labor officials. The workshop focused on victim identification, protection, and assistance, as well as on the investigation and prosecution of trafficking crimes.(34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Task Team (NTT)	Implement the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC). Led by the MOEL's Child Labor Unit and the NTT (formerly the Program Advisory Committee on Child Labor). Comprises representatives from government ministries, trade unions, NGOs, and international organizations.(1, 16) The NTT was not active during the year.(33)
Multi-Sectoral Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons (MSC)	Serve as lead body on trafficking in persons and approve legislation and policies to prevent human trafficking. Chaired by the Commissioner of Refugees and the MSC this committee also includes government ministries; local government members; and representatives from NGOs, international organizations, and faith-based organizations.(35)
District Child Protection Teams	Coordinate child protection matters, including child labor, at the district level. Led by the Ministry of Social Development. Comprises representatives from Government, business, NGOs, and community support groups.(1)

Although the Government of Lesotho does not have a formal referral system for children identified during inspections, the CGPU reported that child victims are referred to an appropriate NGO for services; during the year there were no reported violations. (1, 6, 9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Lesotho has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC)†	Seeks to ensure that all major interventions regarding child labor are in place while preventing duplication of efforts. Constitutes a strategic program framework based on existing and planned interventions in relevant social and economic sectors, some linked to other program initiatives.(33)
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Strategic Framework and Action Plan†	Aims to support the national and international obligations and commitments by strengthening approaches to protect children against the worst forms of child labor in support of the vision to “eradicate all forms of trafficking in persons in Lesotho, protect victims of trafficking in persons, arrest and successfully prosecute offenders and put in place preventative measures.”(33)
National Policy on Orphans and Vulnerable Children	Safeguards the rights of orphans and vulnerable children to an education, promotes access to apprenticeships and vocational and life skills of orphans and vulnerable children, and implements child labor prevention programs.(36)
Lesotho United Nations Development Assistance Framework (2013–2017)	Includes strategies to reduce poverty and attain Millennium Development Goals in Lesotho.(37) Framework promotes education for children, supports youth employment, and builds the Government's capacity to provide social welfare services to vulnerable children.(37)
Lesotho: Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper—National Strategic Development Plan (2012/2013–2016/2017)	Addresses prevention measures and child protection services (CGPU/police, social welfare, health, and the justice system) and their capacity to respond adequately to cases of violence, abuse, and exploitation of children, including child labor.(38)
Education Sector Strategy Plan (2005–2015)*	Outlines strategies to improve access, equity, and quality of education, as well as to reduce school fees and provide school meals to vulnerable children.(39)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Government issued new guidelines for the protection of herd boys and children under age 18 who may be exposed to hazardous work, including applying pesticides and conducting herding activities.(9) Previous guidelines prohibited night work for herders under age 13 and required that herd boys be monitored, clothed, fed, and remunerated.(40) These guidelines also provide protection for children working in agriculture in ploughing, harvesting, and applying pesticides.(40) During the year, the MOLE began holding districtwide meetings that included local chiefs to explain the new guidelines to protect herd boys. The MOL encouraged local chiefs to report complaints about the abuse of herd boys to the MOL and to the police.(9) The Government of Lesotho finalized and publicly launched the National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Strategic Framework and Action Plan. In addition, the Government launched the Southern African Development Community data collection software; although it is unclear if the system will collect data on child labor and enforcement efforts in country.(34)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Lesotho funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Lesotho.(41)
Awareness-Raising Campaign on Human Trafficking*	Ministry of Gender and Youth, Sports and Recreation program operated with support from an NGO. Facilitate public awareness raising on human trafficking and gender-based violence in rural communities.(6, 35) Translated the anti-trafficking law into local languages and distributed it at border posts.(35)
Awareness Raising for Herd Boys	Ministry of Gender and Youth, Sports and Recreation program that conducted workshops for herd boys. Workshops provided information on trafficking issues, health, HIV/AIDS, and sexual reproductive health.(6, 35)
Lesotho Child Grants Program*‡	Government program funded also by the EU and UNICEF to provide direct-cash transfers to orphans and vulnerable children to improve their living standards, increase their school enrollment, and improve their nutrition and health. Amount provided to each household increased based on the number of orphans and vulnerable children.(16) Government provided full funding for the program, allocating $3.6 million in the 2013/2014 budget.(1)
ILO—Decent Work Country Program (2012–2017)	Includes a child labor component to establish a child labor unit within the labor inspectorate in order to address child labor in the informal sector and conduct a national child labor survey. Other objectives include employment creation, social protection coverage for citizens, and social dialogue among the tripartite partners.(10)
OVC Scholarships Program*‡	Government program that pays for the tuition, uniforms, supplies, and boarding fees for OVCs. Provided full funding for the program in the 2013–2014 budget, benefitting 12,873 orphans and vulnerable children in 2014.(1, 33)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Lesotho.

The Government continues to provide free medical services to victims of child labor at government-run hospitals and clinics.(1, 33) The Government also sponsored legal, life skills, and counseling services for crime and trafficking victims; the number of victims that received services is unknown. Despite its pledges, however, the Government failed to provide financial support to NGOs and develop a formal referral system to direct trafficking victims to NGOs; this resulted in one NGO suspending its services.(33)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Lesotho (Table 9).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Liberia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the last half of 2014, the Government had to redirect most of its resources to address an outbreak of Ebola Virus Disease (EVD). Thousands of children became ill or lost parents during the outbreak and schools were closed from June through the end of the reporting period in December. Despite the EVD outbreak, the Government sponsored trafficking in persons trainings for law enforcement officers and community leaders. The Child Protection Network developed a 6-month strategic plan to respond to vulnerable group of children in post-Ebola Liberia. However, children in Liberia are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and mining. The Government has yet to pass into law the Decent Work Bill, which prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children, and child labor law enforcement efforts are still inadequate.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Liberia are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and mining. (1, 2) On some rubber plantations, children are employed to tap rubber trees, clear brush, and carry buckets. (2) Children also mine natural resources, including alluvial diamonds. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Liberia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	16.6 (136,340)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	75.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	14.0

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

	Street work,* including vending* and begging* (3, 7, 12, 14-16)
	Repairing motor vehicles* (9)

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work,* street vending,* farming,* and begging* each as a result of human trafficking (3, 17-21)
	Commercial sexual exploitation,* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (21)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked within Liberia and are subject to commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, forced begging, and forced labor in street vending, alluvial diamond mines, and on rubber plantations. Children are also trafficked from Liberia to Cote d’Ivoire, Guinea, Sierra Leone, and Nigeria.(21) Although the Children’s Law provides for free primary education, in practice, many schools charge fees, which may prevent some children from attending school.(7) The limited number of schools in some areas also impedes access to education and increases the risk of children engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(20, 22) Sources indicate that sexual abuse by male teachers in schools may be a barrier to girls’ education.(10, 23, 24) Liberian parents are required by law to register their infants within 14 days of birth.(25) However, fewer than 5 percent of births are registered. Unable to prove citizenship, nonregistered children may have difficulty accessing education as some schools in Liberia require a child’s birth certificate to facilitate enrollment.(26, 27, 28)

In 2014, Liberia suffered from an Ebola Virus Disease (EVD) outbreak that resulted in numerous deaths.(29) To minimize the spread of the EVD, the Government issued policies to reduce person-to-person contact, especially group gatherings.(30) The Government also responded to the EVD outbreak by increasing the number of health screening check points and imposing travel restrictions.(31) The EVD outbreak may have impacted the Government’s ability to address the worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Liberia has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

*No conscription (37)

Section 74 of the Labor Law minimally penalizes offenders with a fine of 100 Liberian dollars for violating the minimum age provision.(32) In addition, Liberia currently does not have any prohibitions on hazardous work for children. However, the Decent Work Bill, introduced in 2010, is still being reviewed by the House of Representatives and should address hazardous work prohibitions for children.(7, 39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce labor laws, including child labor laws.(8)
Ministry of Justice's Women and Children Protection Section (WCPS)	Enforce laws relating to violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking.(40)
Liberian National Police's Anti-Trafficking Unit	Ensure human trafficking training is integrated into police orientation to train officers on the effective enforcement of anti-human trafficking laws.(27)
Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization (BIN)	Enforce human trafficking laws in external cases.(8)
Liberian Transnational Crime Unit	Coordinate responses to international organized crime, including monitoring and prosecuting criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking.(41)

Law enforcement agencies in Liberia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL) and several ministries, including the Ministry of Labor (MOL), perform child labor investigations. However, the NACOMAL's budget and number of staff devoted solely to child labor issues are inadequate.(42) The MOL employed 54 officials to work on labor issues consisting of 1 inspector general, 14 labor commissioners, and 39 labor inspectors. Inspectors conducted unannounced inspections of construction companies and private businesses.(42)

The labor inspectorate does not have the authority to issue penalties, but rather refers suspected violations to prosecutors. In 2014, no child labor violations were reported but child labor cases are sometimes investigated and prosecuted as child endangerment under the penal code.(42)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Government of Liberia sponsored trafficking in persons trainings for law enforcement officers and community leaders.(43) All section heads of the Liberian National Police (LNP) received basic training on how to report suspected human trafficking cases.(21) However, evidence indicates that the number of investigators, investigations, and prosecutions are inadequate. The Women and Children Protection Section (WCPS) employs 210 officers stationed throughout the country. The WCPS and the LNP reported that funding for operations was insufficient during the year.(42) Reports indicate that the LNP lacks vehicles, fuel, a communication mechanism, and investigative equipment to carry out investigations.(44) In addition, research did not find information about the number of inspections conducted, convictions, or implementation of penalties related to the worst forms of child labor in 2014.(42)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL)	Monitor child labor issues and develop child labor policies. Led by the MOL, it comprises of representatives from 16 organizations, including NGOs and international and civil society organizations.(45) Objectives include reforming national child labor laws and creating a national child labor database to assist with conducting surveys to determine the magnitude of the child labor issue in the country.(45)
National Steering Committee (NSC) on Child Labor	Advocate eliminating child labor, especially its worst forms. Chaired by the MOL, it comprises of NACOMAL, government ministries, private sector representatives, and NGOs.(7) Objectives include Liberia's ratification of ILO C. 138.(7) The MOL, in collaboration with the IOM and UNICEF, organized two workshops. The first workshop, held in May, was a 2-day child labor reporting training with a legal analysis component; the second, held in July, was a 5-day strategic planning meeting of the NSC.(42) The NSC met quarterly during the reporting period.(42)
Child Protection Network	Coordinate child protection efforts through monthly meetings to discuss child protection issues, including child labor and human trafficking. Chaired by the Ministry of Gender and Development, is comprises of the MOL, the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, the WCPS, the National Police, civil society organizations, and several NGOs.(3) Also responsible for coordinating referrals for provision of services to child victims, with support from international and national organizations.(8, 13) In addition, manage seven community child welfare committees in different counties that monitor children's issues at the community level and make referrals to other organizations.(13) During the year, the Child Protection Network developed a 6-month strategic plan to respond to vulnerable groups of children in post-Ebola Liberia.(42)
Anti-Human-Trafficking Task Force	Coordinate anti-human trafficking activities. Chaired by the MOL and includes the Commissioner of BIN, the LNP, and representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Foreign Affairs, and Internal Affairs. (8) During the year, the Government allocated $151,520 for purchasing supplies and a vehicle, and for anti-human trafficking activities administered through the national coordinating body. The anti-human trafficking activities included trafficking in persons outreach and, training activities for law enforcement officers and community leaders.(10, 44)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Liberia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons†	Outlines the Government's comprehensive anti-human trafficking efforts, including for child victims.(8) The Government affirmed its commitment to the Anti-Human Trafficking 5-Year National Action Plan and allocated $152,000 to fund its implementation.(19)
Direct Assistance and Support to Trafficked Victims Standard Operation Procedures	Establishes roles and responsibilities for coordinating government assistance to human trafficking victims.(27)
National Social Welfare Policy	Prioritizes the development of action plans and policies that target children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.(46)
National Employment Policy*	Aims to provide vocational training for youth.(46)
Rubber Industry Master Plan (2010–2040)*	Prioritizes the development of the rubber industry and includes provisions for improving workers' standard of living, access to credit, and children's access to education.(47)
Education Sector Plan (2010–2020)*	Aims to improve the education infrastructure, as well as the access to and quality of primary education.(48)

2030 Vision Policy (2012–2017)*	Outlines the Government of Liberia’s goal to become a middle income country by 2030, by increasing focus on education and livelihoods.(15, 50)
Revised National Youth Policy (2012–2017)*	Outlines the Government of Liberia’s National Youth Policy, which includes employment and education components.(51-53)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2014, the Liberian House and Senate passed the Liberia Youth Act, which was formerly a policy called the National Youth Policy. Currently it awaits approval from the President.(52, 53)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Liberia participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Anti-Trafficking Awareness Campaign‡	Government of Liberia MOL program that uses radio and billboard messages to raise public awareness on human trafficking.(10, 27)
Liberia Agriculture Investment Program*	$175 million multi-donor program that aims to enhance household livelihoods in the agriculture sector by building linkages with markets and improving rural infrastructure, which may have a positive effect on reducing child labor.(54)
Actions to Reduce Child Labor in Areas of Rubber Production (2012–2016)	$6 million, USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by Winrock International to combat child labor in the rubber sector.(17) Aims to withdraw or prevent 10,100 children from engaging in the worst forms of child labor by providing education, as well as livelihoods support to 3,700 vulnerable families. Implemented in collaboration with local rubber companies.(17)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project (2011–2015)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor in Liberia. (55)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(56)
Social Cash Transfer Program*	EU-funded program that provides regular payments to poor and “labor constrained” households in Bomi County, along with other counties. Labor constrained households include households in which the majority of household members are unable to work for reasons such as disability.(57) Targets 5,000 households, and each beneficiary household receives between $10 and $25 per month.(57)
Educating and Protecting Vulnerable Children in Family Settings Project (2010–2014)*	USAID, in partnership with Save the Children Fund UK, aims to enhance the protection systems for vulnerable children especially those who received inadequate prenatal care by providing children with access to primary education and health services and ensuring that social and health services are delivered to children through partnership with civil society and the.(58)
Fast Track Initiative Grant for Basic Education *	$40 million, World Bank-funded project that aims to improve primary education access and quality.(59, 60)

Refugee Camps and Services (2012–2015)*	$42.5 million, UN High Commissioner for Refugees-funded project that maintains refugee camps and provides essential services to Ivorian refugees, including children.(63, 64)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Liberia.

Although Liberia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Macedonia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government instituted legislation to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities and amended the Family Law to facilitate children's removal from situations of exploitative child labor in their homes. Additionally, the Department of Justice set up a fund for the compensation of victims of human trafficking, including child trafficking victims. However, children are engaged in child labor, including in begging and the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. The number of day centers and Centers for Social Work (CSWs) remains insufficient to provide shelter and other services to all vulnerable children in need of assistance. In addition, the National Plan of Action on the Rights of the Child and the National Action Plan against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration lack the necessary funding for effective implementation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Macedonia are engaged in child labor, including in begging.(1-5) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(2, 3, 6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Macedonia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	18.3 (44,161)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	86.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	19.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		74.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2011.(8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,* activities unknown (9, 10)
Services	Street work, including vending small items, cleaning vehicle windshields,* and begging (1-5)
	Working in commercial car washes* (9, 10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 3, 6, 11)
	Forced begging* (2-4, 6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The majority of children involved in child labor in Macedonia engage in street work such as begging and vending cigarettes and other small items in open markets, in the streets, and at bars and restaurants.(4) Some children engage in begging to help support their impoverished families, while others are forced to beg. The majority of children involved in street work, including begging and forced begging, are of the Roma ethnicity.(2, 4, 6)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The majority of victims of child trafficking in Macedonia are girls ages 14 to 17 who have been trafficked domestically for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in bars and nightclubs.(3, 11, 12) Girls in Eastern and Central Macedonia have been identified as being at particularly high risk for human trafficking.(3) Girls, particularly Roma girls, are also trafficked for forced marriages, which may result in both sexual and labor exploitation.(3, 11, 12)

The Laws on Primary Education and Secondary Education provide for education in Romani, along with the languages of several other ethnic minorities.(2) Some communities with a predominantly Roma population have access to Romani-language kindergarten and primary school classes.(13) However, the Government was unable to fully meet the demand for instruction in Romani due to a shortage of qualified teachers.(2) In addition, some Roma children had difficulty accessing education due to a lack of birth registration, and Roma children are overrepresented in segregated schools for children with intellectual disabilities.(2, 14) However, increased government funding for programs to eliminate barriers to education has produced positive results in raising school attendance rates among Roma children.(2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Macedonia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 42 of the Constitution; Section 7 of the Labor Relations Act (15, 16)

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 44 of the Constitution (15)

* No conscription (26)

In February 2014, the Government amended the Family Law to allow for revocation of parental rights to protect children from abuse and neglect by their parents. For cases in which the Center for Social Work determines a second offense by a parent who is encouraging their child to beg, or if the child's life is endangered by begging, the Government has the right to remove the child from the home and initiate the procedure to revoke parental rights, as well as to press criminal charges against the parent.(4, 5)

Also in February 2014, the Government amended the Criminal Code to introduce the crime of "prostitution of a child" to facilitate bringing criminal charges in cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children that lack sufficient evidence to prosecute for human trafficking. The Government also enacted an amendment to Article 418-d of the Criminal Code, Trafficking in Children, to update and broaden the language regarding methods of human trafficking and to impose harsher sentences for other crimes involving commercial sexual exploitation of children.(12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Labor Inspectorate (SLI)	Enforce labor laws, including child labor laws, and transmit cases of suspected criminal law violations to the Public Prosecutor. Inspectors conduct a minimum of 60 inspection visits per month, including both targeted and complaint-based inspections.(27) Formerly a subunit of the Ministry of Labor and Social Policy (MLSP), in June 2014 the SLI became an autonomous agency as part of a larger reform of the inspection services in Macedonia. This reform did not change the function of the SLI.(4, 28)
Department of Social Inclusion within the MLSP	Work with the police to seek out street children in need of assistance and track cases of forced child labor.(3, 28)
Ombudsman's Office	Work with the MLSP's Centers for Social Work (CSWs) to register complaints about hazardous child labor. Includes a special unit for the investigation of violations of child rights.(4)
Centers for Social Work within the MLSP	Work with the Ombudsman's Office to register complaints about hazardous child labor. Investigate children's participation in street work, such as vending and begging.(4) Work with the Ministry of Interior to form mobile teams consisting of one plainclothes officer and one social worker to identify street children and remove them from hazardous situations. In 2014, identified and registered more than 100 street children.(4)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Enforce criminal laws, including laws related to hazardous child labor. Investigate cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities through its special police unit for organized crime, corruption, and human trafficking.(4) Work with the CSWs in mobile teams to investigate cases of child labor and forced child labor in street work.(4)
Office of the National Referral Mechanism	Accept reports of potential victims of human trafficking, including children. Alert agencies to investigate the allegations and provide social services for victims.(3, 29) Children found to be victims of child trafficking are removed from the situation, placed in shelters for trafficked children, and given immediate medical and psychological care.(29)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecute possible criminal law violations, including those involving the worst forms of child labor.(30) Has an Organized Crime and Corruption Unit with four prosecutors dedicated to cases of child abuse and worst forms of child labor. The Skopje Basic Prosecutor's Office has eight prosecutors dedicated to child abuse cases.(29)

Law enforcement agencies in Macedonia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, there were 110 labor inspectors responsible for all labor violations, including child labor. Inspectors did not receive training on the content and enforcement of laws relating to child labor during the reporting period.(4) Ministry of Labor officials report that funding to the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) is adequate to facilitate the fulfillment of its mandate without impediment.(4)

Labor inspectors carried out both targeted and complaint-based inspections, including unannounced inspections, in all relevant sectors allowed by law. No violations of child labor laws were found.(4) The Ombudsman's Office reported that there were no official complaints of child labor in 2014.(28)

Macedonia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Data from the Ministry of Labor and Social Policy (MLSP) inspections are not regularly shared among offices, as there is no central computerized database.(27)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the special police unit of the Ministry of Interior (MOI) had five officers dedicated to investigating crimes involving child trafficking and other criminal worst forms of child labor. The MOI also had 80 officers dedicated to enforcing laws against child abuse and exploitation throughout the country's 38 police districts.(4) Additionally, six mixed mobile teams composed of MLSP social workers and police searched the streets for children begging and for children who might be victims of human trafficking. Five of these mobile teams were established during the reporting period.(3, 13) Investigators did not receive specific training on child labor in 2014.(4)

In 2014, the mobile teams removed 100 children from the street and referred them to day care centers.(4) In addition, the MLSP removed 14 children from their families and initiated 10 procedures for revoking parental rights due to abuse and negligence. These children were placed with foster families or at institutions for homeless children.(4) The police also identified six child trafficking victims. All victims were referred to shelters that provide medical and psychological care for rehabilitation.(4) Charges were pressed against two individuals for child trafficking; the cases are still pending.(4)

The Prosecutors' Office pursued four cases of child trafficking in 2014 and obtained a conviction that resulted in a 13-year sentence.(12) The Prosecutor's Office suffers from underfunding, and the process required to investigate and gather evidence for human trafficking cases can be lengthy and complex.(29) Consequently, although human trafficking cases are given high priority and are tried by the Organized Crime and Corruption Prosecutor's Unit at the main court in Skopje, these cases sometimes remain in the court system for years without conclusion.(4, 29) Information on the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties implemented for criminal acts involving worst forms of child labor other than child trafficking were not available.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Protection of the Rights of Children	Coordinate efforts to protect children's rights, including by preventing and eliminating child labor, through the provision of social services.(4) Develop and oversee implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Rights of the Child.(31)
National Coordination Body for Implementation of the Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Sexual Abuse of Children and Pedophilia	Implement the National Action Plan. Led by the MLSP and made up of representatives from relevant ministries and NGOs.(17, 31) Maintains a hotline for reporting sexual abuse of children and children on the street.(17, 29, 32)
National Coordination Body for Protection of Children from Abuse and Neglect	Oversee implementation of the National Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Abuse and Neglect of Children.(33)
National Commission for Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration	Coordinate the work of all institutions involved in combating trafficking in persons. Led by the MLSP.(4) In 2014, organized regular meetings to assess human trafficking in Macedonia.(12) Includes the Sub-Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Children, which serves as an advisory body to the National Commission on all forms of child trafficking, including child trafficking for labor exploitation.(4, 13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Macedonia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Action Plan for Children on the Streets (2013–2015)	Aims to combat the harmful effects of street work by providing such children with services, including education.(34) Intends to provide a systemic and holistic response to the issue of children on the streets, with an emphasis on social services, health care, and inclusion in the educational system.(17, 34)

Policy	Description
National Action Plan against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration (2013–2016)	Focuses on preventing human trafficking by reducing the vulnerability of at-risk populations, reducing the demand for sexual services, improving victim identification, and increasing efforts to combat trafficking in persons for forced begging and labor exploitation.(11) As part of the Plan, in 2014, the Department of Justice set up a fund for the compensation of victims.(4, 11)
National Strategy for the Fight Against Poverty and Social Exclusion (2010–2020)	Addresses children's rights, such as social protection, social inclusion, health, education, and employment.(4) Includes goals of increasing birth registration among Roma and other minorities, expanding patrol services to identify and support street children, and improve the provision of social services for children involved in street work and begging. Implemented by the MLSP.(4, 35)
National Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Abuse and Neglect of Children (2013–2015)*	Aims to provide a safe living environment for children by improving prevention and detection of abuse and neglect of children, as well as by providing treatment and rehabilitation of children who have been victims of abuse and neglect. Outlines a plan for the implementation of these improvements on a national and local level.(28)
National Plan of Action on the Rights of the Child (2012–2015)	Aims to promote equity, inclusion, and efficiency in the provision of services for children, such as health care and education.(36) Includes providing direct assistance to withdraw children from child labor, rehabilitating victims, and providing children with better access to primary education.(37)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

The implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Rights of the Child has been slow, with no funds specifically earmarked for its implementation, monitoring, or evaluation.(1, 38) There is also a lack of sufficient Government funding for the National Action Plan against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration, which may hinder its implementation.(11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Macedonia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Conditional Cash Transfer Program‡	Government program that provides cash assistance to certain Roma students who stay in school and discourages their involvement in street work and begging.(29)
Day Centers‡	MLSP program that operates three government day centers and supports two others operated and partially funded by NGOs. Day centers provide services, including education, healthcare and counseling, to children working in the streets.(2) The Government also supports a small transit center for street children.(39) During 2014, day centers provided services to 100 children.(4)
Center for Victims of Human Trafficking and Transit Center for Foreign Victims of Trafficking‡	Government program that fully funds the Center for Victims of Human Trafficking, a shelter for domestic trafficking victims. MOI funds the provision of basic services to victims, while MLSP supports reintegration of victims with their families. NGOs collaborate in the operation of the shelter.(17, 40) The Government provides partial support to the Transit Center for Foreign Victims of Trafficking, which is operated by NGOs.(40)
Centers for Social Work (CSW)‡	Government program of approximately 30 CSWs that provide services to vulnerable groups, including street children and child victims of human trafficking. Services include counseling, education, and assistance with obtaining registration documents.(4, 12) CSW staff members have been trained on human trafficking issues.(40)
Social Worker/NGO Mobile Teams‡	Government social workers from CSWs and representatives of NGOs work in the field of three major municipalities to detect human trafficking victims and at-risk individuals, including street children. Teams then work to find solutions to address the needs of these vulnerable persons, including providing support to human trafficking victims and their families, and implementing reintegration programs.(17) The Government also funds education seminars for parents on the dangers of allowing children to work and beg on the streets.(29)
Cut the Thread of Labor Exploitation and Trafficking in Children	Government program through which the National Commission for Human Trafficking and NGOs conducted a series of awareness-raising activities on trafficking in persons, as well as a fundraising campaign to assist street children.(3)
Inclusion of Roma Children in Preschool Education‡*	MLSP project implemented in cooperation with the Roma Education Fund and 19 government units. Aims to support the integration of Roma children by increasing the number of Roma children in preschool.(41)
Children-at-risk Breaking the Cycle of Social Exclusion of Children in Macedonia	MLSP and UNICEF-implemented project for improved social protection for street children. Developed standard operating procedures for addressing the needs of street children, and supports the Government's goal of greater inclusion of the Roma population.(42)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Macedonia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The number of day centers and CSWs is insufficient to reach all vulnerable children in need of assistance. Reimbursement to NGOs that provide services at human trafficking shelters also suffered from delays due to budget constraints at the state level.(3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Macedonia (Table 9).

Madagascar

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Madagascar made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The newly elected Government adopted the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law, which criminalizes all forms of human trafficking and contains provisions to prevent child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. The Regional Child Labor Committees in the Sava region organized workshops and conducted activities to raise awareness of child labor in the production of vanilla. The Government also adopted a National Development Plan that includes activities to combat the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the National Police Force's Morals and Minors Brigade investigated an estimated 187 cases of child commercial sexual exploitation and referred them for prosecution. However, children in Madagascar are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and particularly in the production of vanilla and in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining. Limited resources for the systematic enforcement of child labor laws impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Social programs to combat child labor are also insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Madagascar are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and particularly in the production of vanilla.(1-4) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining.(4-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Madagascar.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	22.1 (1,206,992)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	69.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	15.4

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Forced labor* in mining,* quarrying,* begging,* and domestic work* (5, 6, 10, 18, 26)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Girls are trafficked from Madagascar to the Middle East and China for forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.(6, 20, 27, 28) Informal employment agencies recruit children into domestic work, who are subsequently subjected to forced labor within Madagascar.(6) Human trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation occurs in coastal cities, such as Antsiranana, Mahajanga, Nosy Be, Toamasina, and Toliara, as well as in the capital, Antananarivo.(6, 20, 28) Most child sex trafficking occurs with the involvement of family members, but friends, transport operators, tour guides, and hotel workers also facilitate the trafficking of children.(6, 28, 29) Parents may force their children into various forms of commercial sexual exploitation to earn money to support their families, in some cases, directly negotiating prices with clients.(6, 28, 29) Some children are fraudulently recruited for work in the capital as waitresses, maids, and masseuses before being coerced into commercial sexual exploitation.(6) In some cases, the traditional practice of girl markets (tse nan’ampel), in which girls are sent to markets to attract a husband and arrange marriages, has led girls into commercial sexual exploitation.(5, 20)

Children in the mining sector suffer from respiratory problems and diseases such as diarrhea and malaria. Children are also at risk of injury from collapsing mines.(5, 7) Children dig pits, up to 15 meters deep, and carry plastic sacks filled with air in order to be able to breathe. Boys as young as age 10 go down the pits to collect dirt that is sifted at nearby rivers.(5) Most of the children involved in gold mining are located in the regions of Anlamanga, Anosy, Ilakaka, and Vakinankaratra.(5, 7, 16, 30)

Children in Madagascar face significant barriers to education, including a lack of school infrastructure (especially in rural areas) and issuance of birth certificates needed for children to officially enroll in school.(5, 28, 31) While the right to free education is enshrined in the Constitution, the Government of Madagascar was unable to fully subsidize students’ school fees, food, and school supplies.(31-33) Families unable to pay these additional costs kept their children at home or sent them to work.(5, 31, 34)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Madagascar has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In December 2014, the Government adopted the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law, which complements Law 2007-038 Against Trafficking in Persons and Sexual Tourism.(36) The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes all forms of human trafficking, including the trafficking of children, and imposes sufficiently stringent penalties for other forms of forced labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, labor trafficking, forced begging, forced domestic work, and debt bondage.(4, 36, 42) The law also provides for legal protection and social assistance to victims of human trafficking. Children identified as victims of human trafficking receive specialized assistance that address the needs of minors, including education support and family reintegration services.(4, 36, 42)

The law prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children; however, the law does not prohibit hazardous occupations and activities in all relevant child labor sectors, including agriculture. A more specific list of hazardous child labor activities has been developed, but it was not approved during the reporting period.(4, 43)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Civil Services and Labor's Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE)	Enforce child labor laws and coordinate, communicate, train, engage in research and development; administer, finance, and evaluate all activities in the context of the elimination of child labor.(3, 4, 44, 45)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce all laws pertaining to violence against children, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(4, 45)
National Police Force's Morals and Minors Brigade (PMPM)	Investigate criminal cases involving minors, including issues of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(6, 10, 45)
Department-level courts	Prosecute child labor convictions.(10)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Population and Social Affairs	Develop and implement programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor.(10) The Ministry manages more than 450 child protection networks, covering 22 regions throughout the country, to protect children from abuse and exploitation.(6)

Law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor had approximately 100 inspectors in the field and 10 in training.(3, 4) Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of labor inspectors is inadequate. Although labor inspectors are generalists, they receive training on child labor and can conduct child labor inspections.(3) The staff of the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor’s Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE) includes three labor inspectors.(46) However, PACTE does not have program funding following budget cuts to the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor, whose total annual funding allocation in 2014 was 0.42 percent of the national budget.(4) Information is unavailable on the number, type, and quality of inspections; on the number of child labor law violations found; and on whether appropriate penalties were applied. Additionally, existing child labor databases managed by PACTE are not functional due to lack of funding.(10, 47) Reports indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to conduct effective child labor inspections and legal proceedings.(4, 47)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the National Police Force’s Morals and Minors Brigade (PMPM) had a headquarters and 15 regional units across Madagascar, employing a total of 145 agents.(28, 47) The Ministry of Justice trained criminal law enforcement officials on children’s rights, including on a module on human trafficking.(4) The overall budget allocation for the National Police during 2014 was 2.4 percent of the national budget. However, it is unclear what proportion of the budget may have been available to conduct child labor related investigations.(4) In 2014, the PMPM investigated an estimated 187 cases of child commercial sexual exploitation and 53 cases of child labor in domestic work. All these cases were referred for prosecution; however, research did not determine whether these cases led to convictions, or whether appropriate penalties were applied.(48) The PMPM received 815 complaints through the national child protection hotline; however, the number of calls involving child labor is unknown.(48) Reports indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to effectively conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.(4, 28)

Research did not find a formal referral mechanism in place between law enforcement agencies and social welfare services; however, victims are generally referred to regional child protection networks managed by the Ministry of Population and Social Affairs, or to NGOs depending on the case and location.(4, 6) From 2013 to 2014, a total of 8,103 child victims of various forms of abuse were referred to the Ministry of Population and Social Affairs’ 450 child protection networks, which provided protection and social services for children; however, the number of victims of the worst forms of child labor is unknown.(6, 47)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on the Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE)	Coordinate programs, advise on child labor legislation and regulations, and monitor and pursue the implementation of the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Led by the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor, with representatives from the Ministries of Education; Health; Energy; Mining; Tourism; Population and Social Affairs; Education; Agriculture, Livestock and Fisheries; Decentralization; Justice and Public Security.(10, 17, 44, 48) In 2014, CNLTE membership was broadened to include representatives from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs; Interior; Communication; Youth and Sports; and Technical Education and Vocational Training.(48)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Regional Child Labor Committees (CRLTE)	Coordinate, monitor, and evaluate all activities relating to the elimination of child labor at the regional level. The 10 regional committees identify activities to promote the elimination of child labor, as well as compile, analyze, and report the data gathered to the PACTE.(4, 44)
National Child Protection Committee	Guide national child protection policy and programs, and coordinate child protection activities. Chaired by the Minister of Population and Social Affairs and made up of a steering committee and a technical commission of specialists.(10, 20)
Ad Hoc Inter-Ministerial Anti-Trafficking Committee	Coordinate anti-trafficking in persons efforts in Madagascar.(6, 10) Chaired by the Office of the Prime Minister and includes representatives from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs; Civil Services and Labor; Population and Social Affairs; Justice, Interior; Education; and Health.(49)
Commission on Child Policy Reform (CRDE)	Coordinate and review national legislation and programs relating to children's rights.(4) Co-chaired by the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of Population and Social Affairs, and includes representatives from the Ministries of Education and Public Health.(48) Also includes nongovernmental stakeholders such as NGOs, international organizations, and social partners.(50)
National Independent Commission on Human Rights*	Promote and protect human rights and investigate human rights abuses, including those related to child labor. Chaired by the Office of the Prime Minister and includes representatives from the National Assembly, the Senate, and technical group of human rights specialists.(51)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2014, the National Committee on the Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE) met throughout the year to advise on child labor legislation and regulations, including working with the Commission on Child Policy Reform to revise the draft list of hazardous child labor activities.(4) Due to lack of funds, however, the CNLTE faced severe limits on its ability to follow the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor during the reporting period.(10) The Regional Child Labor Committees (CRLTE) were active to various extents; for example, the Regional Committee in the Sava region organized workshops to raise awareness of child labor issues among vanilla producers, in collaboration with the National Vanilla Platform (PNV).(4) As a result of these workshops, a code of conduct for the vanilla industry to address child labor has been developed, but it was not adopted during the reporting period.(47, 52) The Inter-Ministerial Anti-Trafficking Committee met on an informal basis to coordinate the Government's anti-trafficking efforts; however, the Government did not provide any funding to support the Committee's activities during the reporting period.(6) The National Child Protection Committee met during the year to implement awareness-raising campaigns on child abuse and commercial sexual exploitation.(4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Madagascar has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2004-2019)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by strengthening child labor laws, increasing awareness-raising campaigns, mobilizing funds for social program, and updating databases on child labor.(5, 17, 53)
Education for All Program (2013-2015)	Sets out a comprehensive map to improve the quality of, and access to, basic education and includes child labor concerns. Overseen by the Ministry of Education and supported by international donors.(5, 54)
Provisional Education Plan (2013-2015)	Integrates child labor issues into education policies. Developed by the Ministry of Education.(54)
UNDAF (2012-2014)	Includes strategies, such as promoting school attendance and training judges and police on child labor laws to protect children from human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, hazardous labor, and child domestic work.(31)
National Development Plan (2015-2016)†	Aims to promote sustainable development that reaches all regions and promotes social equality through access to quality education, technological innovation, and environmental sustainability. Overseen by the Ministry of Economy and Planning and includes a budget of $83,000 to specifically combat child labor.(4, 55)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2014, the Government drafted a National Action Plan to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons; however it had not been approved by the end of the reporting period.(42, 47) In addition, the Ministry of Tourism promulgated a Code of Conduct to combat child sexual exploitation in the hotel industry.(49, 56)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Madagascar funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Tackling Child Labor Through Education (TACKLE) Project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states. Aims to strengthen institutional capacity to formulate and implement child labor strategies, including boosting family incomes through the provision of inputs to increase agricultural productivity in Madagascar.(57)
Agir contre le travail domestique des enfants en Afrique et dans les pays de l'Union pour la Méditerranée (2011-2015)	$1.3 million, Government of France-funded, 3-year project that aims to combat child domestic labor in specific regions. In 2014, the project removed or prevented an estimated 125 children from engaging in domestic work in Amoron'i Mania region, and provided them with professional training and assistance in finding decent work.(4, 58)
Manjary Soa Center‡	Government program that provides support and services to child laborers in Antananarivo, reintegrates children under age 16 into the public education system, and provides tradecraft training to older children. In 2014, the Center removed 35 children from exploitative child labor.(4, 17, 45, 59)
UNICEF Education Support	$30 million, UNICEF-funded program to support the Government's interim plan on education.(46) Supports data collection, building classrooms, distributing school kits and payments to teachers, training teachers (on how to reduce risk of child labor), and providing emergency response. In 2014, a total of 400 new classrooms were built across the country.(4, 60)
Lutte pour la Protection des Droits des Enfants contre la Violence et les Pires Formes de travail des enfants, victimes de l'exploitation sexuelle des enfants à des fins commerciales (2014-2015)†	$150,000, UNICEF-funded program that aims to combat the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, in the regions of Atsimo-Andrefana and Diana.(58)
National Database	UNICEF-funded, national database managed by the Ministry of Population and Social Affairs that gathers data from nine regional child protection networks.(28)
Awareness Raising in Sakaraha‡	Government program that raises awareness about the hazards children face while working in mines by using radio announcements and through talks with the local chief (fokontany).(5)
Public Investment Program for Social Action (PIP)‡	Government program that supports school attendance and training for street children and aims to remove 40 children a year from the worst forms of child labor.(17, 61)
Inclusive Education Support*‡	Government programs to provide back-to-school grants, awareness-raising activities, in-kind support to schools, and access to income-generating activities that target children traditionally excluded from schools.(31)
Center for Socioeconomic Promotion in Ambositra, Rakingaskara*‡	Vocational training in carpentry for young boys sponsored by the Ministry of Population and Social Affairs.(5)
Vocational Training and Agricultural Productivity Improvement Program*	$35 million, International Fund for Agricultural Development-funded loan and grant program that provides vulnerable groups, including uneducated young people and young women who are heads of households, with professional and vocational training to improve productivity and the quality of agricultural products to increase household incomes. Estimated Government contribution of $7.9 million.(62, 63)
UN WFP*	UN-implemented program that provides school feeding support.(64)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Some child labor-related programming was reinstated towards the middle of 2014 after the democratically-elected government took office in January 2014.(10) The Government does not have programs that promote awareness on the traditional practice of tsenan'ampela, which in some cases has led girls into commercial sexual exploitation.(20) Research found that basic health and social services available to victims of the worst forms of child labor are not adequate to meet current needs.<sup>(10)</sup> Although Madagascar has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem fully, particularly in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, and mining.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Madagascar (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that law prohibits hazardous occupations and activities in all relevant child labor sectors, including agriculture.	2014
Enforcement	Increase the funding, training and number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor in order to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2009 – 2014
	Establish a referral mechanism between law enforcement agencies and the Ministry of Population and Social Affairs to ensure victims of child labor receive appropriate social services.	2014
	Collect and make publicly available information on the funding levels for law enforcement agencies, law violations and penalties assessed, as well as number of labor inspections and criminal convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2014
	Disaggregate complaints made by child protection hotlines by number of children exploited in child labor.	2013 – 2014
	Fully fund existing child labor databases.	2009 – 2014
Coordination	Ensure that the various mechanisms have the appropriate funding to effectively coordinate efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.	2014
Social Programs	Ensure that social protection systems are properly funded and adequate to meet the needs of victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2014
	Improve access to education, including by providing subsidies for school fees, food, school supplies, and implementing a program to address the lack of school infrastructure and birth registration.	2011 – 2014
	Assess the impact that existing programs may have on child labor.	2010 – 2014
	Expand programs to address child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation and mining.	2014
	Increase awareness of the possible use of traditional cultural practices that might lead to commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2013 – 2014

In 2014, Malawi made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government continued to support social programs to address child labor, particularly in the tobacco sector, and expanded its social cash transfer program by an additional 34,000 households. It also approved a Child Protection Strategic Plan. However, children in Malawi continue to engage in child labor, including in agriculture and fishing. The Government has not finalized or fully implemented key legislation or policies protecting children from the worst forms of child labor, including the Child Labor Policy and the Child Protection Policy.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Malawi are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and fishing. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Malawi.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	20.6 (885,333)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	81.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	22.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		74.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)
Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Integrated Household Survey 3, 2010-2011.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting and harvesting tea, cotton,* and sugar* (1, 6, 7)
	Planting and harvesting tobacco,† clearing land, building tobacco-drying sheds, cutting and bundling, weeding and plucking raw tobacco (8-12)
	Catching, processing,† and selling fish* (2, 13, 14)
	Herding livestock* (7, 15, 16)
Industry	Quarrying* and mining*† (3)
	Construction,*† activities unknown (3)
Services	Domestic work in third-party homes (3, 6, 17)
	Ganyu (a form of casual labor) (16, 18)
	Begging† (16, 19, 20)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Vending and wholesaling (3, 6, 16)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3, 6, 20)
	Herding goats* and cattle,* farming (predominantly tobacco); fishing; domestic work; and work in restaurants, brothels, and bars as a result of human trafficking (1, 13, 17, 19, 21-23)
	Forced begging (19, 23)
	Use in illicit activities, including crimes (18, 19, 23)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Children are engaged in hazardous work in the production of tobacco.(3, 19) Children who handle tobacco risk illness from nicotine absorption, including green tobacco sickness.(10, 24) Children are also exposed to pesticides and chemicals.(8, 24) Some children work alongside family members who are tenants on tobacco farms.(16) In this tenancy system, tenants' pay is based on the quantity and quality of tobacco sold to farm owners after the harvest season. Tenants must pay off loans incurred during the growing season, and those who are unable to repay these debts may face debt bondage.(25, 26)

Most human trafficking of children for labor in Malawi is internal.(19) Children, typically boys, are trafficked from southern and central Malawi to tobacco farms in Malawi's northern and central regions.(19) Children are trafficked from Malawi to Tanzania for child labor in fishing.(13, 27) Children who are trafficked may be charged for their transport, food, clothing, and housing; they may also be forced to work in debt bondage without the resources to return home or to provide for themselves.(19)

Limited evidence suggests that girls from rural areas have been promised clothing and lodging from brothel owners, for which they are later coerced to engage in commercial sexual exploitation to pay off their debts.(19)

Although primary education is free, barriers to education include families' inability to pay required school-related expenses such as books and uniforms.(1, 28)

Children with family members with HIV/AIDS may assume responsibility as head of their households, sometimes becoming the primary caretaker for a sick parent and having to work to support their families. These children, especially those who are orphaned, are at increased risk of entering into the worst forms of child labor.(29-31)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Malawi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 21 of the Employment Act No. 6 of 2000 (32)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	16/18	Section 22 of the Employment Act No. 6 of 2000; Section 23 of the Constitution; Section 2 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act, 2010 (32-34)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Sections 1-9 and Paragraph 6 Sections 1-6 of the Employment (Prohibition of Hazardous Work for Children) Order, 2012 (35)

While Section 23 of the Constitution states that children under age 16 are entitled to protection from hazardous work, Section 22 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for hazardous labor at 18.(32, 33, 38, 39) Additionally, the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act defines children as persons 16 and under, and therefore its restriction on hazardous work does not protect children ages 16–18. Consequently, there is some confusion regarding the legal minimum age for hazardous work.(34, 38)

Section 21 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for employment at 14 in agricultural, industrial, or nonindustrial work.(32) The minimum age is not extended to workers in third-party homes, such as in domestic work, or non-commercial agriculture where children are known to work.(32, 38, 40) Moreover, Section 79 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act includes protections for children through age 16 from being trafficked.(34, 41) However, children age 17 are not protected. While the Penal Code prohibits pornography and criminalizes the procurement of prostitution, this provision only applies to girls, and the law does not specifically prohibit the sale of a child into prostitution.(36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)—Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Monitor and implement child labor law compliance through child labor monitoring visits.(42)
MOL	Perform inspections and investigate all labor complaints, including those related to child labor.(3)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Enforce human trafficking laws and prosecute trafficking in persons.(27)
District Labor Offices	Enforce child labor laws at the district level.(3)
Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare—Department of Child Development	Provide child protection and development services.(43)
Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs	Prosecute criminal offenders.(44)

Law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In January 2014, MOL employed 29 DLOs and 120 labor inspectors, 60 of whom are dedicated to monitoring child labor.(3, 20) In 2014, the Child Labor Unit (CLU) had three full-time employees based in Lilongwe.(20, 40) Each of Malawi's administrative districts employed a District Labor Officer (DLO), who was responsible for all labor issues including child labor.(3, 20, 40) MOL was allocated roughly $1.8 million for recurrent expenses; of this amount, $24,700 was allocated for the CLU, which was insufficient due to the scale of child labor.(20) District labor offices are directly funded from the Treasury.(3) According to MOL officials, DLOs were limited in their ability to carry out monitoring and reporting due to budget and resource constraints, including a lack of transportation.(3, 20, 40) The Ministry advocated for the CLU to be upgraded from a unit into a child labor department, which would enable it to have staff members focused on children in each of the country's districts.(40)

Approximately two hundred labor inspections were carried out in 2014.(20) Most labor inspections were conducted in response to reported labor law violations.(19) In the agricultural sector, inspectors focused on large, commercial farms due to limited resources.(3) The Government supports a child protection helpline operated by an NGO that handles approximately 5,000 calls per month, and identifies cases of child sexual and labor exploitation. Another child helpline in Kasungu District uses Lilongwe-based government operators.(19) Research did not find information on whether a formal referral mechanism exists between the MOL and the Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare, or, despite having child protection hotlines, the number of calls related specifically to child labor.

The CLU reported that there were 137 child labor violations in Kasungu District (a tobacco-growing region) in 2014 and 8 in Lilongwe District, but could not give exact figures for the whole country.(20) All of the cases were settled out of court, and the employers paid all wages due, as well as repatriation costs.(20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information regarding the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor, the training provided to these investigators, and on the number and quality of investigations. While reports on several human trafficking cases were consolidated, the police did not systematically report child labor cases.(45) The Government operates a referral process to transfer human trafficking victims detained by law enforcement authorities, although services remain limited.(45) The Government operates a social rehabilitation center providing assistance to several child trafficking victims in Lilongwe, however the quality of the facility has been reported to be very poor.(45)

According to the Malawi Police Service's law enforcement data for two of Malawi's 28 districts, 25 trafficking offenders were convicted in 2014; however, it is not clear that all of these cases involved child trafficking victims. Reported penalties for convicted traffickers included fines and prison sentences of up to 36 months.(45) In addition, during 2014, Phalombe District police reported 13 investigations involving 31 suspects and 124 child trafficking victims. In Phalombe, 11 cases resulted in conviction, with sentences ranging from 15 to 36 months' imprisonment with hard labor.(45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Provide policy guidance to support the elimination of child labor and implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP). Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, members include representatives from government ministries, trade unions, employers, development partners, and civil society organizations.(20, 31, 46)
National Technical Working Group on Child Labor and Protection	Oversee child protection issues. Includes representatives from the Government, international organizations, development partners, and NGOs, and is chaired by the Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability, and Social Welfare.(3, 19, 20)
District Child Protection Committees	Coordinate all child protection activities at the district level and improve local coordination on child protection issues. May be combined with a district orphan and vulnerable child committee and a district committee on child rights.(19, 20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Malawi has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Child Labour for Malawi (2010-2016)	Assigns roles and responsibilities for each ministry in charge of implementing child labor policies, provides a comprehensive framework to reduce the worst forms of child labor, and proposes concrete activities to support policies to combat child labor.(29, 47)
Child Protection Strategic Plan†	Outlines the responsibilities of the MOL, Malawi Police Service, and the Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare to coordinate efforts combatting child labor.(20)
National Youth Policy*	Includes strategies targeting youth ages 14–25, including creating more educational and training opportunities.(3, 48, 49)
UNDAF (2012-2016)	Recognizes child labor as a common constraint to the creation of decent and productive employment. Proposes strategies to address child labor, including enforcement of existing labor laws and enactment of the pending legislation and policies.(50, 51)
Malawi Growth and Development Strategy II (MGDS II) (2011-2016)	Includes strategies to eliminate child labor, such as integrating child labor issues into development initiatives and interventions; highlights that poverty is the root cause of child labor.(3, 50) To ensure consistency across policies the MOL is incorporating child labor into all the sectors of MGDS II.(3, 52)
National Education Sector Plan (2008-2017)*	Provides a framework for quality and relevant education to Malawians, including providing technical and vocational training and education for youth.(53)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The National Child Labor Policy, which focuses on the issue of child labor and provides Government, civil society, and other partners with a framework to implement child labor programs and activities, awaits Cabinet approval and is not yet in effect.(3, 20) The Government has not finalized or fully implemented the Child Protection Policy, which outlines the Government's child protection strategy.(20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Malawi funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP) (2013-2017)	USDOL-funded, research project implemented by ILO in 10 countries, including Malawi, to increase the knowledge base around child labor by collecting new data, analyzing existing data, and building capacity to conduct research in this area.(54) During the reporting period, the ILO and the MOL prepared for the 2015 execution of the second National Child Labor Survey.(20)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project (2011-2016)	USDOL-funded project implemented by ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by The Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Malawi.(55)
Child Labor Elimination Actions for Real Change (2011-2015)	$8 million Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing (ECLT)-funded, 4-year project that contributes to the elimination of hazardous child labor in tobacco-growing areas in Malawi within the context of the Child Labor NAP for Malawi. Targets 10,000 children for prevention from child labor.(3, 20, 56)
Achieving Reduction of Child Labor in Support of Education (2012-2014)	Japan Tobacco International (JTI)-funded, 3-year project that provides strategies to improve livelihoods for families through training in agribusiness and entrepreneurship; raises awareness on child labor; and provides education support.(12, 20)
Program to Reduce WFCL in Tobacco-Growing Communities in Malawi (2011-2015)	Combined $4.5 million JTI-funded, 4-year project to reduce child labor in tobacco communities in Malawi, Zambia, and Brazil.(57)
Project on Combating Child Labor in the Tobacco Industry	$3 million JTI-funded project in partnership with UNDP and the African Development Bank that addresses child labor in the tobacco industry through public-private partnerships.(3)

Program	Description
Child Labor Monitoring System (CLMS)‡	MOL system in pilot districts to identify working children and collect data on school attendance and other data points.(20)
National Social Cash Transfer‡	Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare program that supports low-income families in high-risk districts to enable their children to stay in school.(3, 58, 59) In fiscal year 2014, the Government expanded the program to 304,534 beneficiary households at an annual cost of $65 million.(60) Research has shown a decrease child labor rates as a result of participation in this program.(61, 62)
Malawi Decent Work Country Program (2011-2016)	Seeks the elimination of the worst forms of child labor and targets youth, women, and people with disabilities for creating more and better employment and income-generating opportunities.(40, 50, 63)
Malawi Social Action Fund III and IV*	MASAF III was a $51 million World Bank-funded 6-year project, ending in June 2014, that provided loans for community development and social support programs.(64, 65) Succeeded by MASAF IV, a $32.8 million World Bank-funded 4-year project that provides loans for community development and social support programs including work opportunities, skill-building, and cash transfers, in October 2014.(20)
Anti-Human Trafficking Project	Salvation Army–implemented project that provides shelter, rehabilitation, and training for victims of human trafficking.(19)
Shelter Program‡	Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare program that provides shelter for children in Lilongwe, and that takes in trafficked and street children.(3)
School Feeding Program*	World Food Program and U.S. Department of Agriculture-funded program provides meals to help keep children in school.(3, 66)
Birth Registration Program*‡	EU- and UNICEF-funded program that ensures nearly all health facilities in Lilongwe register children at birth and supports government electronic storage of birth data collected at the district level. The Government's National Registration Bureau initiated hospital birth registration in Zomba and Mulanje Districts.(19) The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) supported birth registration in Chitipa, Ntcheu, and Blantyre districts.(20)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Malawi.

Although Malawi has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, including agriculture and fishing.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Maldives made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Family and Child Protection Unit established four new “safe homes” to provide short-term protection for women and children. Anti-trafficking units, consisting of 10 officers dedicated to investigating human trafficking, were created in the Maldives Police Service (MPS) and the Department of Immigration and Emigration (DIE). The Government also continued to fund and participate in programs to improve access to education. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Maldives are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The Government has not determined specific hazardous occupations or activities that are prohibited for children and the compulsory education age of 13 leaves children ages 13 to 15 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Maldives are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Maldives. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	3.9 (2,364)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	79.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	4.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2009, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2009.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing,* activities unknown (7)
Services	Domestic work* (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1-4)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

There is a lack of current data on child labor in Maldives and a national survey on child labor has not been conducted. Some girls from Bangladesh and Maldives are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation to Malé, the capital, but evidence of the problem is limited.(1, 2, 8, 9) The Maldives Human Rights Commission is assessing the scope of the trafficking in persons problem in the country, but its findings have not yet been published.(10, 11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Maldives has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Maldives

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Section 6 of the Employment Act; Sections 26 and 27 of the Law on the Protection of the Rights of Children (12, 13)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 7 of the Employment Act; Sections 26 and 27 of the Law on the Protection of the Rights of Children (12, 13)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 25 of the Constitution; Section 3 of the Employment Act (12, 14)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 12–15 of the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act (15)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 17, 18, and 19 of the Special Provisions Act to Deal with Child Sex Abuse Offenders; Ministry of Justice Circular on the Penalty for Fornication and Sexual Offenders (8, 16)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 133 of the Drugs Act (17)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Law on the Protection of the Rights of Children (11)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	13	Legislation title unknown (18)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 36 of the Constitution (14)

* No conscription (19)

While the legal framework prohibits the employment of children in work that may be detrimental to their health and safety, the Government has not determined specific hazardous occupations and/or activities that are prohibited for children.<sup>(2)</sup> While the Drugs Act prohibits the use of a child in drug trafficking, research found no evidence that the use of children in illicit activities, in general, is prohibited.<sup>(17)</sup> The law making education compulsory only until the age of 13 leaves children ages 13 to 15 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to be in school, yet they are not permitted to work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Relations Authority (LRA), Ministry of Economic Development (MED)	Enforce the child labor provisions of the Employment Act. Assess minor fines and make recommendations to the Minister of Human Resources on additional fines or other actions to penalize violators.(9)
Family and Child Protection Unit, Maldives Police Service (MPS)	Investigate complaints of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Refer cases to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecution.(2, 9)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecute crimes, including those involving the worst forms of child labor.(9)
Family Child Protection Services (FCPS), Ministry of Law and Gender (MLG)	Receive referrals of children who have been exploited, including in child prostitution, and provide care for such victims.(9)
Department of Immigration and Emigration (DIE)	Maintain a blacklist of employers who violate any provision of the Employment Act; prohibit blacklisted employers from hiring new workers until violations are corrected. Identify victims of trafficking in coordination with the MPS.(9)
Anti-Trafficking Units, MPS and the DIE	Investigate human trafficking-related offences and enforce laws prohibiting trafficking in persons.(20)

Research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Labor Relations Authority (LRA) employed nine labor officers and four investigation officers to inspect for any violations of the Employment Act. The LRA officers carried out 120 inspections and did not detect any child labor law violations.(21) Labor inspectors did not receive any training during the reporting period.(21)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the anti-trafficking units in the Maldives Police Service consisted of seven officers, including three female officers.(20, 21) The Family and Child Protection Unit employed 25 officers to process child abuse cases in Malé, as well as an unknown number of officers in police stations throughout the country's many islands. The Prosecutor General's Office employed 45 prosecutors for all areas of its work, across the country.(9) Investigators do not have sufficient funding and resources, such as office facilities and transportation.(9) Police and other officials do not have adequate training on procedures for identifying trafficking victims and providing referrals for protective services, including for children.(1) Information is not available on the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions of crimes involving the worst forms of child labor for the reporting period.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established a committee to coordinate actions regarding human trafficking, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Human Trafficking Steering Committee	Coordinate counter-trafficking activities and implement the country's Anti-Trafficking National Action Plan under MED leadership.(9, 22) Members include the MPS, the Supreme Court, the People's Parliament ( Majlis ), the Attorney General's Office, the Prosecutor General's Office, the Human Rights Commission, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Home Affairs, the DIE, the Customs Service, the Ministry of Islamic Affairs, and the NGO Advocating the Rights of Children.(8, 15)

In early 2014, the Anti-Human Trafficking Steering Committee met a number of times to finalize National Guidelines and draft the standard operating procedures for assisting trafficking victims.(8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Maldives has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Maldives

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Anti-Trafficking National Action Plan (2013–2014)	Sets out the Government’s goals to combat human trafficking, including to enact legislation prohibiting trafficking, strengthen interagency coordination, raise awareness, build capacity, improve border control, and expand international cooperation.(8)
UNDP Country Program for the Maldives (2011–2015)*	Aims to support ILO in developing a Decent Work framework to address youth unemployment. Aims to promote equitable access to justice and rule of law by increasing the capacity of the Prosecutor General’s Office, including training on human rights issues.(23)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

Although the Government of Maldives has adopted the Anti-Trafficking National Action Plan, research found no evidence of a policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Maldives funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
FCPS Shelters and Rehabilitation Centers*	MLG-operated centers on many of the country’s islands provide services such as temporary shelter, vocational training, and rehabilitation and counseling for children in need, which could include children rescued from abusive work situations.(4, 10, 24) The FCPS established four new “safe homes” in early 2014 to provide short-term protection for women and children.(9)
Trafficking in Persons Victims Shelter	IOM-funded, Government-operated shelter on Villingili Island dedicated to trafficking victims.(8)
Blue Ribbon Campaign Against Human Trafficking‡	Government campaign, implemented by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, that aims to raise awareness of human trafficking in Maldives among students and the business community.(25)
Child Help Line‡	Government-maintained hotline used to report cases of child abuse and general issues that children face.(26)
UNICEF Country Program*	UNICEF program that works with the Government to monitor schools to ensure that authorities and communities maintain safe and sanitary learning environments for children.(27) Works to build the capacity of the FCPS staff to protect children from violence and abuse. Advocates for increased protections for children who are victims and witnesses of crimes.(27)
Enhancing Education Development Project*‡	World Bank and Government of Maldives project that aims to strengthen access to and the quality of primary and secondary school education in Maldives. Five-year project funded with approximately $10 million from the World Bank and $1 million from the Government of Maldives.(28)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is partially funded by the Government of Maldives.

Social workers employed by Ministry of Law and Gender are in need of additional training.(9) Existing social programs do not specifically address the worst forms of child labor in the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Mali

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Mali made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted the National Policy for Child Promotion and Protection, which aims to strengthen national policies and programs to protect children from violence, human trafficking, and exploitative work. The Government also participated in several programs to combat the worst forms of child labor and assist vulnerable households. In northern Mali, the Government made progress in providing access to education by returning 83 percent of children to school and reopening 74 percent of schools for the 2013/2014 academic year. However, children in Mali are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in gold mining. Children were also abducted and forcibly recruited by armed rebel and extremist Islamic militia groups and some of these children were detained and charged with crimes for their association with these groups. Laws relating to the worst forms of child labor do not provide adequate coverage and gaps in enforcement have left children unprotected.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mali are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture.(1-4) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in gold mining.(2, 4-7) Children were also abducted and forcibly recruited for use in armed conflict in northern Mali by armed rebels and extremist Islamic militia groups.(4, 8-13) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Mali.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, especially of the Bellah community (also known as black Tuaregs, who were former slaves), are subject to hereditary slavery in northern Mali.(2, 16, 26) In addition, children, particularly those of the Songhai ethnicity, work in debt bondage in the northern salt mines of Taoudenni.(2, 16) Boys, placed in the care of Koranic teachers for the purpose of education, are forced by their teachers to beg on the street or to work in fields; they must then surrender the money they have earned to their teachers.(2, 4, 25, 33) Other Koranic teachers force the boys to perform agricultural labor on their land.(3, 4, 25)

The Government engaged in peace negotiations with the armed groups of northern Mali after signing a ceasefire agreement in May 2014.(8, 34-36) Despite this progress, intermittent fighting and violence continued throughout 2014, resulting in the killing and displacement of children.(8, 12, 13, 36-38) Children were also abducted; forcibly recruited; and trained by armed rebel and extremist Islamic militia groups, including the National Movement for the Liberation of Azawad (MNLA), the High Council for the Unity of Azawad (HCUA), the Arab Movement of Azawad (MAA), the Allies Tuareg Self-Defense Group (GATIA), al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM), Ansar al-Dine, and the Movement for Unity and Jihad in West Africa (MUJAO) in northern Mali.(8-13) Former child combatants who were reunited with their families suffered from psychological trauma and physical ailments.(38, 39) Reports also indicate that in 2014, children have been kept in state-owned adult prisons and charged with committing terrorism against the Government due to their past involvement with extremist groups during the 2012-2013 armed conflict.(8, 12, 13, 38, 40)

In northern Mali, the Government made progress in providing access to education by returning 83 percent of children to school and reopening 74 percent of schools for the 2013/2014 academic year.(8, 39, 41) However, educational infrastructure is still damaged as a result of the conflict; many teachers and students remain displaced; some teachers in insecure areas feel it is unsafe to return to school; and schools in some areas have not paid teachers.(8, 39, 41-43)

The Constitution provides free and compulsory education.(2, 44) However, parents are expected to pay school fees for registration, uniforms, books, and materials. These expenses may deter families from sending their children to school.(2) In addition, evidence suggests that incidences of physical, psychological, and sexual abuse, including corporal punishment and the rape of students by teachers, prevent some children from remaining in school.(45, 46) Due to societal discrimination at the local level, some Arab, Peul, and Bellah children are denied access to school based on their ethnicity.(2, 47)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article L. 187 of the Labor Code (48)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Hazardous Occupation List; Article 189.14 of the Labor Code (48, 49)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupation List; Article 189 of the Labor Code (48, 49)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article L.6 of the Labor Code (48)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 244 of the Penal Code; Article 7 of the Trafficking in Persons Law (50, 51)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 228 of the Penal Code (50)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code (44, 50)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code (44, 52)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 26 and 34 of the Law of Education 99-046 (53)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 18 of the Constitution (54)

Malian law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. For example, article 189.35 of the Labor Code allows children under the minimum age to work with the approval of the Minister of Labor.(48, 55) In addition, children working in the informal sector, including in non-contractual agricultural and domestic work, do not benefit from the same protections under the Labor Code as children working in the formal sector.(56)

Although Mali’s Hazardous Occupations List prohibits activities for children under age 18, Decree 96-178 from June 1996, which is still in force, permits children ages 16 to 17 to perform certain hazardous activities. The decree conflicts with the protections provided in the Hazardous Occupations List, leaving the possibility for children to work in hazardous activities.(49, 55)

The Child Protection Code provides protection for children under age 18, while the Penal Code establishes criminal penalties for several of the worst forms of child labor.(44, 50) For example, articles 50 and 58 of the Child Protection Code identify begging as a form of economic exploitation of children, while article 183 of the Penal Code provides for punishment for engaging a child in begging. However, the Penal Code does not provide penalties for some of the prohibitions enumerated in the Child Protection Code.(44, 50) For example, although article 17 of the Child Protection Code prohibits children from participating in armed conflicts or joining the armed forces, articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code only provide penalties for those recruiting and enlisting children under age 15.(44, 50) Moreover, although article 18 of the Child Protection Code prohibits the use of children in organized crime, no law prohibits the use of a child for other illicit activities.(28, 33, 44)

Article 228 of the Penal Code prohibits the moral corruption of children; however, this prohibition only applies to children under age 13.(50) Article 225 of the Penal Code forbids third-party involvement in prostitution (pimping) and the sexual slavery of children; however, the law that prohibits these acts is only applicable to girls.(50) Furthermore, since provisions of the Penal Code only apply to cases of pimping, those soliciting or purchasing sex from minors are not punishable under this law. Article 57 of the Child Protection Code explicitly broadens the definition of sexual exploitation, including prostitution, to encompass both girls and boys.(44, 50) However, there are no penalties prescribed by this Code.(50)

Although the Penal Code bans slavery, no penalties are outlined for this offense.(4, 50) Forced labor is prohibited under the Labor Code; however, the punishment for forced labor is only a fine and/or imprisonment for 15 days to 6 months.(48) Although the exploitation of children, including slavery and commercial sexual exploitation is prohibited by article 7 of the Trafficking in Persons Law, it is unclear if these acts are prohibited as standalone offenses, outside of the context of human trafficking.(51)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Youth, Labor, Employment, and Professional Training/ National Directorate of Labor	Enforce child labor laws, investigate complaints, and perform unannounced labor inspections.(2, 4, 30)
Ministry of Justice	Initiate and coordinate the implementation of child labor laws, together with the Ministries of Internal Security, Defense, Territorial Administration, and the Promotion of Children.(4, 57)
Morals Brigade of the National Police	Enforce laws relating to human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Housed under the Ministry of Internal Security.(4, 30)
Judicial Police	Enforce laws relating to the use of children in illicit activities. Housed under the Ministry of Internal Security.(30)
Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family	Develop and implement programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor.(4, 58)

Areas of northern Mali were under rebel control through early 2014, before the Government assumed control as a result of the May 2014 ceasefire agreement.(34, 35) During that time, the Government of Mali was unable to enforce laws in the northern, rebel-controlled areas.(59-61) Criminal law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the National Directorate of Labor employed 54 labor inspectors. Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of labor inspectors is inadequate.(4, 30) Labor inspectors did not receive training on child labor issues during 2014.(62) In addition to inspection duties, inspectors provide dispute settlement and conciliation. These additional responsibilities detract from labor inspectors' abilities to complete workplace inspections.(63) The additional responsibilities also make it difficult for the small number of labor inspectors to enforce child labor laws effectively.(48, 55) None of the labor inspectors specialize in child labor. However, one person in each region is designated as the point of contact for the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor.(4) Research shows that, despite decentralization efforts, funds are rarely allocated to regional offices.(4) Information on the number, type and quality of inspections and child labor law violations found, and whether appropriate penalties were applied is unavailable. Labor inspections typically are limited to large firms in the formal employment sector. The majority of children work outside the formal sector, including in agriculture.(4) Research did not find a referral mechanism between the National Directorate of Labor and the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family to ensure victims of child labor receive appropriate social services. Reports indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to conduct effective child labor inspections and legal proceedings.(4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Morals Brigade employed 28 staff, including two captains and nine investigators.<sup>(4)</sup> Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of criminal law enforcement agents is inadequate. Morals Brigade officers did not receive training on the worst forms of child labor in 2014.<sup>(4)</sup> Although the Morals Brigade was created to handle criminal affairs involving children, the main police force has no explicit obligation to turn children’s cases over to the Morals Brigade. As a result, many children’s issues are handled by members of the general police force who may not have received special training on children’s affairs.<sup>(64)</sup> In 2014, the Morals Brigade received 120 liters of fuel every three months and a budget of $1,200.<sup>(4)</sup> Provisions were insufficient. For example, the 120 liters of fuel typically covered two months of transportation.<sup>(4)</sup>

In 2014, the Morals Brigade did not report cases involving child labor, although it investigated 114 cases of child related offenses, including 51 cases of child sexual exploitation.<sup>(4)</sup> The Morals Brigade generally conduct inspections based on complaints received; however, investigators also conducted unannounced inspections in bars and brothels. The Morals Brigade rescued three children who were victims of forced labor perpetrated by Koranic teachers.<sup>(4)</sup> However, information on the number of arrests, convictions and penalties assessed during the reporting period is unavailable. In addition, the Trafficking in Person’s Law, adopted in 2012, has yet to be distributed to judges to ensure their knowledge of the law.<sup>(65)</sup> Reports indicate that, because of the political instability hindering law and judicial enforcement in northern Mali, the prevalence of hereditary slavery has worsened since the conflict began.<sup>(66)</sup>

Mali maintains an informal system through which the police transfers children to NGOs and records such transfers. However, Mali does not have a formal method for transferring vulnerable children who are detained by the police and the Morals Brigade to NGOs.<sup>(16, 67)</sup> The Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family participates in a network of NGOs and of UN bodies that coordinate to provide care specifically to human trafficking victims. Organizations within the network provide transportation, food, housing, counseling, training, repatriation, and reintegration services.<sup>(68)</sup> In 2014, three children linked to extremist Islamic militia groups were rescued by international forces and placed in a UNICEF-supported center for care.<sup>(4, 57)</sup> However, some children in the shelter are facing charges for rebellion, criminal association, threatening state security, and conspiring against the state.<sup>(69)</sup> In addition, as of January 2014, nine children remained in detention. Some children were detained with adults.<sup>(70-72)</sup> Evidence does not reveal any efforts made by the Government of Mali to prosecute offenders of or enforce laws relating to the use of child soldiers.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE)	Coordinate Mali’s efforts to eliminate child labor, especially its worst forms . <sup>(73, 74)</sup> The Committee is chaired by the Ministry of Labor and includes representatives from the Ministries of Economy and Finances; for the Promotion of Women, Children, and Family Affairs; of Education; of Public Works; and of Employment and Professional Training. <sup>(73, 75)</sup>
National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices	Coordinate government efforts to combat human trafficking. Has 43 members, comprising various government agencies, civil society groups, and NGOs. <sup>(16, 30, 76)</sup>
Inter-Ministerial Committee to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children.	Conduct awareness-raising campaigns to prevent the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict. Conduct joint missions with international partners to determine the presence of children in armed conflict. <sup>(77)</sup>

In 2014, the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE), in collaboration with international partners, organized a training on child labor with local NGOs in Mopti.<sup>(4)</sup> CNLTE member agencies under the National Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP) held regular meetings. However, the effectiveness of such mechanism was hampered by budget constraints.<sup>(4)</sup> Additionally, although the CNLTE is the official coordinating body for child labor issues, complex divisions and lack of coordination between government structures complicated the efforts to address child labor. Currently, the Ministry of Justice; the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family; the Ministry of Internal Security; and the Ministry of Labor share this responsibility.(30, 78) The National Coordinating Committee for the Fight against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices met throughout the year to draft a national strategy to combat trafficking in persons.(65) There is no evidence that the Inter-Ministerial Committee to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children conducted meetings, took action to implement awareness-raising campaigns, or conducted joint missions to determine the presence of child labor in self-defense militias during the reporting period.(57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mali has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP) (2011-2021)	Aims to eradicate the worst forms of child labor by 2015, and all exploitative child labor by 2020.(18, 24, 79) Calls for improving the judicial framework; increasing awareness on child labor; withdrawing children from the worst forms of child labor; providing these children with appropriate remediation services; and improving the livelihoods of families.(18) Falls under the direction of the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor and is to be implemented in conjunction with 14 other ministries, including the Ministries of Education; Agriculture; Mining; Justice; and for the Promotion Women, Children, and the Family.(18)
National Policy for Child Promotion and Protection (2015-2019)†	Aims to enhance the legal framework to protect children from violence, human trafficking, and exploitative work.(80, 81) The National Policy is overseen by the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family and includes a National Action Plan that will be implemented in 2015.(80, 82)
PRSP (2012-2017)*	Provides a framework for Mali's growth and poverty reduction agenda.(83) Aims to improve access to and the quality of education; increase food security; increase employment opportunities for youth; and increase protection for and programs to assist women, children, and vulnerable groups. Contains specific plans to develop an emergency plan for children involved in armed conflict.(83)
Inter-Ministerial Circular*	Provides a framework for the Government of Mali on the prevention, protection, and reintegration of children in armed conflict.(77, 84)
Protocol on the Release and Transfer of Children Associated with Armed Groups and Armed Forces*	A UN-signed protocol agreement that highlights the responsibility of the Government of Mali to transfer children associated with armed groups to either the Social Services Department or to UNICEF.(30, 85)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although the National Plan to Combat Child Labor was launched in 2011, there is no evidence that implementation of the plan has begun.(4) The Inter-Ministerial Circular (Circular) references article 28 of the Penal Code, which states that penalties prescribed by the Penal Code are not applicable to crimes committed out of self-defense or under a force that could not be resisted. The Circular states that article 28 of the Penal Code is applicable to children involved in armed conflict. (50, 86). However, the Circular does not define the age range of children it covers. Given the discrepancy between the Penal Code and the Child Code regarding the definition of children involved in armed conflict, the lack of a defined age range in this Circular may leave children ages 16-17 unprotected.(86) The Circular calls on families, local authorities, and child protection agencies to work together to ensure children withdrawn from armed forces are disarmed, demobilized, and reintegrated or placed in another location of their choosing.(86) However, these efforts are insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem. The Government of Mali also drafted a National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons; however, it was not approved during the reporting period.(65)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Mali funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Back to School Campaign*	$4 million, UNICEF-implemented project to return children and teachers to school following the 2012-2013 violence. Supports 500,000 students and 9,000 teachers with school kits and teacher training as they return to school.(87-89)
Out of School Youth Program (2010-2015)	$30 million, USAID-funded, 5-year project implemented by the Education Development Center.(90) Provides education and technical and work readiness training to approximately 10,000 out-of-school youth (ages 14–25). Aims to improve youth employment prospects and currently operates in Kayes, Sikasso, and Timbuktu regions. Implemented in partnership with the private sector and the Ministries of Youth, Education, and Employment.(87, 91)
Action Plan for the Prevention, the Retrieval from, and the Social and Professional Reinsertion of Thousands of Children at Risk or Victims of the Worst Forms of Labor in Small Artisanal Mining in the Sikasso Region	$120,000, 2-year, ILO-implemented project to partially implement one of six components of Mali’s NAP. Targeted child labor in artisanal gold mining in the Sikasso region.(57)
Support Program to Expand the Observation and Monitoring of the Work and Trafficking System of Children in the Sikasso Region of Mali‡	$120,000, 2-year, ILO-implemented project that provides support to the CNLTE to implement a Child Labor Monitoring System in the districts of Bougouni, Kolondieba, and Sikasso. These funds complement the $150,000 provided by the Government of Mali for this purpose.(57)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (2011-2015)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor in Mali.(92) During 2014, three workshops were held to train agricultural extension services on child labor.(92)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I and II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(93, 94)
Tackling Child Labor through Education (TACKLE) Project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states.(92) Aims to improve country-level child labor and education legal framework, strengthen institutional capacity to formulate, and implement child labor strategies and programs to combat child labor in Mali.(92)
Combating Child Labor through Skills Training for Older Children (2014-2015)†	Government of Netherlands-funded, 1-year, $2.6 million project to combat child labor by improving access to education. The project includes a component on design of skills and livelihoods training programs for out-of-school youth.(95)
Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in West Africa (2009-2014)	Government of Spain-funded, 5-year, $5.4 million project to combat child labor by strengthening national public sector institutions, private, and civil society organizations.(95)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Mali.

Although Mali participates in some programs to reduce the worst forms of child labor, these programs are insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem, especially in artisanal gold mining. In addition, Mali does not fund or participate in programs to address child labor in domestic work, fishing, forced begging, commercial sexual exploitation, slavery, or debt bondage.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Mauritania made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted the Roadmap for the Eradication of the Vestiges of Slavery based upon UN recommendations that raises awareness of slavery practices and implements programs that provide former slaves with access to education and livelihood opportunities. The Government also continued to operate regional centers that provide food, shelter, education, and training to children withdrawn from child labor. Further, the Government participated in two new programs to combat the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Mauritania are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and herding, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in indentured and hereditary servitude. Mauritania's legal framework does not prohibit hazardous occupations and activities in all relevant child labor sectors, including agriculture; and does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities. Limited resources for the systematic enforcement of child labor laws impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Additionally, the Government continued to detain anti-slavery protestors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritania are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and herding.(1-3) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in indentured and hereditary servitude.(3-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritania.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	18.2 (172,936)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	48.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	10.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		68.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2007.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of beans,* rice,* millet,* sorghum,* and vegetables* (1, 8-12)
	Herding and caring for cattle, goats, sheep,and camels (1-3, 13, 14)
	Capturing and processing fish* (1-3, 9-12, 15-17)
Industry	Crushing gravel* for construction sites (1, 3, 18)
	Domestic work† (2, 3, 9, 10, 13, 19-21)
Services	Work as car mechanics* and painters* (9, 11, 12, 15, 17)
	Garbage scavenging* (9, 11, 12, 15)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work,* including as market vendors,* shoe shiners,* beggars,†* and in the transportation sector* (2, 3, 11, 15, 16, 18, 22)
	Forced begging, as a result of criminal gang recruitment and by Koranic teachers (1, 3, 4, 11, 12, 18, 21, 23)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (3, 4, 9, 10, 15)
	Used in illicit activities, including selling drugs* (1, 9, 11, 16, 24)
	Indentured and hereditary servitude (4, 5, 14, 24-26)
	Forced labor in domestic work and camel jockeying* each sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (2-4, 9, 27)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Mauritania continue to be exploited in hereditary servitude, as slaves, and endure slave-like practices in remote areas of the country.(3-5, 14, 21, 24-26) Some children are born into slavery, while others are forced to work the land and turn over what they produce to their master in order to remain on the land.(1, 28, 29) Some child slaves herd animals, such as cattle and goats, and perform domestic labor.(1, 3, 4, 14, 28) Those who attempt to escape could be killed.(14, 24) Some former slaves (commonly descendants of slaves) continue to endure slave-like practices, including working for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging.(1, 5)

In Mauritania, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers to receive an education. However, some Koranic teachers (marabouts) force their students (talibés) to beg for more than 12 hours a day without adequate food or shelter.(1, 3, 4, 21, 23)

Although the Constitution guarantees free compulsory primary education, in practice, this provision is not enforced effectively, as many children do not attend school.(1, 30-32) The lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers impede access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, many children in Mauritania are not registered at birth.(29, 32-36) Unable to prove citizenship, unregistered children may have difficulty accessing services such as education.(4, 36-38)

In 2014, Mauritania hosted approximately 54,700 Malian refugees.(39) Refugee children may have difficulty accessing education, which could put them at increased risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(40, 41) The Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF), in collaboration with the UN Children’s Fund, continued work on their study, “Child Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Labor in Mauritania,” but it has yet to publish the results.(3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mauritania has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 153 of the Labor Code 2004-017 (42)

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 7 of Law 62132/1962(48, 49)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Article 1 of Law 2001-054 (30, 31)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Law 2001-054 (30)

Mauritanian law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. Although Law No. 1797 prohibits the employment of children in domestic work and the Penal Protection Code for Children prohibits employing and provoking children to beg, the law does not prohibit hazardous occupations and activities in all relevant child labor sectors, including agriculture.(43, 44, 50) Children working in unpaid, temporary, or non-contractual work do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in contractual employment.(8, 42, 51)

The Government has no law that prohibits the use of children for illicit activities, such as selling drugs.(24, 34, 52) In 2011, the Government, in partnership with local NGOs, UNICEF, and Terre des Hommes, drafted a law against the worst forms of child labor, which includes a more specific list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children; however, the Government has not enacted this legislation. (3, 53, 54)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's Labor and Inspection Office	Receive and investigate labor complaints.(55)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family's (MASEF) Office of Childhood	Develop and implement programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Manages the Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children in Difficult Situations(CPISE).(55)
Ministry of Justice's Direction of the Judiciary for Protection of Children	Coordinate child protection issues and oversee tribunals that sentence child offenders and the work of the Special Brigade for Minors.(50)
National Commission for Human Rights	Advocate for the eradication of slavery and receive complaints and conduct investigations on human rights violations, including the worst forms of child labor.(12)
Ministry of the Interior's Special Brigade for Minors	Investigate crimes against children, including human trafficking, and monitor religious schools, or mahadras, to ensure that children are not forced to beg on behalf of their teachers. Operates in Nouakchott.(23, 50)
National Police	Investigate crimes against children.(50)
National Agency for the Fight against the Vestiges of Slavery, Integration, and the Fight against Poverty (Tadamoun)	Develop and implement programs to tackle poverty, promote the integration of refugees, and rehabilitate former slaves.(4, 5, 50, 56-58) File complaints on behalf of citizens who accuse their employers of practicing slavery and bring cases of alleged slavery to the authorities for investigation.(59, 60)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor's Labor and Inspection Office employed 72 labor inspectors in 13 regional offices.(61) While none of the labor inspectors specialize in child labor, 17 inspectors received training on child labor issues.(3, 32, 62) The Government budgeted $33,300 to MASEF's Office of Childhood, and $33,300 to the Ministry of Labor's Labor and Inspection Office to support activities to end child labor.(3) The inspectorate does not initiate routine or targeted inspections based on analysis of compliance data or patterns of complaints. Information is unavailable on the number and quality of inspections, notification system for inspections, number of child labor law violations found, number of citations issued, and whether appropriate penalties were applied.(3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Special Brigade for Minors employed 10 officers.(3) Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of officers is inadequate. Research did not uncover whether they were provided with training on child labor issues. In collaboration with NGOs, the Special Brigade for Minors handled 4,167 criminal cases involving the worst form of child labor.(63) Research did not uncover information about the number of prosecutions, convictions, or whether appropriate penalties were applied related to the criminal enforcement of labor laws. Research found that the police generally lacked resources, which stymied investigation of cases, including those involving the worst forms of child labor.(32, 62)

Research did not find a formal referral mechanism in place between law enforcement agencies and social welfare services; however, victims are generally referred to MASEF's Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children in Difficult Situations or to NGOs depending on the case and location.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Trafficking, Smuggling, and Labor Group	Coordinate child labor and child trafficking efforts. Composed of MASEF's Office of Childhood; the Ministry of Justice's Office of Child Judiciary Protection; the Ministry of Interior; the National Commission on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society; NGOs; and international organizations.(55, 64)
National Council for Children	Coordinate and monitor government efforts on child protection and development.(53) Chaired by the Office of the Prime Minister and comprised of officials from MASEF, the Ministries of Justice, Health, Education, and Social Security. Also includes nongovernmental stakeholders such as NGOs, international organizations, and social partners.(65)

The Child Trafficking, Smuggling, and Labor Group and the National Council for Children were inactive during the reporting period and did not receive any funding.(3, 53, 66)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mauritania has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Combat the Vestiges of Slavery	Aims to prevent slavery through improvements in education, health, and by providing victims with income-generating activities. Falls under the direction of the National Agency for the Fight against the Vestiges of Slavery, Integration, and the Fight against Poverty (Tadamoun).(3, 67)
Roadmap for the Eradication of the Vestiges of Slavery†	Calls for an awareness-raising campaign on slavery, the revision of slavery laws and policies, implementation of programs that provide former slaves with access to education and livelihood opportunities, and assistance to former slaves who wish to return to their home countries.(68-70) Based on 29 of 42 recommendations made by the UN's Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of slavery after an official mission to Mauritania.(28, 67-69)

Policy	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2012-2015)	Acknowledges that child labor is a problem in Mauritania and calls for research and training for labor inspectors, judges, and other stakeholders on child labor issues.(71)
Strategic Framework to Fight Poverty (2011-2015)	Seeks to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, provide quality education to vulnerable children, and protect the rights of children.(72)
National Strategy for the Protection of Children in Mauritania and Action Plan (2010-2014)*	Aims to increase access to social services for vulnerable children and establish a system to coordinate, monitor, and evaluate service provision for children.(3, 73, 74)
PRSP II (2011-2015)	Seeks to eliminate child labor and includes plans to increase access to quality education for all children.(3, 75, 76)
UNDAF (2012-2016)	Promotes improved access to education for vulnerable children and aims to build the capacity of the Government to address child labor.(77)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2014, the National Agency for the Fight against the Vestiges of Slavery, Integration, and the Fight against Poverty (Tadamoun) implemented the National Plan to Combat the Vestiges of Slavery in 2014, however, the effectiveness of such policy was hampered by budget constraints.(67) Although the Government of Mauritania has policies to address slavery, research found no evidence of a policy to combat other worst forms of child labor.(32, 53, 78). Moreover, the Government's detention of anti-slavery protestors in 2014 and the lack of recent data on slavery hampers its ability to address this issue comprehensively by developing effective policies.(3, 24, 78-80)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Mauritania funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to Eradicate the Effects of Slavery†	Government program that supports the reintegration and rehabilitation of former slaves.(4)
Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children in Difficult Situations (CPISE)‡	Government program that provides food, shelter, education, and vocational training to vulnerable children, many of whom are talibés. In 2014, the Government opened a new CPISE in Nouakchott and operates five other CPISEs in Kiffa, Rosso, Nouadhibou, and the El Mina and Dar-Naim regions of Nouakchott.(3, 55) The Centers served 321 children during the reporting period.(4)
Child Protection Training Center‡	Government program that provides training on child protection to local organizations, including child labor, in the town of Selibaby.(64)
Protection of Mauritanian Children Against Violence, Exploitation, Discrimination, Abuse, and Neglect (VEDAN) (2014-2016)†	Approximately $1.9 million program launched by the European Union and UNICEF, in partnership with MASEF, to combat child exploitation, including the worst forms of child labor. The project will operate in 10 regional provinces.(67)
UNODC Impact Program*	EU-funded, government program that aims to assist West and North African States in implementing the Migrant Smuggling Protocol by strengthening criminal justice systems through improved legislative frameworks, stronger government capacity, improved data collection and analysis techniques, and awareness raising.(81, 82)
Poverty Reduction Project*	Approximately $38.4 million, UN International Fund for Agricultural Development-funded project in Aftout South and Karakoro.(83) Targets 21,000 households and aims to assist rural communities through the provision of loans and grants to improve livelihoods, economic opportunities, and food security.(84)
Refugee Assistance Programs‡	MASEF's Office of Childhood programs that raises awareness among NGOs operating in the M'Bera refugee camp on ways to address child exploitation.(33)
Youth Employment Programs*‡	Ministry of Labor program, with support from the ILO, that trains job counselors on how to assist youth in finding decent work.(85)

Program	Description
Child Camel Jockeys Program†‡	$139,000, government program co-funded with the United Arab Emirates (UAE) that supports the reintegration and rehabilitation of Mauritanian children that were trafficked to the UAE to work as camel jockeys. The program served 400 child trafficking victims during the reporting period.(3)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Mauritania has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially in agriculture, herding, domestic work, as well as children in hereditary and indentured servitude.(64) Research could not find out whether Tadamoun funded any social programs in 2014 aimed specifically at combating child labor.(50) Moreover, as recently as September 2014, some government officials did not acknowledge that slavery continues despite its prohibition.(86) The UN reports that more needs to be done to address the problem of slavery in Mauritania, and the UN Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of slavery suggested that the Government increase funding for social programs for former slaves and carry out a campaign to raise awareness of the national laws on slavery.(60)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Mauritius made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government funded and participated in several programs to combat the worst forms of child labor and assist vulnerable households. The Government also operated drop-in centers to provide services to children formerly engaged in commercial sexual exploitation. However, children in Mauritius are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Limited resources for the systematic enforcement of child labor laws impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. The Government does not currently ensure that victims of commercial sexual exploitation have access to comprehensive, quality services.

Agalega Islands, Cargados Carajos Shoals, and Rodrigues are not shown.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritius are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritius. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2015.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Producing* and harvesting* vegetables (3, 6-9)
	Feeding livestock* (9)
	Fishing,* including diving,* and casting nets* and traps* (6, 10)
Industry	Work in masonry* and apparel shops* (6, 7)
Services	Domestic work* (3, 6)
	Street work, including vending,* begging,* and carrying* goods in public markets (3, 6-8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1-3, 7, 8, 11)
	Used in illicit activities, including selling drugs* (6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Mauritius are lured into commercial sexual exploitation by their peers, family members, or through false offers of other employment.(2, 3) As Mauritius has never conducted a national child labor survey, there is limited information about the prevalence of child labor in the country.

Mauritius

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Limited evidence suggests that incidences of physical and psychological abuse, including corporal punishment of students by teachers, prevent some children from attending school, increasing their risk of becoming victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (1, 11-13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mauritius has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

* No conscription (21)

† No standing military (21)

The Government of Mauritius continues to work on a comprehensive bill designed to harmonize the existing legal framework related to children's rights and to make sure it is consistent with the Convention on the Rights of the Child. (3, 11, 22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Inspection and Enforcement Division of the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, and Employment (MOLIRE)	Enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor.(7, 23)
Office of the Ombudsperson for Children	Investigate any suspected or reported case of child labor or violation of a child's rights. Promote compliance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child.(11, 24)
Police Brigade for the Protection of Minors (Minors' Brigade)	Investigate reports of child or forced labor, or in conjunction with routine police patrols.(1, 11) Patrol areas such as arcades, bus terminals, and other areas in which youth are vulnerable to involvement in commercial sexual exploitation.(1, 23) Maintain a database of all trafficking incidents of children and refer all cases of commercial sexual exploitation to the Child Development Unit (CDU).(3)
Ministry of Gender Equality, Child Development and Family Welfare (MOGE) CDU	Enforce legislation related to children, as well as implement policies and programs related to child development.(11, 25) Receive tips on all forms of child abuse, including commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.(2, 23) Provide follow-up assistance to victims.(1, 11) Assign child welfare officers to accompany victims as they receive immediate medical care and work, in conjunction with the police if an official statement is needed.(2) Develop a central database and standard operating procedures for sharing information and taking action to address child labor.(3, 22)

Law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, and Employment (MOLIRE) employed 45 labor inspectors.(9, 25) MOLIRE inspectors did not receive training on child labor during the reporting period.(10) They conducted 840 labor inspections and found one child labor violation, which was transferred to judicial authorities.(9) Information is unavailable on the type and notification system for inspections, the number of citations, or whether appropriate penalties were applied. MOLIRE works closely with the Ministry of Gender Equality, Child Development and Family Welfare (MOGE) and the Police Brigade for the Protection of Minors (Minors' Brigade) to ensure that victims of the worst forms of child labor receive appropriate protection and social services.(9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Minors' Brigade employed 41 officers.(9) It carried out a public awareness campaign at schools and community centers on child abuse, including commercial sexual exploitation.(2) Minors' Brigade officers received training on human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. A referral mechanism exists between the Minors' Brigade and MOGE to provide social services and assistance to victims of child abuse, including commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.(11) Research could not uncover the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and sentences imposed on crimes related to the worst forms of child labor. The Minors' Brigade, in cooperation with the Child Development Unit (CDU), manages the "119" and "113" hotlines to receive complaints about situations requiring child protection.(3, 11) However, the number of calls received related to the worst forms of child labor is unavailable.

Research revealed that criminal law enforcement agencies lacked staff, transportation, and other necessities to properly enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(2, 3) Research found that the Government has decreased its efforts to enforce anti-trafficking law and there is a lack of understanding of anti-trafficking in persons among government officials.(2, 26)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Protection Committee (NCPC)	Coordinate, monitor, and evaluate activities on children's rights and welfare, including efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by MOGE and comprising representatives from more than 10 government ministries.(11) Also known as the Working Together Committee and includes a subcommittee that coordinates efforts to combat commercial sexual exploitation.(22, 27).

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Children's Council (NCC)	Serve as the executive of child protection programs and focus on child protection issues in the country as an independent, para-governmental entity under the auspices of MOGE.(1, 11)

In 2014, significant overlap continues to exist among the committees involved in child protection issues. The roles of the National Child Protection Committee (NCPC) and the National Children's Council (NCC) are unclear in coordinating efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor.(11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mauritius has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Protocol of Assistance to Victims of Sexual Abuse	Lays out procedures for police and other officials to follow when handling sexual abuse cases, including commercial sexual exploitation.(11, 28)
Child Safety Online Action Plan	Prevents sexual exploitation of children on the Internet by strengthening the legal framework and raising awareness among parents and children.(11, 23)
National Policy Paper on the Family*	Supports child welfare through holistic support for families, including job training for parents.(11, 29)
Education and Human Resources Strategy Plan*	Improves equity of access to primary, secondary, and technical/vocational education, among other goals.(30)
UNDP Country Program for Mauritius*	Improves access to education for vulnerable children by reducing inequality.(31)

*Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

In 2014, the Government of Mauritius started drafting a National Child Protection Strategy and Action Plan that will strengthen national policies and programs to protect children from violence, human trafficking, and exploitative work; however, it has not yet been adopted.(3) Although the Government has adopted the Protocol of Assistance to Victims of Sexual Abuse, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Mauritius funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Income Support Program*‡	Government program that provides money for 8,000 vulnerable families living below the Poverty Intervention Line. In 2014, the budget for this program was $33 million.(25)
Social Aid Program*‡	Government program that provides assistance to 20,000 families.(11, 25)
Education Priority Zones (ZEP) *‡	Government program that combats social inequalities by providing equal opportunities to all primary school children throughout the country. Has been shown to reduce school dropout rates through enhanced community participation in education.(11, 27, 30) In 2014, the Government provided increased funding for low-performing schools.(25)
Child Mentoring Scheme*‡	Government program that provides one-on-one counseling to at-risk children through a government-selected mentor.(27, 32)
Summer and Winter School Program*‡	Government program that provides summer and winter schooling to enhance the successful transition of students from primary to secondary school.(23, 27)
Second Chance Program*‡	Government program to educate and provide vocational training and life skills to those who dropped out after age 16.(27)
Awareness-Raising Programs in Schools, Community Centers, and in the Media on Commercial Sexual Exploitation‡	Government program to educate the public on preventing sexual abuse and exploitation of children.(1, 2, 27)

Program	Description
Workshops on Commercial Sexual Exploitation‡	Government workshops to raise awareness of commercial sexual exploitation with vulnerable groups.(1, 33)
Drop-in Centers‡	Government program that provides counseling and referrals to victims of sexual abuse, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking.(3, 7)
Shelters and Institutional Care*‡	Government program that provides shelter and institutional care to victims who are referred to government or NGO shelters.(1, 7, 34)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Mauritius.

The Government's institutional care facilities for victims of commercial sexual exploitation and other abuses are overcrowded, and service providers are overtaxed and lack appropriate training. These institutions do not have appropriate standards of care, leading to inadequate service provision.(1) In addition, child victims of commercial sexual exploitation are sometimes placed by court order in residential centers for youth on probation. Children placed in such facilities may not receive appropriate treatment.(1) In addition, the Government of Mauritius does not fund or participate in programs to address child labor in agriculture, domestic work, or street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

In 2014, Moldova made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government updated its list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children and raised the compulsory education age to 18. The Government also took action to improve its policy framework by passing the sixth consecutive National Plan for Preventing and Combatting Human Trafficking, which develops a guide for improving prevention efforts, referral mechanisms, and support services for child victims of human trafficking. The Government also launched a new hotline to provide information and register complaints for children experiencing violence, neglect or exploitation, including exploitation through child labor. However, children in Moldova are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Funding for the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) was not sufficient and the Inspectorate's efforts to enforce child labor laws were hindered by barriers to conducting unannounced inspections. While the Government provides some financial support to programs addressing child labor, including human trafficking, most major child labor programs have been donor funded. These programs do not appear to be sustainable without outside financial assistance.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Moldova are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Moldova.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	24.3 (102,105)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Child trafficking continues to be a concern in Moldova. Both boys and girls are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation within the country through brothels, saunas, and massage parlors, whereas girls are also trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation transnationally.(5, 10)

The latest national study on the situation of children in need and those whose parents work abroad, conducted in 2012, reveals that 105,270 (approximately 15 percent) of children have one or both parents working abroad.(1, 3) Children left behind by migrant parents, especially those who are institutionalized in orphanages or in boarding schools, may be particularly vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking.(5, 11-13)

Although the Education Code provides for free and compulsory education until age 18, parents are sometimes asked to pay informal fees for supplies and textbooks. Education-related costs and lack of transportation to school make it challenging for Roma children, in particular, to access education.(5, 12, 14-16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Moldova has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In 2014, the Government adopted Decision No. 541 to update and improve its list of hazardous work activities prohibited for children. The new list includes an extensive number of occupations and working conditions considered harmful for children in over 30 categories.(19, 30, 31) It also includes provisions regulating the weight limits for lifting and moving heavy loads.(19, 30, 31)

During the reporting period, the Government adopted a new Education Code that increases the compulsory education age from 16 to 18. The Ministry of Education also issued a decision that prohibits students from working in agriculture during the school year.(30, 31)

In January 2014, the Law on the Special Protection of Children at Risk and Children Separated From Their Parents entered into effect. Through Decision No. 270, the Government adopted procedures for interagency cooperation on the identification, evaluation, assistance, monitoring, and registering of vulnerable children, including victims of exploitation and human trafficking. (30-33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) within the Ministry of Labor, Social Protection, and Family (MLSPF)	Enforce all labor laws, including child labor laws. Investigate cases with possible labor law violations, including those that relate to children.(3, 30) Manage the National Referral System (NRS) and lead victim rehabilitation efforts.(13)
Multidisciplinary Teams	Act on a local level to identify children involved in the worst forms of child labor, provide better alternatives to child laborers, continue to monitor the living conditions of identified children, and use the collected information for policy development. In 2014, the teams were extended to every district in the country.(3, 30, 31)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Enforce criminal laws against child trafficking and sexual exploitation. Have officers dedicated to child protection and child labor.(3)

Organization/Agency	Role
The Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP), subdivision of MOIA	Lead criminal investigations and arrest the perpetrators involved in trafficking of persons, including trafficking of children.(3) In 2014, CCTIP was reorganized into three investigative sections specializing in combating trafficking in persons for the purpose of sexual exploitation; labor exploitation and begging; and child trafficking for the removal of organs, tissues, and cells. (13, 30)
Service for Information and Security (SIS)	Enforce criminal laws against child trafficking and sexual exploitation through cooperation and exchanging information with CCTIP.(3)
Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Conduct and oversee criminal investigations of cases, including the worst forms of child labor exploitation; prosecute cases of worst forms of child labor in court and at the Supreme Court of Justice; and represent the rights of child victims in cases when their civil rights are violated.(32) Employ seven prosecutors to deal with trafficking in persons cases as well as trafficking of children cases.(30) Composed of 36 prosecutorial offices throughout the country, which have prosecutors specialized in handling of child trafficking cases.(3, 32)
The National Council for the Protection of Child Rights within the National Commission for Consultation and Collective Bargaining	Inform and provide consultation to members of the National Commission for Consultation and Collective Bargaining's members about the worst forms of child labor and protecting child rights. (1)
The Parliamentary Ombudsman	Promote the UN CRC and defend the constitutional rights of children. Request cooperation from public authorities and public institutions on child protection issues.(3)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Enforce criminal laws against child trafficking and sexual exploitation.(3) Draft, consult, and propose all processes related to legislation for the Government's approval before they enter in force.(32)

Law enforcement agencies in Moldova took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) employs 109 staff members, with 22 officers stationed in the central office and 87 posted in 10 regional branches.(3) Two additional labor inspectors staff the Child Labor Monitoring Unit (CLMU).(31) All SLI inspectors are trained according to the national curriculum on combating child labor, developed with support from ILO-IPEC.(30, 31) For 2014, SLI's total budget was $776,000.(30) The Ministry of Labor, Social Protection, and Family (MLSPF) noted that the amount of funding allocated to conduct inspections is insufficient.(30, 31)

From January to November 2014, SLI conducted 6,190 inspections of over 5,500 businesses.(30, 31) Law permits the inspectorate to conduct desk reviews and on-site child labor inspections in both legally registered workplaces and on private farms.(17) However, SLI may not conduct an unannounced site visit unless it receives a petition from a working child or the child's parent. In the majority of cases, SLI is required to give 5 days' notice prior to entering a workplace, which reduces the effectiveness of the inspections.(30) In 2014, SLI launched the Automated Information System, which will improve data collection on labor law enforcement, including disaggregated data on the number of child labor violations detected.(31) According to MLSPF, in 2014, inspectors discovered 15 minors employed in violation of labor laws and 4 who were involved in hazardous work activities prohibited for children.(31) All 19 children were removed from work and assisted by the Government.(30, 31) During the reporting period, SLI inspectors issued citations for nine child labor law violations. Moldovan courts levied fines in 5 cases, with the total amounting to $2,500.(30)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP) employed 43 officers to investigate cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the Prosecutor General's Office (PGO) assigned 7 prosecutors to handle trafficking in persons cases.(30) During the reporting period, a total of 4,023 specialists, including members of Multidisciplinary Teams, judges, prosecutors, border police officers, and criminal investigators, received training on issues related to the worst forms of child labor, especially human trafficking. The Government also provided specialized training on interviewing techniques for child victims and witnesses of abuse and sexual exploitation.(30)

During the reporting period, law enforcement officials investigated 24 cases of potential child trafficking and identified 26 child victims.<sup>(13)</sup> In October, the Ministry of Labor, Social Protection, and Family (MLSPF) and the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) adopted a standard referral form to register all suspected cases of violence, neglect, exploitation, and trafficking of children.<sup>(30)</sup> Law enforcement officials ensure that potential victims of child trafficking receive appropriate social services through the country's National Referral System (NRS).<sup>(13)</sup> Child victims may be placed in rehabilitation clinics, shelters, foster care, or with relatives depending on the situation. Shelters provide medical, legal, social, and psychological support.<sup>(3, 13)</sup> The Government assisted 15 child victims during the reporting period.<sup>(13)</sup>

In 2014, officials brought seven child trafficking cases to trial, which resulted in the conviction of nine individuals for human trafficking offences. Of the nine convicted, eight human traffickers are currently serving jail time.<sup>(13)</sup> However, despite efforts to improve the prosecution of perpetrators of human trafficking, there is evidence that corruption in the judicial system continues to constrain the Government's ability to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.<sup>(13)</sup>

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor (NSC)	Coordinate work on child labor issues at the national level between representatives from workers' organizations, NGOs, academia, and the following government agencies: the Ministry of Labor, Social Protection and Family (MLSPF); the Ministry of Education (MOE); the Ministry of Agriculture and the Food Processing Industry; the Ministry of Finance; the Ministry of Health (MOH); the Ministry of Interior (MOI); the Ministry of Youth and Sports; the State Chancellery; the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI); the Prosecutor General's Office (PGO); and the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS). <sup>(3)</sup>
Child Labor Monitoring Unit (CLMU)	Supervise national-level activities related to combating child labor and serve as a coordinating mechanism between NSC at the national level and multidisciplinary teams at the local level. <sup>(3, 31)</sup>
The National Committee for Combatting Trafficking in Persons (NCCTIP)	Coordinate the Government's overall efforts to prevent and combat TIP. <sup>(3)</sup> Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister of Foreign Affairs and European Integration (MFA) and includes representatives from the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA); the MLSPF; the MOH, the MOE, the Ministry of Finance; the Ministry of Youth and Sports; the Border Guard Service; the Security and Information Service (SIS); the PGO; the Secretary of the Supreme Security Council; the Governor of the Gagauz Autonomous Region; the General Police Inspectorate; the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI); and the Bureau for Relations with Diaspora within the State Chancellery. <sup>(13)</sup>
The Permanent Secretariat (PS) under NCCTIP	Monitor implementation of legal provisions on combating TIP set out by the NCCTIP. Establish working groups for drafting new provisions on TIP, participate in anti-TIP campaigns, develop the national action plans, and seek support for projects. <sup>(13, 34)</sup>
National Coordination Unit (NCU) within the MLSPF	Coordinate activities related to the protection of victims and potential victims of human trafficking. Build the capacity of Multidisciplinary Teams at the local level to improve victim identification and referral for crisis intervention and rehabilitation. <sup>(35)</sup> Comprised of community social assistants, police officers, and NGO workers. <sup>(35)</sup>

Despite the important coordinating role of the National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor (NSC), the NSC did not meet in 2014 to discuss child labor issues. This may impact the overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms, on a national level.<sup>(3, 30)</sup>

In 2014, the Government of Moldova issued a decree to institutionalize the Permanent Secretariat (PS) under the National Committee for Combatting Trafficking in Persons (NCCTIP), establishing four permanent staff positions and providing full funding for the first time.<sup>(13)</sup>

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Moldova has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
The National Action Plan on the Prevention and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NAP) (2011–2015)	Outlines 44 objectives to be implemented by 30 stakeholders to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by specific deadlines. Includes plans to institutionalize a child labor monitoring system in Moldova, increase access to education, provide rehabilitation and reintegration support for children withdrawn from child labor, and raise awareness on child labor issues in nine districts.(3, 31, 36) In 2014, the Government achieved one objective through the launch of the Automatized Information System for registering child labor violations.(30)

The Strategy of the National Referral System to Protect and Assist Victims and Potential Victims of Trafficking in Human Beings (NRS) (2009–2016)	Outlines a comprehensive framework for cooperation between government institutions and civil society organizations for the protection of victims and potential victims of human trafficking. Focuses on awareness raising activities, improving victim identification and referral mechanisms and building the capacity of counter-human trafficking actors through ongoing training and technical assistance. Regulates the work of the Multidisciplinary Teams (MDT) operating throughout the country as well as the National Coordination Unit (NCU). Launched by the Ministry of Labor, Social Protection and Family (MLSPF).(35)
The National Plan on Community Support of Children in Need for (2007–2014)*	Aims to provide social inclusion and protection for children in need through various services and initiatives.(3, 38)
European Integration: Freedom, Democracy, Wellbeing (2011–2014)*	Aims to have a direct impact on the prevention of the worst forms of child labor by ensuring access to early education; increasing the number of kindergartens and schools in communities; promoting inclusive education for children with disabilities and those from socially vulnerable families; and promoting the deinstitutionalization of children.(38)
Action Plan for the Support of the Roma People from the Republic of Moldova (2011–2015)*	Aims to improve social inclusion of the Roma people, including equal access to quality education for Romani boys and girls. Establishes a system of 48 Romani Community Mediators supported by the State budget to advocate for Roma issues at the national level.(14, 39)
Child Protection Strategy (2014–2020)*†	Seeks to bring the Moldovan child protection system into compliance with international standards. Sets three general objectives for improving the situation of children: development of necessary conditions for raising children in families; preventing and combating violence, neglect, and exploitation of children; and assisting working parents in the upbringing and development of children.(30, 40)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Moldova funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Free, Strong, and Safe—to a Better Child Protection System*	UNICEF and OAK Foundation-funded program implemented by the National Center for Prevention of Child Abuse (CNPAC) and the Center for Information and Documentation on Child Rights (CIDDC), in partnership with several government ministries, that aims to develop an integrated education and social assistance system for the protection of vulnerable children, including victims of abuse, neglect, and exploitation. Aims to improve prevention, identification, referral, and protection mechanisms.(3, 41)
Combatting child trafficking project	Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE)-funded project implemented by the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Labor, Social Protection and Family (MLSPF), and local NGOs to prevent child trafficking by providing professional and life skills training to at-risk children without parental care in 12 residential schools across 10 regions. In 2014, the project was extended to Transdnistria.(42)
UNICEF-Government of Moldova Country Program (2013–2017)*‡	Government and the United Nations program to improve social inclusion of vulnerable children and their families and to promote social change for child rights. Focuses on children affected by migration, Roma children, and child victims of sexual exploitation and abuse.(30, 43)

Program	Description
Ajutor Social Program*‡	Government and the World Bank cash benefit program that targets the poor.(44, 45)
Strengthening the Effectiveness of the Social Safety Net Project (2011–2016)*	$37 million, World Bank-funded project implemented by MLSPF to improve the country's social safety net through expanding and strengthening the Ajutor Social Program, among other things. Provides social assistance based on household income to reach the poorest population.(32, 46, 47)
Education Assistance Programs*‡	Government program that seeks to improve access to education by providing a monthly payment of $27 for a period of up to six months to cover the cost of school supplies for children from vulnerable families.(31) In 2014, the Government of Moldova allocated approximately $487,000 for this purpose, and the municipality of Chisinau allocated $303,000. Amount per child varies slightly across the regions depending on local administration budgets.(32, 41)
Financial Assistance Program*‡	Government and donor-funded program that provides financial assistance to poor families with children in installments of approximately $32 per month for a maximum of 6 months or as a lump sum of approximately $192. Financial assistance is mandated through Government Decision No. 780, passed in September 2014.(3, 30, 41)
Children in Moldova are Cared for in Safe and Secure Families Program (2014–2017)†	$4.4 million, USAID-funded project implemented by Partnerships for Every Child that aims to build the capacity of MLSPF and the Ministry of Education to strengthen national child protection systems. Includes the objective of supporting children living in institutions, family-based care, and group homes to attend school.(30, 48)
Child Helpline†	Donor-funded telephone support service for children, implemented by the international NGO "La Strada and managed by MLSPF. Provides psychological counseling and information to parents, caregivers, and children who may be experiencing violence, neglect or exploitation.(31, 49) In 2014, operators answered a total of 1,300 calls and provided counseling for 488 adults and 414 children. There were no calls specifically related to child labor.(31)
Shelters for victims of human trafficking‡	Government-funded shelters for TIP victims in seven locations throughout the country, some of which provide specialized services for children. Offer accommodation as well as rehabilitation and reintegration services.(13) In 2014, the government increased funding for shelters from $373,295 in 2013 to $517,195.(13)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Moldova.

While the Government of Moldova provides some financial support to programs addressing both child labor and trafficking, most major child labor programs operate with significant donor funding. These programs do not appear to be sustainable without outside financial assistance.(1, 3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Mongolia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government established a Child Hotline to receive reports of child abuse and refer cases to the police, including reports related to exploitative child labor. In addition, law enforcement agencies improved efforts to monitor horse races for compliance with age and safety requirements for child horse jockeys. The Government's Crime Prevention and Awareness Fund provided approximately $30,000 for Anti-Trafficking activities in 2014, including training for law enforcement officers and prosecutors on investigation and victim identification techniques. However, children in Mongolia are engaged in child labor, including in animal husbandry and herding and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Gaps persist in the legal framework and operating procedures for prosecuting criminal offenders, specifically regarding commercial sexual exploitation. The Government also lacks social programs to address child labor in certain relevant sectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mongolia are engaged in child labor, including in animal husbandry and herding. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mongolia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	13.8 (60,246)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	87.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	15.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The National Statistical Office’s (NSO) Social Indicator Sample Survey, published in June 2014, found that 15 percent of Mongolian children between the ages of 5 and 17 are involved in child labor. According to the survey, child labor is more prevalent in rural areas than in urban areas.(9, 20) In an earlier study, the NSO also found that 8 out of 10 children engaged in hazardous work are boys.(2) In 2014, the General Agency for Specialized Inspection (GASI) conducted a nationwide monitoring study focused on identifying incidents of children working in the informal sector, including in markets, artisanal mining sites, and at informal construction and brick-making sites. In their assessment of 121 informal locations, GASI identified 336 minors working, 246 of whom were boys.(9)

Mongolian children are primarily trafficked internally for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation in saunas, bars, hotels, karaoke clubs, and massage parlors.(3-6, 19) During the reporting period, there were also instances of Mongolian minors being trafficked internationally for sexual exploitation.(6, 9, 21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mongolia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 114 and 192 of the Criminal Code (26)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Law on Civil Military Duties and the Legal Status of Military Personnel (29, 30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Law on Civil Military Duties and the Legal Status of Military Personnel (29, 30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 46 of the Law on Education (21, 31, 32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Constitution of Mongolia; Law on Education (32, 33)

Mongolia's Law on Labor covers work performed within a labor contract, and there appears to be no other law that addresses work performed outside a labor contract. As a result, some working children may lack legal protection.(22, 34) The Ministry of Justice (MOJ) is in the process of revising the Criminal Code to more effectively prohibit the worst forms of child labor and to strengthen the protection of child victims of human trafficking during legal proceedings. A previous draft was submitted to Parliament in 2014 but was withdrawn by the new Minister of Justice in December.(35, 36) Although the current Criminal Code prohibits and prescribes an aggravated punishment for the use of a person under age 16 for the production of pornography, it does not expressly protect children ages 16 and 17. Mongolian law also does not expressly prohibit the possession of child pornography.(26, 38)

The minimum age for racing as a horse jockey (seven-years-old) does not meet the standards prescribed in international conventions, and current legislation does not fully protect children engaged in this sector.(13, 25) Sources report that a group of parliamentarians is developing revisions to a law that would ban children under age 16 from taking part in official races.(15, 16, 21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
General Agency for Specialized Inspection (GASI)	Enforce labor laws, including child labor. Conduct inspections at registered businesses.(3)
National Police Agency (NPA)	Maintain primary responsibility for investigating trafficking cases. Coordinate with the Organized Crime Department—successor to the Criminal Police Department (CPD) and the State Investigation Agency (SIA).(19) Report to the Ministry of Justice (MOJ).(9)
Organized Crime Department (OCD)	Receive referrals and open a formal criminal investigation of trafficking and sexual exploitation cases. Work with the Prosecutor's Office to decide whether to take a case to court and initiate any subsequent prosecution.(3, 39) Replaced the SIA and the CPD, which were merged into one office in January 2014.(9)
Metropolitan Police Department (MPD)	Operate under the NPA and oversee the district police divisions of Ulaanbaatar's nine districts.(39) Enforce labor laws and identify children in hazardous labor.(3)
Division for the Prevention of Domestic Violence and Crimes Against Children*	Operate under the MPD and protect unattended children on the streets. Identify and refer children to their parents or to Child Care and Protection Centers (CCPCs).(9)
General Authority for Citizenship and Migration (GACM)*	Register Mongolian citizens who enter and exit the country. Track children who leave Mongolia and do not return, and pregnant Mongolian women who leave Mongolia to give birth and return without their child.(19) Follow up with law enforcement as necessary.(19) Agency created as a result of a merger between certain units of the General Authority for Border Protection and the former Immigration Agency.(19)
Marshal ( Takhar ) Service*	Provide protection to victims and witnesses throughout the judicial process. Work towards establishing shelters throughout the country.(9, 40)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Law enforcement agencies in Mongolia took action to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the General Agency for Specialized Inspection (GASI) employed 47 labor inspectors countrywide, two of whom focused primarily on child labor issues. An additional 100 junior inspectors also dedicated limited time to labor issues.(3, 9) During the reporting period, approximately 20 GASI inspectors received training on labor exploitation conducted by the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) and The Asia Foundation.(40) Both NGOs and government officials note that the number of inspectors and the state funding provided for GASI is inadequate, given the scope of the child labor problem, the growing number of businesses in the country, and GASI's broad responsibilities in the areas of labor monitoring and health and safety regulation.(3, 9)

GASI conducts both complaint-driven and routine labor inspections. During the reporting period, GASI conducted 1,054 general labor inspections.(21) In addition, each year GASI varies onsite inspections according to themes. In 2014, the theme focused on the safety of child jockeys and GASI conducted inspections at 195 capital- and provincial-level races, 75 races in honor of county anniversaries, and four races at regional festivals.(9) As a result of the inspections, GASI identified 63 violations of child jockey safety regulations and subsequently prohibited 56 underage children from racing. GASI also organized public awareness campaigns on the rights of child jockeys at the provincial level and reported that all but three provinces have now banned the use of children under age seven as jockeys.(9) Furthermore, GASI signed tripartite agreements with horse trainers, insurance companies, and parents in an effort to improve safety monitoring for children participating in races.(9) Despite these efforts, there continues to be little regulation over community-level races in rural areas.(9, 17)

The Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) and the Metropolitan Office of Child and Family Development (MOCFD) identified 70 children living and working on the streets through two jointly conducted campaigns.(9) Some of these children were referred to Child Care and Protection Centers (CCPCs) in Ulaanbaatar to receive social services. In June 2014, the Government created a Child Hotline to receive general child abuse complaints and to serve as an informational resource for minors. The Child Hotline received 42,946 calls on child-related issues from its opening in June 2014 through the end of the year.(9, 21) According to statistics from the National Authority for Children (NAC), the hotline received 26 reports of children working in hazardous labor, 37 reports of children engaged in forced begging, and no reports of human trafficking. The statistics did not provide information on whether follow-up actions were taken in response to these calls.(21) Research found that despite the new hotline, there is still no specific referral procedure to ensure that children identified in exploitative labor situations during investigations receive the support services they need.(9)

While inspectors have the authority to assess penalties for child labor law violations, either during the initial inspection or after the fact, GASI did not issue any fines during the reporting period.(9) The Law on State Inspections requires GASI to announce the sites it plans to inspect over the course of the year and to give two days' notice prior to visits. According to GASI officials, these requirements may have contributed to the fact that no child labor violations were detected during the year.(3, 9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Organized Crime Department (OCD) had six officers responsible for investigating cases of trafficking in persons.(9) Research indicated that this number was inadequate to address the scope of the problem.(3, 21) During the reporting period, a total of 71 police officers participated in training conducted by the International Center for Missing and Exploited Children and the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) on techniques for investigating crimes against children. Several officers also received trainings on human trafficking and labor exploitation.(9) At the request of the Ministry of Justice (MOJ), the anti-trafficking NGO, Gender Equality Center (GEC), provided basic training on trafficking in persons to approximately 400 police officers across 9 provinces.(9)

In 2014, the National Police Agency (NPA) investigated eight trafficking in persons cases, involving 11 alleged perpetrators and 9 alleged victims, one of whom was a minor. Of the eight cases, one was prosecuted in court and resulted in the conviction and sentencing of one perpetrator to a prison term of between 5 and 8 years.(9, 40) It is unclear whether this case involved a child victim. Under article 121 of the Criminal Code, the court prosecuted one case of forced child labor, and convicted and sentenced two offenders. The NPA also investigated 18 cases related to commercial sexual exploitation involving three child victims.(9) Court rulings in four of these cases resulted in the conviction of eight individuals, but information is not available on whether these cases involved child victims.(9) During the reporting period, the GEC provided assistance to 13 female minors, all victims of commercial sexual exploitation.(9, 39) However, there is no formalized referral mechanism between government law enforcement agencies and social service providers to ensure that children identified as engaged in the worst forms of child labor receive appropriate support services.(9)

Police officers reported that there is a general lack of knowledge and training on how to apply criminal trafficking laws to cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children. As a result, many cases that could have been prosecuted under the trafficking article of the Criminal Code were instead prosecuted under related articles of the Criminal Code that carry lighter penalties.(3, 38) The National Authority for Children (NAC) reported that there is a general assumption that victims of sexual misconduct must be girls, resulting in a failure to recognize boys as potential victims of sexual exploitation.(3) When boys are victims of sexual exploitation, the offense is rarely prosecuted and, when prosecution does occur, charges are likely to be filed under an article of the Criminal Code that carries a lighter sentence and includes no aggravating penalty for committing the crime against a minor.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Coordinating Council to Implement the National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (Coordinating Council)	Guide government efforts on child labor and implementation of the National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Chaired by the Ministry of Labor (MOL), with the National Authority for Children (NAC) as the lead implementing agency.(9) Comprised of 21 organizations, including the Ministries of Population Development and Social Protection; Justice; Education; and Agriculture; the General Agency for Specialized Inspection (GASI); the Confederation of Mongolian Trade Unions; the ILO; and NGOs.(3, 21)
Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council (Sub-Council)	Coordinate government efforts to combat trafficking in persons and monitor implementation of anti-human trafficking legislation. Function as a part of the Council on Crime Prevention under the Ministry of Justice (MOJ).(3, 19) Currently has 15 members representing 12 different organizations and two NGOs. Government members include the Border Protection Agency, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Health, the MOJ, the MOL, the Ministry of Population Development and Social Protection, the General Authority for Citizenship and Migration, National Authority for Children (NAC), and the National Police Agency (NPA).(19)

The Coordinating Council, which was briefly established and then dissolved in 2013, was reestablished in November 2014. Although the Coordinating Council plays an important role in guiding government efforts on child labor, the reestablished body did not convene before year's end.(9)

In 2014, the Government's Crime Prevention and Awareness Fund allocated roughly $30,000 to fund the work of the Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council.(39) During the reporting period, approximately 30 representatives from Sub-Council member organizations participated in a training on how to provide specialized services to victims of human trafficking. With funding from The Asia Foundation, the Sub-Council also collaborated with a local NGO to conduct a training for journalists on how to effectively report on trafficking in persons cases in a manner that protects victim identity and privacy.(19)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mongolia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and National Action Plan (2011-2016)	Identifies specific actions to combat child labor through 2016 through a National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Aims to improve legal protection for children and increase children's access to health care and education.(13) In 2014, key stakeholders agreed to update the activities described in the National Action Plan, and a budget of nearly $96,000 was allocated for its implementation.(9)
State Policy on Herders	Describes the conditions and criteria for engaging children in herding, to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in that sector.(18)
National Development Strategy*	Calls for improvements in education, health, social welfare, and labor policies through 2020. Priorities include the education, safety, and health of vulnerable children.(41)

Policy	Description
Child Protection Strategy (2011–2016)	Aims to provide child welfare programs at the local level in collaboration with NGOs and local government offices. Includes a component related to child labor prevention and elimination. (3, 42) In 2014, the National Authority for Children (NAC) received a budget of $62,296 for implementation of activities.(9)
Strategy for Strengthening Child Protection (2010–2015)	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. Seeks to strengthen relevant legislation to protect children's rights, including the Law on Labor, and to build the capacity of child protection workers.(43)

Due to complications resulting from the restructuring of the Government of Mongolia in 2014, relevant agencies made minimal efforts to implement the National Program for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. The Ministry of Labor disbursed a portion of the policy budget to the provinces and the districts of Ulaanbaatar for local-level implementation of activities to prevent child labor.(9) In particular, funds were used for public awareness projects related to child jockeying. Government officials reported that they lacked sufficient knowledge of the contents of the National Action Plan and of implementation efforts.(9)

During the reporting period, the Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council began drafting a revised National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons, but it is not expected to be finalized until 2015.(39)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Mongolia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Children's Money Program*‡	General Agency for Social Welfare and Service, General Agency for State Registration, and Human Development Fund program that distributes approximately $12 per month to children up to age 18. Partial continuation of a former program that distributed national profit from mineral resources to funding for health insurance, pensions, and education tuition.(3, 44-46)
School Lunch Program*‡	Government program that subsidizes meals to encourage low-income children to attend school, particularly at the secondary level.(3)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (GAP11) (2011–2015)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries, to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor.(47) In 2014, the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) completed its review of the Criminal Code and related legislation to more comprehensively prohibit the worst forms of child labor and forced labor. MOJ submitted the revised draft of the Criminal Code to Parliament; however, in December the draft was withdrawn by the new Minister of Justice for further review.(21, 35, 47)
Government Sub-Program on Development of Small-Scale Mining (2008-2015)	Minister for Agriculture and Industry, Minister for Energy, and local governor-implemented program that aims to eliminate child labor in the mining sector, with provisions for providing children with informal or distance education.(14, 39)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Mongolia.

During the reporting period, two programs that formerly provided shelter and social services to children working on the street were discontinued. The Address Identification Center (AIC) was converted to a shelter for victims of domestic violence, and the Child Development and Protection Center became an orphanage.(9) This reduction in care centers leaves street children engaged in child labor vulnerable.(9) Although the Government is implementing a program to address child labor in mining, research found no evidence that the Government carried out programs to assist children working in many relevant sectors, including in herding, animal husbandry, and commercial sexual exploitation.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Montenegro made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government amended the Labor Law to increase penalties for child labor violations and enacted the Foreigners Law, which includes protections for foreign victims of child trafficking and simplifies the process for identifying child trafficking victims. In addition, the Government reestablished the Council for the Rights of the Child to implement the National Plan for Children and adopted a new action plan to implement the Strategy for the Improvement of the Position of Roma and Other Minorities. However, children in Montenegro are engaged in child labor, including in begging and in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. The Government has not determined the types of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, and there are no programs that systematically address the problem of children involved in forced begging and other work on the streets.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Montenegro are engaged in child labor, including in begging.(1-4) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging.(1, 2, 4-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Montenegro.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	12.9 (12,867)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	87.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	14.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2005.(8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including collecting scrap metal,* vending small goods and food items,* washing car windows,* and begging (1-4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking* (5, 6, 9, 10) Forced begging sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1, 2, 4-6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3 (a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Child begging remains the predominant child labor issue in Montenegro.(1-6) Organized forced begging involving children remains a problem, especially among children from the Roma community.(2, 11)

Montenegro is a source, destination, and transit country for children trafficked for forced labor, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. Children are trafficked internally and externally from and to other Balkan countries.(10) Children from the Roma, Ashkali, and Egyptian populations are at a higher risk of trafficking, due to lower rates of registration and school attendance and higher rates of participation in street work.(5, 9, 10, 12) Both boys and girls from these communities are vulnerable to forced begging, while trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation is more common among girls.(10)

Although the government has adopted the Strategy for the Improvement of the Position of Roma and Other Minorities, which includes the goal of increasing birth registration among minorities, many Roma, Ashkali, and Egyptian children continue to lack birth registration. This makes it difficult for these children to access social services, health care, and education.(3, 13-15) The higher rate of unregistered children in these communities appears to be related to insufficient awareness of the importance of civil registration, a lack of identity documents among the adults, and costs associated with the registration process.(3) Unregistered children who do not have access to education or other social services are at a higher risk of exploitation in the worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 16 of the Labor Law of 2008 (16)

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 209-211 of the Criminal Code of Republic of Montenegro (18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Articles 162 and 163 of the Law on the Armed Forces of Montenegro (19, 20)

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 75 of the Constitution of Republic of Montenegro (17)

* No conscription (22)

In July 2014, the Government adopted amendments to the Labor Law that increase penalties for labor violations, including increased fines for labor violations involving children. The law specifies fines ranging from $3,086 to $30,864 for violations of these provisions.(11)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In December 2014, the Government enacted the Foreigners Law, which includes provisions to ensure that children who are victims of human trafficking or domestic violence or are unaccompanied receive a temporary residence permit and access to health care, education, and social services. The law requires police to cooperate with NGOs and social workers to determine whether a minor is a victim of human trafficking and therefore eligible for these benefits.(6, 23) Previously, the status of “victim of human trafficking” was only assigned if a victim’s trafficker was convicted and sentenced.(9) The law guarantees that children will receive witness protection if necessary and will not be returned to their country of origin if doing so would endanger their well-being.(6, 23) The law also introduced a new legal provision, allowing children of legal immigrants to receive residence permits based on the status of their parents.(20, 23)

Throughout the reporting period, the Government enacted a number of regulations to support the Law on Social and Child Protection. This included enacting regulations to define standards and conditions for the accommodation of children in foster care and shelters, and outlining eligibility criteria for children to receive social services.(4, 20)

Despite these efforts, gaps in the legal framework still exist. While the Labor Law prohibits children under 18 from performing overtime and night work, Article 106 of the Labor Law allows employees between age 15 and 18 to work at night if it is necessary to continue work that was interrupted by natural disasters or to prevent damage to raw and other materials.(16, 24) In addition, while Articles 104 and 106 of the Labor Law prohibit children from night work and work that endangers children’s health and life, the Government has not determined in a clear and comprehensive manner the types of dangerous work activities that are prohibited to children.(4, 16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Labor Inspectorate	Monitor enforcement of labor law, which also contains child labor regulations, and monitor working conditions in workplaces throughout the country.(11, 25, 26) Lead efforts, as an independent agency, in enforcing labor laws, including those that protect working children.(11, 20, 27)
Supreme State Prosecutor	Investigate and enforce criminal laws on forced labor and human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation.(6, 11) Collect data on court rulings and crime convictions and submit them to the Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (TIP Office).(6)
Police Directorate within the Ministry of Interior	Enforce laws against sex trafficking and forced labor. Coordinate law enforcement actions on a national level.(6) Be responsible for proactive identification of the victims of trafficking. Collect data on the number of police investigations and submit it to the TIP Office.(6)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce the Criminal Code by prosecuting crimes against children, including human trafficking, child begging, and child abuse.(28)
The Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare	Protect children and families by providing social, child, and family protection in its Social Welfare Centers. Identify potential victims of trafficking.(6)
Ombudsman’s Deputy for the Rights of the Child	Monitor the situation of children in the country, using strategies such as visiting schools and institutions, holding focus groups, and creating e-mails and social blogs for children of various ages.(11)

Law enforcement agencies in Montenegro took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Labor Inspectorate, which is a part of the Inspectorate General, employed 34 inspectors.(4, 11) During the reporting period, labor inspectors received training on how to identify human trafficking for labor exploitation.(4) However, according to Inspectorate officials, the number of inspectors is inadequate to conduct inspections across the entire country, and funding is insufficient to cover the scope of general inspection duties.(4, 11)

In 2014, the Labor Inspectorate carried out 11,844 inspections.(29) Inspectors are able to conduct unannounced inspections and proactively plan labor inspections on an annual basis as well as conduct complaint-based inspections.(4) In 2014, inspectors found 11 violations of labor law in which employers failed to provide employment contracts to child employees of legal working age.

Authorities assisted the children in acquiring contracts, and all 11 cases resulted in fines of between approximately $230 and $600.(4) The Government does not collect or publish information on the number of child labor law violations; however, the Government does maintain a database on children involved in begging.(4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, police officers, inspectors, and immigration staff received training on trafficking in persons.(10) During the reporting period, police identified one victim of child trafficking.(10) In the first 9 months of 2014, police apprehended 100 child beggars. Five children were taken to the Ljubovic Center for Children and Youth in Podgorica, one child was taken to a social center, and the rest were returned to their families.(4) Generally, the police inform parents of children who are caught begging. If the parents are not available, children are referred to a temporary stay in the Ljubovic Center and then to local Social Welfare Centers.(30) The Ombudsman for Human Rights has criticized the police and Social Welfare Centers for insufficiently and inconsistently tracking information on children caught begging. The Ombudsman also noted that many child beggars were treated as delinquents rather than victims, that Social Welfare Centers only provide services to the small minority of child beggars who are registered citizens of Montenegro, and that there is a systemic lack of specialized services for the reintegration of children into the society.(11, 31)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government of Montenegro has established the National Office for Combating Human Trafficking and the Council for the Rights of the Child, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator	Coordinate efforts against trafficking in persons among relevant Government institutions and international organizations and ensure their cooperation. Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor (cont)

Policy	Description
Strategy for the Improvement of the Position of Roma and Other Minorities (2012 – 2016)	Addresses issues such as the legal framework, education, employment, child protection, housing, and participation in public life for Roma and other minorities. Implemented by the Ministry for Minority and Human Rights.(11, 28) Includes the goals of increasing birth registration among minority communities through an information and awareness campaign and eliminating begging among Roma and Egyptian children.(15) A new action plan to implement this strategy was adopted in April 2014.(4)
UNICEF Country Program (2012 – 2016)	Addresses disparities in access to quality social services for children and families; harmonizes the country's legal framework with EU and UN standards; implements and monitors policies relevant to child-focused governance and social inclusion; applies the principles and standards of the CRC and facilitates independent monitoring.(14, 33)
National Strategy for Combating Human Trafficking (2012 – 2018)	Outlines Montenegro's objectives and goals for combating human trafficking and defines measurements for improvement. Goals include raising public awareness of human trafficking, strengthening the Government's capacity for victim identification and service provision, improving interagency coordination, and raising the efficiency of prosecutions.(34)
Strategy for the Development of Social and Child Protection (2013 – 2017)*	Builds an integrated social and child protection system, including monthly social assistance, health care, and a child allowance that is conditional on school attendance.(24)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

The Strategy Coordinator for the Strategy for the Improvement of the Position of Roma and Other Minorities noted that the policy lacked sufficient funding in 2014.(20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Montenegro funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Welfare and Child Care System Reform: Enhancing Social Inclusion (2013 – 2017)*‡	$4.5 million, 4-year project sponsored by the Ministry of Education and Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare. Implemented jointly by the Government, UNDP, and UNICEF to strengthen protection for children under the Strategy for the Development of Social and Child Protection. Comprised of three phases: Inclusive Education, which has been completed, Reform of Social Protection, and Child Care System Reform.(24)
Social Card – Social Welfare Information System Program*‡	Project to build a shared social welfare information system to facilitate information exchange among social services providers. Project plans to provide a unique Social Card to each beneficiary family to make eligibility information for each family easily available to all relevant institutions.(4, 20)
Institute for Social and Child Protection†	Issue licenses for social workers and other competent personnel; conduct surveys and research about social and child protection; provide counseling and expertise; monitor provision of child protection services. Established through a Government decree in February 2014 and did not achieve full staffing or full operational capacity during 2014.(4, 20)
One of Five‡	The Council of Europe campaign to reduce and stop sexual violence against children, including commercial sexual exploitation.(35, 36) Led to the development of the Action Plan against the Sexual Abuse of Children.(28)
Shelter for Human Trafficking Victims‡	Program funded by the Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator to cover operational costs of the shelter, including the salaries of shelter employees; the hotline for victims of trafficking; and some basic food, clothing, and medical assistance for victims.(28)
Social Welfare Centers‡	Government-supported social welfare centers that provide social, child, and family protection, including to victims of child trafficking.(28, 37)
Group Children Center*	UNICEF- and the EU-supported program launched with a pilot to develop a framework for the foster care system as an alternative placement in Government institutions.(11)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Montenegro.

Although the Government of Montenegro has implemented programs for the general protection of children and for child trafficking victims, research found no evidence of programs to specifically and systematically address child labor in begging and the worst forms of child labor in forced begging.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Morocco made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Employment and Social Affairs established a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor, conducted a study on the nature and extent of children labor on small farms, and supported significant efforts to combat child labor in the Marrakesh-Tensift-Al-Haouz region. However, children in Morocco are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The Government continues to delay approving legislation that would protect children employed in domestic work and the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to effectively enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Morocco are engaged in child labor, including in the raising livestock. Children in Morocco are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The Moroccan High Commission for Planning's 2013 labor survey indicates a steady decline in the incidence of child labor over the last decade.(1-3) Child labor occurs in urban areas, although it is primarily a rural phenomenon and is concentrated in areas where education levels remain low, especially in four regions: Chaouia-Ouardigha, Doukkala-Abda, El Gharb-Chrarda-Beni Hssen, and Marrakech-Tensift-Al Haouz.(3) A 2014 study found that child labor is prevalent on small farms throughout Morocco.(4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Morocco.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10-14 yrs.	4.5 (150,178)
Attending School (%)	6-14 yrs.	82.9
Combining Work and School (%)	10-14 yrs.	0.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2013.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Enquête sur la Population et la Santé Familiale, 2003-2004.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting and harvesting argan,* grain,* olives,* vegetables,* and fruit* (4)
	Herding goats,* cattle* and sheep* (4)

	Production of artisanal crafts* (3, 7, 10)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (1, 3, 10-14)
	Maintenance and repair of motor vehicles (1, 15)
	Street peddling (1, 16)
	Metallurgy* (1, 17)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3, 9, 14, 18-20)
	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3, 9, 11, 13, 20-23)
	Forced labor in the production of artisanal crafts and construction* (9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, primarily boys, are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.(18, 19) This problem is most prevalent in popular sites such as Agadir, Marrakech, and Tangier, which attract tourists from the Persian Gulf and Europe.(19, 24)

Despite strong enrollment rates in the early years of primary school, school dropout rates remain a problem, with reports stating that as many as 65 percent of children had failed to complete the 9 years of compulsory schooling as of the most recently researched period, 2011–2012.(3, 25) During research conducted by Morocco’s High Commission for Planning in 2013, some children stated that they did not attend school because they were obligated to work in order to contribute to the family income. Children also drop out due to lack of adequate transportation and prohibitively expensive costs associated with attending school.(3, 4) Irrelevant school curricula, and lack of security in the school environment are also factors that cause children to drop out, thus increasing their vulnerability to child labor.(1, 26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government of Morocco has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 143 of The New Labor Code of 2004 (27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 147 of The New Labor Code of 2004 (27)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Hazardous Child Labor List; Decree No. 2-10-183 (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 467 of The New Labor Code of 2004 (27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 503 of the Penal Code (29)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Hazardous Child Labor List; Decree No. 2-10-183 (28)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Royal Decree of 9 June 1996 (30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Law No. 04-00 (31)
Free Public Education	Yes		Law No. 04-00 (31)

* No conscription (30)

The minimum age protections in the Labor Code do not apply to children who are self-employed, or work in traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for businesses with less than five employees, or those who work in private farms and residences (including domestic work), leaving children vulnerable to exploitation.(9, 27, 32)

The Government continued for another year to refine a draft bill that would provide protections for child domestic workers. If passed, the law would prohibit the employment of underage children in domestic work and determine the working conditions, terms, and conditions for domestic work.(32) The continued failure to pass this bill puts children engaged in domestic work at risk of exploitative labor conditions.(1, 3, 33)

The Labor Code allows children under age 15 to perform certain types of agricultural work, and children ages 16 to 17 to perform agricultural work at night.(27) Local stakeholders and the ILO Committee of Experts report that the fine amounts set forth in the labor code for companies that employ children in hazardous work are inadequate to act as an effective deterrent.(32, 34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Social Affairs' (MOESA) Child Labor Task Force	Enforce child labor laws and oversee programs on child labor. Employ labor inspectors in 51 sectors across Morocco; one inspector in each sector dedicated to child labor.(3, 9, 35, 36) Establish satellites in nine regional centers throughout the country to provide occupational health and safety services, administer social security, organize labor inspections and employment services.(3)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforce prohibitions on prostitution and other exploitative crimes involving minors as established in the Penal Code.(36)
Ministry of Justice and Liberties (MOJ)	Prosecute criminal offenses against children, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.(35)
MOJ's Child Labor Units	Process cases involving women and children within the court system.(1) Comprises 88 units as of 2014.(20)

Law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Employment and Social Affairs (MOESA) employed 478 labor inspectors and coordinated with the ILO-IPEC to provide 80 inspectors and ministry staff with training on child labor.(3) However, enforcement of child labor laws remains weak due to an insufficient number of labor inspectors, systemic corruption, as well as a lack of financial resources.(3, 34) The number of inspectors is insufficient to effectively enforce child labor laws. Official procedures involved with processing child labor violations require the participation of several agencies per case, placing insurmountable administrative burdens on labor inspectors.(1)

During a meeting with USDOL representatives in 2014, MOESA officials confirmed that labor inspections are conducted unannounced and can be conducted in any place of business.(3, 37) However, current law prohibits labor inspectors from entering private farms and urban residences. Children, even as young as age 6, work in these spaces and are therefore not protected by current labor law.(4, 9)

MOESA reported that during the first trimester of 2014, inspectors identified 357 child laborers, 78 of whom were under age 15. Of these 78 children, 75 were removed from work, while 197 out of 357 children ages 15 to 17 were removed from hazardous work. Although the Government does not provide comprehensive information regarding the number of prosecutions and the amount of penalties, the MOJ reported having prosecuted 37 individuals for employing child domestic workers.(3, 20)

Morocco has a toll-free hotline for child victims of violence, but the number of calls related to child labor is unknown.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014 The Ministry of Justice and Liberties (MOJ) reported that in 2014, 153 cases of sexual exploitation of a minor for profit were investigated, and 5 cases of prostitution of a minor were investigated. However, the MOJ did not provide information on prosecutions, convictions, or sentencing.(20) The MOJ also reported that officials in law enforcement and judicial ministries had received training on enforcing criminal child labor law.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MOESA's Office for the Fight Against Child Labor*	Coordinate policies and efforts to combat child labor.(3, 37) Provide guidance and limited funding to NGOs working against child labor.(1) Provided $166,000 to NGOs in 2014.(3)
Ministry of Solidarity, Women, Family and Social Development (MSWFSD)	Coordinate the implementation of the National Plan of Action for Children (PANE) (2006–2015). Coordinate the Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children.(20) Establish continuity of child protection efforts, increase access to education, and eliminate child labor.(36, 38)
Inter-Ministerial Delegation for Human Rights	Establish policies that promote child protection.(3)
Ministry for Moroccans Resident Abroad and Migration Affairs	Coordinate efforts to reduce migrant vulnerability to child labor. Promote access to public education facilities for migrant children, decreasing their vulnerability to child labor and human trafficking.(3)

Operate a toll-free hotline available to child victims of violence, including commercial sexual exploitation.(1) Operate 84 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence, sexual abuse or neglect.(3, 36) These centers assisted 1,067 children in 2014.(39)
Ministry of National Education and Vocational Training (MONEVT)	Provide education and job training to former child workers, including former child domestic workers.(20)

*Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MSWFSD's PANE (2006–2015)*	Establishes policies that promote children's health, protection, civic participation, and education. Supported by UNICEF.(3, 38)
MSWFSD's Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children	Promotes an interdisciplinary approach to analyze the scope of services that prohibit; prevent; and respond to abuse, exploitation, and violence against children. Designates MOESA as the coordinating body for the fight against child labor.(3, 20)
National Migration Strategy*	Establishes policies that promote human rights-based approach to migration. Facilitates integration of legal immigrants. Provides services, including expanding access to public education facilities for migrant children, thus decreasing their vulnerability to child labor and human trafficking.(1, 3, 20)
UNDAF (2012–2016)*	Promotes education, health, and socioeconomic development in an effort to alleviate poverty. Focuses on providing equal access to education for vulnerable children.(39, 40)

*Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Morocco funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Promise Pathways: Reducing Child Labor Through Viable Paths in Education and Decent Work (2014–2017)†	$5 million USDOL-funded, 4-year program to reduce child labor in Morocco by increasing access to education for 5,500 children and youth (ages 6 to 17) and by providing livelihood and other social services to 1,000 siblings, parents, and caregivers age 18 and older in the Marrakech-Tensift-Al-Haouz region. Conducts policy analysis and raises awareness on the hazards of child labor. Builds the capacity of relevant government and nongovernment stakeholders to better address the issue. Targets children engaged in the production of handicrafts, domestic work, and agriculture.(3, 41, 42)
Study on Children and Sexual Violence in Morocco†	Funded by the Government of France, a joint UNICEF and Human Rights Council of Morocco program that studied sexual violence against children in Morocco, including forced prostitution.(3, 18, 20)
Study on Children working on Small Farms in Morocco†	USDOL-funded, joint MOESA and ILO-IPEC program that analyzed the extent and nature of child labor on small farms in Morocco.(3, 4)
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Advocacy†	USDOS-funded, Government of Morocco and UNODC initiative that provided support for anti-human trafficking efforts. Led workshops to support anti-trafficking in persons legislation, including the prohibition on trafficking children.(3) Provided training to the MOI and the MOJ on legal frameworks, identification and assistance to victims, and investigative techniques.(3)
Rural Social Service Support*	Royal family-funded-Mohammed V Foundation for Solidarity program to provide funding to NGOs that improve living conditions for very low-income populations.(3)
National Vocational Programs‡	MONEVT program that provides education and training to at-risk youth; specific programs address factors that contribute to reduction of child labor.(1, 3)
“Tayssir,” Conditional Cash Transfer Program‡*	2014–2015 budget of $235 million, MONEVT program that provides direct cash transfers of between $7 and $16 a month, to qualifying families if the children meet school attendance criteria. Provides transportation and student housing through a program with Entraide Nationale.(3) Aims to increase school enrollment and reduce dropout rates, particularly in rural areas.(17, 36, 43, 44) Succeeded in reducing public school dropout rates among its beneficiaries by 68 percent and increasing school enrollment by 10 percent during the reporting period.(1, 3, 45, 46)
Child Protection Centers‡	Childhood Division of the Ministry of Youth and Sport program that provides social and educational services to minors referred by the courts. Serves victims of abuse, child laborers, and street children, among others. Aims to strengthen children’s ties with their families and society.(47, 48)
Child Protection Units‡	Government program that provides temporary shelter for street children, including former child domestic workers. Offers medical, legal, and psychological services. Based in Casablanca, Essaouira, Marrakech, Meknès, and Tangier. An initiative of the PANE policy.(14, 36, 49)
Social Welfare Program*	UNDAF program that addresses education, including equal access to education, especially for vulnerable children. Also addresses health and socioeconomic development of children.(1)
National Initiative for Human Development Support Project Phase II (2011–2015)*	$2 billion World Bank-funded, government program that increases access to basic services, such as schools; provides enhanced income-earning opportunities, such as microcredit for women; and supports improved civic participation to assure sustainability.(3, 20, 49-51)
Taking Action Against Child Domestic Work in Africa and the Union of Mediterranean Countries (2011–2015)	$1.3 million Government of France-funded, 5-year project to combat child domestic labor.(52)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

Although the Government of Morocco has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

NGOs that work with child laborers and at-risk children report having received only a small portion of their expected funding from the Government. They stressed that government support is not sufficient to carry out their activities, and most were required to rely on private and international donations.(1, 3) NGOs also reported that their government counterparts lack the necessary qualifications to effectively address child labor issues, especially in hospital and court units.(3, 25)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

There continue to be data gaps regarding the nature and extent of child labor in Morocco. While the Government expressed support to work with the ILO-IPEC to carry a national child labor survey, there have been insufficient efforts to begin implementation of the survey.(1, 3, 7)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Mozambique made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed a new Penal Code which contains provisions on the commercial sexual exploitation of children. The Government also adopted a policy to increase birth registration nationwide, launched a social program to strengthen coordination to address human trafficking, and began conducting research on child labor. However, children in Mozambique are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and domestic work. Mozambique's legal framework leaves gaps in prohibiting child labor, including its worst forms. The law does not prohibit hazardous occupations or activities for children and education is only compulsory until age 13, leaving children ages 13 to 14 vulnerable to child labor. Current programs target street children and child trafficking victims but do not address other sectors in which children engage in hazardous work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mozambique are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and domestic work.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mozambique.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	22.5 (1,526,560)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	69.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	22.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		52.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Clusters Survey 3, 2008.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cotton,* sesame,* tea,* cashews,* and tobacco (2, 3, 8-14)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (3, 9)
	Forestry,* activities unknown (3)
Services	Domestic work (8, 9, 12, 15)
	Street work, including car washing, street vending, collecting rubbish and scrap metal, and begging (2, 3, 16-22)
	Selling alcoholic beverages in markets* (22)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 16, 20, 23-31)
	Forced labor in agriculture* and domestic work,* each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 28, 31)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Girls from Malawi, Swaziland, and Zimbabwe are trafficked to Mozambique for commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work.(2, 28, 29, 31, 32) Within Mozambique, commercial sexual exploitation is especially prevalent in border towns and the urban regions of Beira, Maputo, Nacala, Nampula, and Tete.(2, 16, 20, 23, 24, 26, 27, 31) Commercial sexual exploitation of girls occurs in bars, roadside clubs, restaurants, and at overnight stopping points along the southern transport corridor that links Maputo, Swaziland, and South Africa.(2, 31)

Children are trafficked internally and to South Africa for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in agriculture, mines, and domestic work.(2, 24, 29, 31, 33-37)

Although primary education is free, access to education in Mozambique is limited because of the lack of schools and teachers. Additionally, the cost of school supplies is prohibitive for many families.(2, 17, 21, 25, 38-41) Despite government efforts to provide birth registration to children, some children may not attend school because they lack birth records needed for enrollment.(2, 26, 42) Even though the National Organization of Professors establishes a code of conduct, verbal, physical, and sexual abuse is common in schools. Teachers often demand sex from female students as a condition for advancement to the next grade.(2, 4, 20, 43) For many girls, this type of abuse leads to withdrawal from school.(2, 20, 42, 43)

Additionally, there are an estimated 740,000 orphaned children, many of whom lost their parents to HIV/AIDS.(44, 45) The Government estimates that nearly 20,000 children are heads of households responsible for their younger siblings.(44, 46) As a result, they are likely to experience poor school attendance and are at risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(20, 47)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mozambique has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 26 of the Labor Law (48)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 23 of the Labor Law (48)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article 23 of the Labor Law (48)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	13	Article 41 of the Law of Basic Child Protection (55, 56)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 41 of the Law of Basic Child Protection (55)

The Labor Law states that employers may not engage children under 18 years of age in unhealthy or dangerous work, but it does not identify specific prohibited hazardous activities.(48, 52)

While children age 18 and younger are prohibited from military conscription, the age limit may be lowered during times of war, therefore making children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(3)

In December 2014, the Government passed a new Penal Code with technical support from UNICEF.(5) The Penal Code contains prohibitions on facilitating prostitution and child pornography.(51) Law No. 6/2008 provides penalties for anyone who recruits, sells, and benefits financially from the commercial sexual exploitation of children; however, the law does not prohibit the use of a child for commercial sexual exploitation.(49, 51, 52)

The Law of Basic Child Protection provides free and compulsory education through primary school.(55) Primary school covers 7 years, making education compulsory until age 13, while the minimum age for work is 15. This gap between the end of compulsory education and the minimum age for work leaves children ages 13 to 14 vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms.(56)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRAB)	Carry out child labor inspections and receive child labor complaints.(3)
Labor Inspectorate General	Enforce criminal law, including forced child labor and child trafficking, along with the National Police Force and the Criminal Investigation Branch (PIC).(3)
The National Police Force	Enforce all criminal laws, including forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children for illicit activities.(3)
PIC	Investigate and refer cases to the Attorney General's Office. Has a seven-person unit devoted to anti-trafficking and violence against women and children.(3)
Attorney General's Office	Lead the Government's anti-human trafficking efforts and receive prosecution-ready cases from the PIC. During the reporting period, the Attorney General's Office established human trafficking reference groups in three additional provinces, resulting in nationwide coverage.(31, 57)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor (MITRAB) had 135 labor inspectors.(5) Inspectors are poorly trained, making them limited in their ability to effectively enforce labor laws. Moreover, there are not enough inspectors to cover the entire population, especially when most of the population works in remote areas in agriculture.(3, 58)

MITRAB does not provide data on the number of inspections carried out for different labor law violations. Therefore, there is no information available on the number of inspections, violations found, and citations or penalties issued for child labor.(59) Between January and November 2014, the hotline Speak Child-116 received 537 complaints of child abuse and exploitation, nine of which were related to child labor.(5) Inspectors are able to conduct unannounced inspections through site visits. MITRAB does not undertake targeted child labor inspections; child labor is integrated into overall labor inspections.(5)

MITRAB officials can refer victims of child labor to either the police or to social workers from the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS) to do a family assessment and potentially place children in a foster home.(59)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. However, during the reporting period, police officers received training on protection of human trafficking victims, rights of children, domestic abuse, and child custody law.(3, 5)

In 2014, research did not identify information on the number of investigations, prosecutions, or convictions related to the criminal worst forms of child labor.(3)

In January 2013, Mozambican authorities worked with South African authorities who had rescued five Mozambican girls in forced prostitution in South Africa.(60) The case was investigated and prosecuted by South African authorities; however, in 2014, the Government of Mozambique coordinated with an NGO to provide travel to South Africa for the parents of the five victims. The Government also agreed to have South African officials provide initial rehabilitation for the young women, and planned to coordinate their repatriation to Mozambique from South Africa for final reunification with their families.(57)

There are standardized procedures for courts to refer victims of human trafficking to MGCAS' offices throughout the country, to provide support and reintegration services.(61) However, research did not find referral mechanisms for victims of other worst forms of child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council on the Rights of the Child (CNAC)	Coordinate efforts to promote the welfare of children. Led by the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS) and composed of civil society representatives and the Ministries of Justice, Education, Health, and Youth and Sports.(9)
National Commission on Children's Rights	Oversee and report on children's rights in Mozambique to the African Charter and other international bodies, and perform consultations and deliberations on national action plans and legislation.(59) Inter-ministerial body created in 2010; includes representatives from the Ministries of Gender, Children and Social Action (MGCAS), Education, Health, Interior, and Justice; civil society organizations; and religious organizations.(3, 59)
The Ministry of Interior's Women and Children Victim Assistance Units (GAMC)	Provide services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking.(31) In 215 police stations, a specialist is specifically designated to help women and children that have been victims of crimes including human trafficking, sexual abuse, domestic violence, and sexual assault.(31) Through February 2014, 490 specialists have been trained to assist victims.(60)
Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS)	Provide support and reintegration services to victims of human trafficking, including placing victims with other people or a family so as to avoid stigma and help the victims reintegrate into society.(57)

Although CNAC exists, research found no evidence that the committee functions as a coordinating mechanism to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mozambique has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Community of Portuguese-Speaking Countries (CPLP) Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Establishes four target areas to combat child labor. Includes the exchange of information and experiences; awareness-raising campaigns; use of statistical methodologies to collect child labor data; and technical cooperation and training.(62)
Employment and Vocational Training Strategy (EEFP) (2006–2015)	Reduces poverty and unemployment by working with employers, workers, and members of civil society. Conducts child labor research on different topics and sectors to help design and implement government interventions.(9) Establishes support for participating institutions; implements policies and legislation on child labor; and provides training on child labor for institutions, stakeholders, and civil society.(9)

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Children II (PNAC) (2013–2019)	Establishes four priority areas: (1) child survival, (2) child development, (3) child protection, and (4) child participation. Aims to reduce child labor in the area of child protection.(63)
National Poverty Reduction Action Plan (PARP) (2011–2014)*	Promotes inclusive economic growth and seeks to reduce poverty and vulnerability in the country. Aims to increase production and productivity in the agriculture and fishery sectors; encourage human and social development; and promote employment.(64) Also includes the Government's strategy for implementing the 2010–2014 Five-Year Plan.(9, 64)
Five-Year Government Plan (PQG) (2010–2014)*	Ensures access to basic education for all children, giving privilege to the most vulnerable children.(9) The primary school enrollment rate increased from 79.4 percent in 2013 to 94.0 percent in 2014.(64)
Civil Registration and Vital Statistics (CRVS) Investment Plan*†	Plans to strengthen legislation, raise awareness, and increase the registration of vital events, including birth registration.(65) Includes UNICEF and WHO working with the Mozambican Ministries of Justice, Health, Interior, and the National Institute of Statistics.(65, 66)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2014, MITRAB submitted the draft National Action Plan on Child Labor to a tripartite consultative committee composed of representatives from various government ministries, as well as unions, and private-sector employers. The draft remains under review.(5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Mozambique funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor and forced labor through data collection and research in Mozambique.(67)
Research Study on Child Labor†	MITRAB program to conduct a small-scale study on child labor in partnership with the University of Eduardo Mondlane.(5)
Decent Work Country Program (2011–2015)	Contributes to the national priorities of inclusive and sustainable growth and poverty reduction by providing opportunities for decent work for all. Special emphasis placed on the most vulnerable groups in the labor market.(21) Provides the Labor Inspectorate with a mandate to focus on eliminating child labor.(21)
Strengthening Coordination to Respond to Trafficking in Persons and Ensure Justice and Protection for All Victims of Trafficking in Mozambique†	$750,000, USDOS-funded 3-year project implemented by IOM to support the establishment and institutionalization of a national human trafficking referral mechanism, including for child victims of trafficking. Includes upgrading shelter facilities, training staff to meet the minimum requirements for offering aftercare services to victims of TIP, and providing comprehensive protection services.(68)
Cash Transfer Program for Children Heads of Households*‡	USAID and Government-funded program that provides cash transfers to children who are head of households. No data are available on how many children benefit from this program, but the Government has been steadily increasing funding to social protection mechanisms since 2011.(3, 69)
Programs For Street Children	Government and civil society-organized programs that provide shelters and schooling to prepare street children for reintegration into society. Regulations being drafted to define minimum standards for assessing foster care providers and more clearly define standards for the reintegration of street children into families.(69)
Direct Support to Schools Program (ADE)*‡	$17.3 million, Government-funded program that provides funds to school councils and parent associations to use in improving access to and quality of education.(59, 69)
UNICEF Radio Program	UNICEF program with the Government to communicate issues of child abuse, including child labor, on national and community radio broadcasts.(59, 70)
Victims of Violence Centers*‡	Government program operated by the GAMC that provides temporary shelter, food, limited counseling, and monitoring following reintegration for victims of crime. There are 22 centers located throughout the country.(31)

Program	Description
Prison School ( Prisões Escola )*	Ministry of Justice program that provides study opportunities for children who have been in trouble with the law.(9)
Permanent Shelter for Vulnerable Children‡	MGCAS and Save the Children coordinate to run a permanent shelter with two psychologists for vulnerable children, including trafficking victims.(60)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Mozambique.

Although the Government of Mozambique has implemented programs for street children and child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children in agriculture and domestic work. Additionally, the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Mozambique (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Namibia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the Government established an Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Labor to coordinate efforts between several ministries to combat the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the Ministry of Gender, Equality, and Child Welfare (MGECW) increased the number of shelters from six to eight for women and children to assist victims of sexual assault, gender-based violence, human trafficking, and the worst forms of child labor. In December, the Child Care and Protection Bill was passed by the National Assembly and reviewed by the National Council; the bill is awaiting signature by the President and placement in the gazette. However, children in Namibia are engaged in child labor, including in herding livestock, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Gaps remain in existing laws regarding child prostitution and the use of children for illicit activities, the number of labor law inspectors decreased during the year, and resources for enforcement were insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Namibia are engaged in child labor, including in herding livestock. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-5) The most recent Child Activities Survey is from 2005.(3, 6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Namibia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(7)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2014.(8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Tending and herding livestock, including cattle, sheep,* and goats* (1-5)
	Farming, including clearing land, plowing, planting, weeding, protecting crops against birds, and harvesting* (1)
	Domestic work (4, 5, 9, 10)
Services	Taking care of children* (1, 11, 12)
	Working in bars called shebeens *(13)
	Street work,* including selling candies,* fruits,* handicrafts,* and cell phone air time vouchers* (13, 14)

Sector/Industry	Activity
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (3, 4, 12, 13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in agriculture, cattle herding, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (4, 12, 13, 15)
	Used in illicit activities, including drug trafficking, residential break-ins, and cattle theft* (4, 9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor in Namibia takes place mainly in agriculture on communal farms in the northern part of the country. Livestock herding is conducted primarily by boys.(3) Girls perform the majority of domestic work.(9, 13) Girls, and to a lesser extent boys, are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.(9, 13) It is believed that girls from Angola, Zambia, and Zimbabwe are commercially sexually exploited within the country.(9, 15) Children from these countries are also used for livestock herding and domestic service.(14) Children orphaned as a result of HIV/AIDS and children from the marginalized San ethnic group are particularly vulnerable to labor exploitation.(13, 16, 17) Under Article 25 of the Education Act, a school board with majority vote from parents could establish a school development fund that would be used to improve educational activities and develop school facilities.(18) However, the Ministry of Education determined that school development funds (school registration fees) became a barrier for children to access primary education and therefore instructed school boards in 2013 to not charge school registration fees. The Ministry of Education continued its efforts to ensure that schools were not charging school registration fees throughout the year.(16, 30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Namibia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Chapter 2, Article 3(2) of the Labor Act (19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 15 of the Constitution; Chapter 2, Article 3(4) of the Labor Act (19, 20)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Chapter 2, Articles 3(3)(d) and 4 of the Labor Act (19, 21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 9 of the Constitution; Chapter 2, Article 4 of the Labor Act (19, 20)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 15 of the Prevention of Organized Crime Act (9, 20, 22, 23)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 2 of the Combating of Immoral Practices Act Amendment Act (24)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Chapter 9 of the Namibian Defense Force Personnel Policies (9, 13, 25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 20 of the Constitution (20)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 20 of the Constitution (20)

The Namibian Constitution states that children, under age 16, should not be required to “perform work that is likely to be hazardous” but the Labor Act states that children between 16-18 years may perform hazardous work subject to approval by the Minister of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW) and restrictions outlined in Articles 3(c) and 3 (d) of the Labor Act. (19, 20) Under Articles 3(c) and 3(d) of the Labor Act, children are prohibited from hazardous work including underground work, mining, construction, demolition, manufacturing, electrical work, installation of machinery, and night work. However, the law does not prohibit hazardous work in the agriculture sector where children as young as 10 years old in the Caprivi, Kavango, Oshikoto and Ohangwena regions have been found working on average 11 hours a day as herd boys, field de-bushers, weeders, ploughers, weeders, and harvesters.(19, 26, 27) The MLSW reported that it drafted additional hazardous work prohibitions, but these have not been approved.(14, 28) The Government has not yet developed regulations to determine light work activities and the conditions for such work that may be permitted for young persons between the ages of 12 and 14.(21) Under the Prevention of Organized Crime Act, the penalty for human trafficking is a fine of N$1,000,000 or to imprisonment not exceeding 50 years.(23)

The Combating of Immoral Practices Act criminalizes sexual acts with children under the age of 16, and perpetrators are liable for a fine not exceeding approximately $3,330 or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding 10 years or both.(24) However, the law does not address the use, procuring, or offering of children under 18 years for the purposes of prostitution.(29) The law prohibits parents or guardians from offering or procuring children for prostitution but does not prohibit other persons other than parents or guardians.(29) The Combating of Immoral Practices Act does not establish a minimum penalty for crimes involving child prostitution and pornography.

The Government, in collaboration with civil society, drafted a Child Care and Protection Bill to address child trafficking and other crimes, including prostitution, pornography, and the use of children for illicit activities.(3, 9, 10) In December, Namibia’s omnibus Child Care and Protection Bill was passed by the National Assembly and reviewed by the National Council; the bill awaits the President’s signature and placement in the gazette for the bill to enter into force.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW)	Enforce child labor laws and investigate allegations of violations, including forced labor. Responsible for cases involving human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(3, 9, 31) Work with the Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS); Ministry of Gender, Equality, and Child Welfare (MGECW); Namibia Central Intelligence Service; and Ministry of Education (MOE) on child labor matters.(3, 9) Lead these ministries in joint inspection teams.(3, 9, 31)
Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS)	Enforce criminal laws and conduct site visits with labor inspectors.(3, 9) The MSS through the Namibian Police handles enforcement.(9, 32)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Gender, Equality, and Child Welfare (MGECW)	Responsible for cases involving human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(9, 31) Collaborate with the Namibian Police's Women and Child Protection Units (WACPU) to address child labor issues.(3, 9) Remove children from child labor situations during inspections and take them to a regional WACPU to receive assistance from MGECW social workers or to an MGECW shelter, eight of which exist throughout the country.(9, 14)
Joint Child Labor Inspection Committee	Coordinate activities to enforce child labor laws. Committee includes the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW), Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS) and the Ministry of Gender Equality and Child Welfare (MGECW).(3) Refer children identified during labor inspections to MGECW social workers or to an MGECW-operated shelter for care.(3)

Law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW) employed approximately 67 labor inspectors, a decrease of 6 inspectors, and added 21 occupational health and safety inspectors during the year. All inspectors received child labor training during the year.(28). All inspectors received child labor training during the reporting period; however, an independent labor consultant found the number of inspectors was inadequate to effectively enforce child labor laws. Research found no information on the funding level, the types of referral mechanisms, the total number of inspections conducted, or the areas in which inspections were carried out.(28) MLSW officials stated that the labor inspectors struggled with insufficient office space and lack of transportation; labor inspectors are not assigned vehicles to carry out inspections. During the reporting period no child labor violations were found; therefore no penalties or citations were issued.(28)

Access to private and small farms, large communal farms, family-owned commercial farms, and private households is difficult.(16, 28, 31) NGOs report that the difficulty accessing such locations makes assessing and addressing child labor challenging.(3, 16, 28)

Criminal Law Enforcement

No information is available on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor, the number of investigations conducted, the availability of referral mechanisms, or the number of trainings received by child labor criminal enforcement agents. During the year, there were no prosecutions or convictions for child labor violations.(28) However, the Government has a toll-free hotline operated by Namibian Police for reporting crimes, including child trafficking.(38)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Labor*	Coordinate Government policies and efforts to combat child labor. The committee consists of officials from the Ministry of Education (MOE), Ministry of Gender Equality and Child Welfare (MGECW), Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS), as well as the Office of the Ombudsman.(28) The Committee has yet to meet.(28)
Women and Child Protection Units	Coordinate the efforts of ministries, including Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW), Ministry of Home Affairs and Immigration, Namibian Police, MGECW, and MOE that handle the worst forms of child labor. In addition, all these ministries participate in MLSW-led inspection teams that investigate labor violations in the country.(9)
Child Care and Protection Forums	Serve as a development and coordination forum to address child protection issues and services within the country and includes regional councils, MGECW social workers, government agencies, NGOs, community leaders, churches, and other local-level stakeholders.(9)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description

National Plan of Action on Gender-Based Violence (2012-2016)	Lays out a plan for reducing incidences of gender-based violence and improving the country's understanding and response. Includes child protection and trafficking concerns.(3, 9, 35)
National Protection Referral Network*	Outlines how services should be provided to children experiencing any form of abuse.(32)
Education for All National Plan of Action (2002-2015)*	Focuses on providing all children, including the most vulnerable, with relevant and quality education.(36)
National Agenda for Children (2012-2016)*	Guides the Government in advancing and protecting children's rights.(12, 37)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Namibia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Plan on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded and implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 project established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010.(38) Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers.(38)
Social Protection System*‡	MGECEW-run, comprehensive, social protection system that includes grants for orphans and children in foster care and child maintenance grants for children whose parents have died, are on pension, or are in prison.(9, 39)
Namibian School Feeding Program*‡	Government program providing mid-morning meals to about 270,000 school children throughout the country.(32)
National Youth Service*‡	Government program offering training in civic education, national voluntary service, and job skills to unemployed youth, some of whom have never attended school.(32)
Birth Registration and Documentation*	UNICEF and Government-sponsored efforts to register births and issue birth certificates, including through mobile birth registration.(16)
Shelters and victim services*‡	Eight Government-established shelters for women and children that assist victims of sexual assault, gender-based violence, and the worst forms of child labor.(9, 40) In addition, there are three Women and Child Protection Units that serve as a "one-stop-shop" for victim protection that provide lodging, medical, and psychosocial care for victims. Also, provides subsidies and funding to NGOs that assist victims of trafficking.(41)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Namibia.

Although the Government of Namibia provides assistance to vulnerable children and services to some victims of child labor, research found no evidence of programs to assist children working in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, or domestic work.

In 2014, Nepal made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Department of Labor increased its number of inspections by 25 percent, and the Nepali Police more than tripled its number of investigations and doubled the number of Women and Children Service Centers. In addition, the Ministry of Education began a pilot project for compulsory basic education, and several local governments funded activities and awareness-raising campaigns against child labor. However, children in Nepal are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Nepal lacks a compulsory education law, and children ages 16 and 17 are excluded from the protections of the country's hazardous work list, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. The number of investigations and convictions for child trafficking is also inadequate given the scope of trafficking in Nepal.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nepal are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture.(1-4) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(5-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nepal.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5-8)
	Work in leather, garments, domestic service, begging, and in circuses* each as a result of human trafficking (6-8, 13, 25-27)
	Forced labor, including bonded labor, in agriculture, domestic service, brick manufacturing, stone breaking, carpet weaving, embroidery of textiles (zari), and begging (4, 7, 13, 18, 28, 29)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Nepali children are trafficked to India to work in various sectors, including the leather and garment industries.(25, 26) Limited evidence suggests that some children are also trafficked to India to work in circuses—although reports indicate that in recent years the number of children working in circuses has declined significantly.(8, 27) Children are trafficked within Nepal and to India, the Middle East, China, Malaysia, Hong Kong, and South Korea for commercial sexual exploitation.(5-8)

Research indicates that not all children in Nepal have access to education, which increases the risk of children engaging in the worst forms of child labor. Some rural villages do not have secondary schools, requiring children to walk for hours to attend classes.(30) The costs of teacher fees, books, and uniforms are prohibitive for many families, and some children, often girls, are not sent to school.(31) In addition, a lack of sanitation facilities in schools also deters some girls from attending.(32) Children with disabilities face barriers to education in some cases, including denial of school admission.(33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Nepal has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Chapter 2.3.1 of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act, 2000 (34)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Chapter 2.4 of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act, 2000; Chapter 2.17 of the Children’s Act of 1992; Article 29 of the 2007 Interim Constitution; Human Trafficking and Transportation Control Act of 2007; Bonded Labor Prohibition Act of 2002; Kamaiya Labor (Prohibition) Act, 2002 (34-38)

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Military Service Regulations of 2013 (38, 40)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Act of 1971 (41)

* No conscription (40)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Land Reform and Management drafted a Bonded Labor Bill, which is awaiting finalization by an Inter-Ministerial committee. The draft bill addresses the elimination of all forms of bonded labor in agriculture, including the Haruwa and Charuwa systems.(42)

The Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act of 2000 establishes a list of occupations prohibited for children.(34) However, the minimum age of 16 for hazardous work, as stated in Chapters 1.2.a and 2.3.2, is not consistent with international standards and fails to protect children ages 16 and 17 from work that could jeopardize their health and safety.(43) During the reporting period, the Government of Nepal began a Decent Work Country Program with the ILO, which intends to create a revised list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.(44)

Children ages 16 and 17 are not covered under the Children's Act, as stated in Chapter 1.2.a, and therefore may face criminal penalties if found participating in activities such as commercial sexual exploitation and the sale of drugs.(35) Because 16 and 17 year olds are not considered children under the legal framework, there is no prohibition against employing children in this age group in the production of pornography.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor (DOL) within the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MoLE)	Enforce child labor laws, with inspectors having jurisdiction in both the formal and informal sectors and includes 10 District Labor Offices, which carry out investigations and hearings.(3, 24)
Central Child Welfare Board (CCWB) within the Ministry of Women, Children, and Social Welfare (MWCSW)	Monitor the enforcement of laws related to child protection, including exploitation, abuse, and neglect, at the national level. Coordinate with the MoLE and civil society to formulate and implement child protection and child labor-related policies.(3)
District Child Welfare Boards (DCWB) under the CCWB	Enforce child labor laws at the local level and lead coordination in child labor cases involving identification, rescues, and reintegration. The DCWBs include several types of members, such as Chief District Officers (CDOs), Child Welfare Officers, Child Rights Officers (CROs), and will include the newly authorized Child Protection Officers and Child Protection Inspectors.(3) Complaints received about child labor in districts without a District Labor Office can be handled by CDOs. Currently, the CROs in all 75 districts are funded by the NGOs.(3)
The Women's and Children's Service Directorate of the Nepal Police under the Ministry of Home Affairs	Investigate cases of hazardous labor involving women and children, including trafficking. Commonly known as the Women's Cell. Conduct work through the Nepal Police Women and Children Service Centers located in all 75 districts.(24) Complaints received about child labor in districts without a District Labor Office can be handled by Nepal Police.(3)
Office of the Attorney General within the Ministry of Law	Prosecute trafficking-related cases from the district level to the Supreme Court.(24)

Organization/Agency	Role
The Office of the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking	Monitor the enforcement of laws related to trafficking in persons, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, at the national level. Part of the National Human Rights Commission.(24)
Monitoring Action Committees under the MWCSW	Investigate reports of commercial sexual exploitation at the district level, including the exploitation of children specifically in the adult entertainment sector.(45)
Ministry of Land Reform and Management	Enforce laws that prohibit bonded labor in agriculture.(46)

Law enforcement agencies in Nepal took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Department of Labor (DOL) had 26 labor inspection positions, including 12 Factory Inspectors, three Senior Factory Inspectors, six Labor Officers, and five Senior Labor Officers; however, staff turnover continues to be high, and many positions were unfilled.(3) Inspectors receive periodic training on all areas of labor law, but the training is inadequate.(3) In the absence of an official DOL inspector, Chief District Officers and Nepal Police Officers have the authority to act on child labor issues.(24) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Women, Children, and Social Welfare (MWCSW) approved the creation and budgeted funds for one case manager position at each of the 75 District Child Welfare Boards (DCWB). The case manager positions include 22 Child Protection Officers and 53 Child Protection Inspectors.(3) The Ministry of Land Reform and Management is tasked with enforcement of laws that prohibit bonded labor in agriculture but lacks capacity to do so.(38)

DOL reports that funding for inspections was inadequate and that its operating budget was decreased during the reporting period.(3)

From July 2013 to July 2014, DOL conducted 1,037 site visit inspections, including unannounced inspections, which was an increase from 800 inspections the previous fiscal year. Over 90 percent of the inspections were in the formal sector, and 92 inspections were focused exclusively on child labor.(3)

From July 2013 to July 2014, DOL found 55 violations of child labor laws, occurring primarily in the informal sector, including domestic service. DOL imposed fines for all 55 violations, totaling approximately $1,450, and ordered employers to pay compensation to the child laborers that totaled approximately $3,450.(3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the number of Nepal Police Women and Children Service Centers, commonly called Women’s Cells, increased to 240 from 110, and the number of investigators in the Women’s Cells increased to 1,344 from 387.(3) During the reporting period, the MWCSW began developing a plan to reactivate Monitoring Action Committees (MAC), which had previously been dormant or ineffective, in order to obtain systematic data on the adult entertainment industry, including police raids and inspections.(45)

From July 2013 to July 2014, 185 human trafficking cases involving 296 victims, including 99 victims ages 11-16 and 37 victims ages 17-18, were registered with the police. The majority of the cases involved sex trafficking to India.(3)

The Office of Attorney General (OAG) had 213 newly brought prosecution cases from July 2013 to July 2014, which was a 29 percent increase from the previous fiscal year. Additionally, the OAG reported 105 convictions involving 203 defendants.(45) However, data available on prosecutions and convictions do not indicate the ages of the victims.(45)

Despite these increased efforts, officials and NGOs indicate that the number of investigations and convictions for child trafficking is inadequate relative to the scope of the problem.(3) Officials acknowledge that enforcement efforts are underfunded and that Nepali Police investigators have insufficient resources to investigate all trafficking cases reported.(3, 47) Nepal does not have a centralized database on trafficking victims or a coordinated approach to gather and store data.(45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Steering Committee	Implement the National Master Plan on Child Labor (2004 – 2014) and coordinate child labor eradication efforts.(48) Headed by the MoLE and comprised of other government departments, NGOs, employers, trade unions, and donors.(49)
Child Labor Elimination Section	Coordinate, monitor, and report on child labor in Nepal. Operates under the MoLE.(48)
National Network Against Child Labor	Serve as a referral mechanism for children who are found in child labor to access services.(50) Consists of District Labor Officers, District Women and Children Officers, officers from the Nepal Police Women and Children Service Centers, CDOs, NGOs, and thousands of youth clubs.(24)
Inter-Agency Coordination Group	Collaborate with the Government in assessing and mapping child protection in Nepal. Comprised of UNICEF, Plan Nepal, Save the Children International, Terres des homes, World Vision, and World Education International.(51)
National Coordination Committee on Human Trafficking	Implement laws and counter trafficking efforts, including working with NGOs to link children to proper services. Formed by the MWCSW and made up of senior officials from the MWCSW and other ministries, as well as representatives of NGOs and intergovernmental agencies and victims.(24) Serve as the lead agency involved in policy to control human trafficking.(24) Enhance coordination between central and district-level officials and NGOs through regular meetings and trainings with officials from District Committees for Controlling Human Trafficking and newly created Village Committees.(45)

In 2014, a special task force under the National Network Against Child Labor was active in drafting and finalizing three sets of directives concerning child laborers for DOL.(3) The directives are guidelines that address child labor inspection and monitoring; the rescue, reintegration, and rehabilitation of child laborers; and the litigation and prosecution of cases. They are currently being reviewed by the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MoLE).(3)

In September 2014, the National Coordination Committee on Human Trafficking (NCCHT) released an Implementation Plan for the National Plan of Action to Combat Human Trafficking (2012 – 2022). The NCCHT also established a steering committee and technical committee to conduct the first comprehensive survey to identify populations and areas most vulnerable to trafficking and to assess trafficking trends.(45)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Nepal has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Master Plan on Child Labor (2004 – 2014)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2009 and all forms of child labor by 2014.(52) Identifies bonded child labor, rag-picking, portering, child domestic service, mining, carpet weaving, and child trafficking as the worst forms of child labor to be addressed. Overseen by DOL.(24, 53) A review conducted in 2010 produced the Master Plan on Child Labor (2015 – 2025), which is awaiting approval by the MoLE.(3, 48)
School Sector Reform Plan (2009 – 2015)	Targets children out of school and at risk of entering the worst forms of child labor. Aims to expand access to education and to provide alternative schooling and non-formal education to vulnerable populations.(24, 54) Overseen by the Ministry of Education.(24, 54)
National Planning Commission's Three-Year Plan (2013 – 2015)†	Aims to create an enabling environment for the protection and promotion of children's rights, including elimination of child labor and child abuse in all sectors. During the reporting period, the updated plan was approved.(3)
National Plan of Action against Trafficking in Persons (2011 – 2016)	Promotes and protects the rights of trafficking victims and survivors, and outlines policies for providing justice and punishing perpetrators.(55)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Nepal funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Support for schools‡	MoLE program that supports five schools in the Kathmandu Valley for children ages 5 to 16 who are at risk of working in the worst forms of child labor. Provides scholarships to cover associated schooling costs for children outside the Kathmandu Valley to attend a local public school, and works with local NGOs to verify that children are attending class.(3)
Compulsory Education Pilot Program†‡	Ministry of Education program under the School Sector Reform Plan to provide compulsory basic education, including free tuition and books, in 13 districts for children ages 5 to 12.(3)
Green Flag Movement (2014 – 2017)†‡	Lalitpur and Hetauda municipal governments and CWISH jointly organized a 3-year monitoring and awareness-raising campaign to eliminate child labor. Homes and businesses display a green flag to indicate that it is a child labor-free zone.(3, 56) In 2014, 47 children in Lalitpur and four in Hetauda were rescued and reintegrated.(3)
Child Helpline - 1098‡	MWCSW and Nepal Telecom-funded helpline operated by Child Workers in Nepal (CWIN). Responds to calls about missing children, child abuse, child labor exploitation, trafficking, and child sexual abuse.(57) Currently operates in Bardia, Biratnagar, Chitwan, Dailekh, Hetauda, Kailali, Kapilvastu, Kathmandu, Lamjung, Nepalgunj, Pokhara, Surkhet, and Udaypur, with plans to expand into other parts of the country.(3, 58) Also operates in Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka to ensure access for children who have been trafficked in this region.(3, 59)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II)† (2014 – 2018)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders in at least eight countries to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. Aims to improve legislation addressing child labor issues, including by bringing local or national laws into compliance with international standards; improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor; implement a National Action Plan on the elimination of child labor; and enhance the implementation of national and local policies and programs aimed at reducing and preventing child labor in Nepal.(60)
Towards Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour as Priority (ACHIEVE) (2013 – 2016)	Government of Denmark-funded $582,000, 3-year program implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen national-level capacity and to support the policy environment. Includes the development and testing of a training program and the preparation of a national child labor policy, a revised hazardous work list, and recommendations for upgrading national legislation related to child labor.(61) Projected outcomes include creating child labor-free communities through replicable and scalable models and strengthening the policy environment and the capacity of institutions that can contribute toward child labor elimination.(61) In 2014, ACHIEVE began testing models for eliminating the worst forms of child labor in Panauti and Dhulikilel municipalities at the request of the DCWB in Kavre district. These activities are partially funded by the local governments.(3)
Comprehensive Child Labor Program (2011 – 2015)	UNICEF National Committee-funded program, implemented by UNICEF and municipal governments in collaboration with NGOs, that provides rehabilitation and reintegration services for children rescued from the worst forms of child labor. In 2014, 457 children were rescued and reunited with their families, and received services.(3)
Project for the Prevention and Reduction of Child Labor in Restaurants in the Kathmandu Valley (PRE-CLOR) (2011 – 2015)†	Japanese-funded project implemented by CWIN that increases capacity-building of municipal and ward child protection committees, grants certificate awards for child labor-free restaurants and tea shops, and continues an awareness-raising campaign that includes workshops with the MWCSW, the Ministry of Federal Affairs and Local Development, and other stakeholders.(62)
Decent Work Country Program, Nepal (2013 – 2017)†	ILO, the MoLE, Federation of Nepalese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, and the Nepal Trade Union Congress signed a memorandum of understanding on January 21, 2014 to collaborate in the implementation of the Decent Work Country Program (DWCP).(44) Key objectives are to provide technical and financial assistance to implement the provisions of ratified conventions on child labor, strengthen MoLE's child labor monitoring and reporting systems for prevention and early detection, support the mapping of community service providers, and assist the Government to revise a hazardous child labor list. The program will also conduct policy research and studies on the priority areas of child labor as specified in the National Master Plan.(44)
School Sector Reform Program (2009 – 2016)	World Bank-financed, 7-year investment loan program to support the School Sector Reform Plan (2009 – 2016). Seeks to increase access to and improve quality of school education, particularly basic education (grades one to eight), especially for children from marginalized groups.(63)
Combating Trafficking in Persons (CTIP) Project (2010 – 2016)	A $6.79 million USAID-funded, 5-year project to reduce trafficking in persons and protect the rights of victims. Aims to strengthen protection services for survivors of trafficking, build the capacity of the judiciary and law enforcement agencies to effectively enforce legal measures and increase prosecutions, and prevent trafficking by building awareness among groups that are vulnerable to sex and labor trafficking.(64)

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Nepal.

The MoLE manages a Child Labor Elimination Fund; however, no funds have been reported as having been disbursed. (51, 65)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Nicaragua made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed the country's first Law Against Trafficking in Persons, which raises penalties for the trafficking of children and adolescents to 19 to 20 years of imprisonment. The Government also trained 6,082 officials on child labor issues, and the Ministry of Labor increased its number of labor inspectors from 90 to 97. With support from the World Food Program, the Government continued to expand its school meal program, which now reaches over one million children. However, children in Nicaragua are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. National policies to eliminate child labor and protect children have not been fully implemented, and the Government appears to lack a specific and consistent mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor. In addition, the Government has not published national statistics on child labor since 2005.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In Nicaragua, children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in Granada, Managua, the Caribbean Coast, and San Juan del Sur.(26, 29) It has been reported that children in Nicaragua who lack identification documents, sometimes because of a lack of birth registration, are at an increased risk of trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(9) An estimated 20 percent of children born in Nicaragua lack birth certificates.(30)

Partial data on child labor is collected through the Continuous Household Survey (ECH), which is instituted periodically by the Government’s National Institute of Development Information (INIDE) and funded by the IDB. Comprehensive data on child labor is collected through the National Survey on Child and Adolescent Labor (ENTIA), which is also carried out by INIDE.(31) While the most recent ENTIA survey was conducted in 2009, its results have not been published. The most recent ENTIA survey whose results were published, and which serves as the public reference in Nicaragua, was conducted in 2005.(31, 32) That survey found that 238,827 children between the ages of 5 and 17 were economically active, with 36.1 percent of working children being under age 14.(32, 33) While current and official statistics remain unknown, unofficial reports indicate that child labor has increased since 2005.(31, 32)

Education is free and compulsory in Nicaragua. However, costs associated with school supplies and transportation make it difficult for some children, in particular those from poor backgrounds and rural areas, to attend.(24, 34) Some sources indicate that secondary schools have not received adequate assistance and that secondary school attendance remains low, increasing the risk that older children engage in exploitative work.(12, 29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Nicaragua has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription, Article 96 of the Constitution (38, 45)

During the reporting period, the Government drafted and passed Nicaragua's first Law Against Trafficking in Persons. The law was approved in the National Assembly through a two-stage process in December 2014 and January 2015, and was enacted on February 25, 2015.(41, 46) The law amends Nicaragua's Penal Code by raising penalties for the procurement of prostitution from 4 to 6 years of imprisonment to 8 to 10 years; it also applies these penalties to an expanded set of criminal offenses that include benefitting commercially from, and managing, prostitution.(40, 41) These penalties are increased to 12 to 15 years when the victim is a child or adolescent. The law also raises penalties for the trafficking of children and adolescents from 10 to 12 years of imprisonment to 19 to 20 years.(40, 41) Additionally, the law specifies that exploitative child labor figures among an expanded set of criminal offences that may be prosecuted as trafficking.(41)

Nicaraguan law is not clear regarding the age up to which education is compulsory. Article 121 of the Constitution states that primary school education is compulsory without specifying an age.(38) Under Articles 19 and 23 of the Education Law, education is also compulsory only through the sixth grade, which it specifies is up to age 12 and the end of primary school.(44) Additionally, Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code states that both primary and secondary school education are compulsory, suggesting up to age 17, but does not specifically state an age.(37) The lack of clarity regarding the age up to which education is compulsory and the potential gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for work may leave children vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms.(12, 47)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Nicaragua

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRAB)	Enforce labor laws and set child labor policy priorities.(3, 48) Conduct labor inspections through its General Labor Inspectorate, including child labor inspections through its Child Labor Inspections Unit. Conduct training on child labor issues and inspections, and coordinate with other agencies, both public and private.(10, 49, 50) Maintain a mailbox in each of Nicaragua's 17 departments to receive complaints of child labor violations.(31)
Nicaraguan National Police (NNP)	Investigate cases of child labor and human trafficking through the Police Intelligence Unit, which detects crimes; the Special Crimes Unit, which investigates crimes; and 54 Women's Commissions, which work in prevention and protection.(3, 10, 49) Maintain a hotline for receiving reports on the welfare of children, including those in danger of exploitation.(31)
Ministry of Governance	Coordinate participation between MITRAB and NNP in labor inspections in which employers resist inspection.(31)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecute cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Contains 2 national-level and 35 department-level prosecutors that prosecute these and other crimes.(3, 10, 49)
Human Rights Attorney for Children	Assist in the enforcement of laws relating to child labor and hazardous child labor.(3, 10)
Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN)	Maintain a hotline for receiving reports on human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(31) Assist in providing officials with training on child labor violations.(30)

Law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor (MITRAB) employed 97 labor inspectors whose responsibilities included investigating child labor violations; 43 of these inspectors were based in Managua.(31) Although this number of inspectors is an increase from the 90 inspectors employed in 2013, reports indicate that the number of inspectors continues to be insufficient to address the scope of the child labor problem in Nicaragua.(3) MITRAB reported that 6,082 public officials, including its 97 labor inspectors, participated in child labor training during the reporting period.(31) The specific budget allocated for labor inspections in Nicaragua is not known; however, the overall budget for MITRAB was approximately $3 million, reportedly the third lowest of all government ministries.(31) Government officials and child labor experts have previously reported that child labor inspections throughout the country, and those in agricultural areas in particular, are limited due to resource and personnel constraints.(3, 10)

In 2014, MITRAB conducted 1,205 child labor inspections, which resulted in the identification of 161 violations of child labor. The exact number of children who were found working and removed from work was not publicly available.(31) MITRAB also conducted 1,999 inspections of private homes to monitor the working conditions of child domestic workers. Although 17 violations were discovered through these inspections, the exact number of children removed from work was not publicly available.(31) Due to the scope and severity of child labor in the country, the number of inspections conducted is not considered sufficient. Complete information on the geographic distribution of labor inspections, the sectors in which they occurred, and how many children were referred for services was not publicly available.(31) In addition, no information on fines or penalties associated with child labor violations was publicly available.(31)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Nicaraguan National Police (NNP) and the Prosecutor General's Office take the lead on investigating and prosecuting cases of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor in Nicaragua. Research did not find the number of NNP criminal investigators employed in 2014.(46) Research also did not find whether the Government had trained its criminal investigators or prosecutors on issues related to the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. However, some NGOs and the Institute for Strategic Research and Public Policy reported that they supported trafficking prevention and awareness training for government agencies, including public prosecutors and police.(46) In 2014, the budget for the NNP and the Prosecutor General's Office was not made publicly available. Reports indicate that the NNP has insufficient resources, including a lack of personnel, equipment, vehicles, and funding, to carry out trafficking investigations.(30, 46)

In 2014, the Government reported that it conducted 928 investigations for human trafficking, including for crimes of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. The number of criminal violations found through these investigations, and the number of victims rescued, is not known.<sup>(46)</sup> The Government reported that during the reporting period, the Prosecutor General's Office prosecuted 17 active cases of human trafficking, 13 of which involved crimes of commercial sexual exploitation, and 4 of which involved crimes of forced labor.<sup>(46)</sup> Of the 13 cases involving commercial sexual exploitation, 7 cases resulted in convictions, and 4 of these cases involved a total of 8 underage victims. Of the four cases prosecuted for crimes of forced labor, a conviction was reached in only one of them, which also involved an underage victim.<sup>(46)</sup> Although the Government did not provide information on all of the sentences issued, it reported that the sentences ranged from 3.5 to 15 years of imprisonment.<sup>(46)</sup>

The Government and NGOs have reported that, according to a process developed by the National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons (CNCTP), victims of the worst forms of child labor are referred by the NNP to the Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN), who then refers them to NGOs for the provision of services. Reports indicate that this method of referral has been successful.<sup>(46)</sup>

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Social Welfare System (SNBS)	Coordinate efforts on child labor and ensure that government institutions protect the rights of, and provide social services to, children and adolescents as part of its mandate to assist the Nicaraguan population. Composed of various government ministries, including MITRAB, MIFAN, the Ministry of Education (MINED), the Ministry of Health (MINSa), and the Ministry of Governance. <sup>(31)</sup>
National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CNEPTI)	Coordinate the implementation of child labor policies and protect adolescent workers. Led by MITRAB and composed of various government ministries, including MIFAN, MINED, MINSa, as well as private sector and non-governmental institutions. <sup>(51, 52)</sup> Coordinate the implementation of awareness-raising strategies and direct action programs. <sup>(51, 52)</sup>
National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons (CNCTP)	Coordinate efforts to address human trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation, including the implementation of the Strategic Plan Against Trafficking in Persons. Led by the Ministry of Governance and comprising the police, governmental ministries, the Supreme Court of Justice, and civil society organizations. <sup>(3, 41, 53)</sup> Coordinate Nicaragua's participation in the Central American Regional Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons. <sup>(30)</sup>
Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN)	Maintain a guide to assist victims of commercial sexual exploitation and help coordinate between agencies responsible for their care. <sup>(29)</sup> Part of the SNBS. <sup>(31)</sup>

In 2014, the Government reported that the National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CNEPTI) had not convened regularly and was no longer the primary mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor. The Government also reported that coordination efforts have largely been transferred to the National Social Welfare System (SNBS), which is composed of various government ministries including MITRAB; MIFAN; and the Ministries of Governance, Health, and Education.<sup>(31)</sup> However, reports indicate that the SNBS does not comprise a specific and consistent coordinating mechanism to address child labor due to limited coordination among constituent ministries and a lack of resources dedicated to combating child labor.<sup>(31)</sup> Research also indicates that coordination between the SNBS and NGOs that address child labor is limited. In addition, research did not find that the SNBS had published any information on its child labor coordination efforts during the reporting period.<sup>(31)</sup> Research also did not find information on how the SNBS or its constituent ministries had monitored the implementation of national policies on child labor, for example the Strategic Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor and the Protection of Young Workers (PEPETI).<sup>(31)</sup>

The CNCTP met various times during the reporting period, in particular to coordinate the drafting and passage of Nicaragua's first Law Against Trafficking in Persons.<sup>(41, 46)</sup> The Government reported that the CNCTP had conducted outreach and trainings on trafficking issues in coordination with various government institutions, NGOs, and NNP units that targeted 40,761 citizens.<sup>(46)</sup>

While MIFAN maintains a guide to assist child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, reports indicate that the Government did not have formal procedures for the identification of human trafficking victims among high-risk populations, including children who are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation.(29, 46) MIFAN appears to be responsible only for the care of child trafficking victims under the age of 13, and the extent of its coordinating role is unclear.(29, 53)

In June 2014, MIFAN, in collaboration with MITRAB and workers associations, held a public forum to address child labor in street work named “United Against Dangerous Child Labor in the Streets, Stoplights, and Markets of Managua.”(54)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Nicaragua has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Sets the goal of eliminating the worst forms of child labor by 2015, and all forms of child labor by 2020.(10, 31, 55-57)
Strategic Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor and the Protection of Young Workers (PEPETI) (2007–2016)	Aims to eliminate child labor and ensure protections for adolescent workers. Seeks to reintegrate child laborers into the school system and increase school enrollment.(29)
National Human Development Plan (2012–2016)	Sets the Government’s strategy for national development, including in poverty reduction, social well-being, and education. Includes efforts to eliminate child labor and uphold children’s and adolescents’ rights.(3, 58, 59)
National Plan of Youth Employment (2012–2016)	Seeks to eliminate child labor and protect the rights of working adolescents. Established by the National Commission of Youth Employment.(60-62)
Coffee Harvest Plan	Aims to develop a comprehensive approach to assist children whose parents work in the coffee harvest and to improve educational opportunities for children on coffee plantations; focuses on eliminating hazardous child labor in the coffee sector in the Department of Jinotega. Developed by the Government, in collaboration with the private sector and civil society.(3, 10, 62, 63)
Plan of Integrated Attention	Prioritizes assistance for children and adolescents who work in stone quarries, mines, and in African palm cultivation. Involves coordination among several national ministries and local municipalities in order to determine the extent of child labor; create an action plan to uphold the rights of working children and adolescents to education, recreation, and health care; and promote better livelihoods for the families of working children and adolescents.(48, 61, 62)
Inter-Ministerial Agreement on the Sustained Development of Children’s Rights (2013)	Aims to make Nicaragua a country free from child labor, including hazardous child labor, through inter-ministerial cooperation channeled through SNBS. Participating ministries agree to jointly create an action plan to address child labor and to generate dignified work for adolescents permitted to work.(64) Signed by MITRAB, MIFAN, MINED, Presidents of the National Assembly and the Supreme Court, as well as representatives from unions, the private sector, and NGOs.(64)
Policy on Special Protection for Children and Adolescents (Decreto No. 20-2006)	Focuses and consolidates the Government’s guiding principles, objectives, and strategies on children’s and adolescents’ rights. Seeks to mainstream the recognition and defense of child rights, among them protections against child labor and commercial sexual exploitation, in policy areas including social protection, development, and education.(65)
National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons Strategic Plan (2012–2014)	Addresses human trafficking through directives shared by public and private actors, both national and international. Focuses on planning and monitoring regarding prevention, prosecution, assistance and reintegration of victims.(53, 66)
Strategic Education Plan (PEE) (2011–2015)*	Articulates national educational strategies with development objectives that prioritize the building of human capital. Plan is based on three core areas: (1) equality of access to free, universal education; (2) improved quality; and (3) increased institutional strength.(67, 68)
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014–2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through signatories’ efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Nicaragua at the ILO’s 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru (October 2014).(69-71)
Panama Declaration (2012)	Establishes commitments among Central American countries, Belize, and the Dominican Republic to implement country-based actions to eradicate the worst forms of child labor. MITRAB highlighted good practices and lessons learned from its child labor programs in coffee plantations and stone quarries.(72-77)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Government's Roadmap for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor sets the goal of eliminating child labor in Nicaragua by 2020. However, research has not found a comprehensive action plan for its full implementation.(12, 56, 78) The Government reported that a Strategic Plan to combat human trafficking was developed through the CNCTP for 2014–2015.(46) However, research did not find information on this Strategic Plan publicly available, and the extent of its implementation is unknown.(46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Nicaragua funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program Love‡ ( Programa Amor )	MIFAN program that targets 20,000 children, primarily in Managua, who are impoverished or involved in child labor, including in street vending and garbage scavenging. Provides education for children and vocational training for parents.(3, 48, 53, 79-81) Overseen by Nicaragua's First Lady in coordination with the Ministries of Governance, Family, Health, Education, and Labor.(79) Since 2013 includes children from birth to age 6 through "Program Love for the Smallest Ones".(3, 82) In 2014, facilitated a media campaign, including in indigenous and creole languages, to raise awareness of children's rights, and assisted a total of 17,323 children and adolescents.(31, 83)
First, I Learn ( Primero, Aprendo )	Regional project originally funded by USDOL and subsequently supported by the European Union that promotes the eradication of child labor through access to education, among other avenues, in support of the Roadmap to Eliminate Child Labor.(84, 85) In Nicaragua, serves children working in the agricultural sector in Jinotega for the period 2012–2014.(86)
Educational Bridges ( Puentes Educativos )‡	MITRAB and MINED public-private partnership that provides education to children of coffee workers to prevent child labor during coffee harvests.(78) In 2014, program has continued to maintain and secure commitments from coffee farms to eliminate child labor in coffee production.(87-89)
Integral School Meal Program*‡	MIFAN and WFP initiative that provides more than 1 million children and adolescents meals at school to address poverty and help bolster attendance.(90, 91) Program is 70 percent funded by the Government of Nicaragua.(92)
National School Supply Program*	MINED program to distribute packages of school supplies to preschool and primary school children in the poorest districts to increase attendance and completion rates. In 2014, assisted 400,000 children and made plans to assist 700,000 in 2015.(93)
La Chureca Project	$50 million, Government of Spain-funded project that closed La Chureca garbage dump in Managua in 2013 and opened a recycling plant in its place. Accomplishments include the creation of a school that keeps children out of child labor, houses, and employment for 258 families who had worked scavenging in the garbage dump.(94-96) In 2014, continued to assist beneficiaries.(97)
Birth Registration Campaign ( Derecho a un Nombre )*	Government initiative, in coordination with Save the Children and UNICEF, to advance birth registration campaigns.(30, 98)
Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America (Phase 4)	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor in 19 countries, including Nicaragua.(99)
Education and Monitoring Program for the Eradication of Child Labor	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in Latin America, including Nicaragua. Includes the objective of developing information systems on the worst forms of child labor.(99)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Nicaragua.

The scope of current social programs does not appear to be sufficient to assist children who are trafficked or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.(3) While the Government provides medical and legal assistance to trafficking victims, as well as educational assistance to school-age victims, international organizations and NGOs provide shelter, food, clothing, and psychological assistance to trafficking victims.(4, 10, 46) Reports indicate that the regions most affected by human trafficking lack adequate care facilities, and that victims of the worst forms of child labor in these areas are referred to NGO shelters in Managua.(46)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Reports also indicate that Program Love lacks overall effectiveness and requires greater transparency.(3, 7, 10) For example, while the Government reported that Program Love assisted a total of 17,323 children and adolescents during the reporting period, information on the kind of assistance provided to beneficiaries, including on whether beneficiaries were engaged in child labor, was not publicly available.(31)

While the Government's birth registration campaign is advancing, it does not reach all children, especially in remote areas, and many children lack the documentation needed to access basic services.(98, 100-102)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Niger made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons which will provide protection and social assistance to victims of human trafficking, including children. Law enforcement officials received training on child labor and human trafficking, as well as rescued and assisted 45 children from Koranic teachers that exploited them as street beggars. Further, the Government participated in a new program to combat forced labor. However, children in Niger are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining. Laws relating to the worst forms of child labor do not provide adequate coverage and gaps in enforcement have left children unprotected. Social programs to combat child labor are also insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Niger are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining.(1-4) Data from the 2009 National Child Labor Survey indicates that more than 30 percent of children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in hazardous work. Data also revealed that child labor is more prevalent in rural areas and among girls.(5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Niger.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	42.9 (2,516,191)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	48.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	22.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		49.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2012.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of pepper,*rice,*fruits,*nuts,and vegetables (1-3, 8, 9)
	Herding and caring for livestock,* including cattle and goats* (2-4, 8)
	Capturing and processing fish* (2, 4)
Industry	Mining† for trona, salt, gypsum, natron,* and gold (3, 4, 10-12)
	Quarrying,† including crushing rocks (1, 4, 13)
	Mechanical repair,† welding,† and metal work*† (4)
Services	Work in construction*†, tanneries,† and slaughterhouses† (4, 5, 13)
	Street work*, including as market vendors* and beggars *† (4, 5, 14)
	Domestic work* (3-5, 13)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1, 3, 4)
	Caste-based servitude,* including as cattle herders,* agricultural workers,* and domestic workers* (1, 15)
	Forced begging by Koranic teachers* (3, 4, 13, 16, 17)
	Forced labor in domestic work* and mining*, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1, 4)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Traditional forms of caste-based servitude, such as the use of women and girls as wahaya, still exist in parts of Niger, especially among the Tuareg, Djerma, and Arab ethnic minorities; in distant western and northern regions; and along the border with Nigeria. (3, 15, 18) The wahaya practice allows a man to take a girl as a “fifth wife,” meaning as a slave (according to Islamic practices, men are allowed to have only four wives). (1, 15, 19) Wahaya slaves, including children, are typically forced to work long hours as cattle herders, agricultural workers, or domestic workers, and are often sexually exploited. (13, 15, 20) Children of wahaya wives are considered slaves as well and passed from one owner to another as gifts or as part of dowries. Both wives and children are often forced to perform domestic labor in their masters’ households. (13, 15, 19)

In Niger, it is also a traditional practice to send boys (talibés) to Koranic teachers (marabouts) to receive religious education. (21, 22) However, some of these boys are forced by their teachers to beg on the streets and surrender the money they have earned, or perform manual labor. (1, 3, 13, 21)

In 2014, an estimated 4.2 million people were food insecure in Niger, and severe flooding affected the livelihoods of many communities. (23-26) The ongoing conflict in Mali and insecurity in northeastern Nigeria has also resulted in thousands of refugees in Niger. (25, 26) Refugee children may have difficulty accessing education, which could put them at increased risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor. (26)

The Constitution provides free and compulsory education. (3, 27) However, access to education nationwide is hindered by a chronic shortage of teachers, school materials, and infrastructure, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (3, 26, 28) Many children in Niger are also not registered at birth. Unable to prove their citizenship, unregistered children may have difficulty accessing services such as education. (3, 29, 30)

In October 2014, the Government released a survey on child labor in the regions of Dosso, Niamey, and Tillabéri. The survey collected data in 2013 and indicated that more than 30 percent of children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in agriculture, specifically in the production of rice. (9) Many of these children work in hazardous activities, including handling and spraying pesticides and herbicides, which the Government has deemed hazardous. (9, 31)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Niger has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	16	Article 138 of Decree No. 67-126/MFP/T (31)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Articles 138-158 of Decree No. 67-126/MFP/T; Article 181 of the Penal Code (31, 33)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the Labor Code; Article 270 of the Penal Code (27, 32, 33)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (32, 34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Articles 291-292 of the Penal Code (32, 33)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code (32)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 107 of the Labor Code (32)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System in Niger (35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 23 of the Constitution (27)

* No conscription (36)

In Niger, the minimum age for hazardous work does not meet the international standard of 18.(21, 37) In addition, Nigerien law does not prohibit hazardous occupations and activities in all relevant child labor sectors, including agriculture. An amendment to the Labor Code that includes prohibitions of hazardous occupations or activities for children, developed in 2013, was not approved during the reporting period.(2, 22) However, Decree No. 67-126/MFP/T prohibits the employment of children in mining, quarrying, manufacturing, construction, tanneries, and slaughterhouses.(38) The Penal Code prohibits employing and provoking children to beg; however, the penalties outlined in article 181 are low and may not deter violations.(33) Article 178 of the Penal Code also provides penalties for vagrancy, which is defined by article 177 as a person without a home, occupation or means of subsistence. This law may compel children who live on the streets to engage in the worst forms of child labor.(33, 39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

District and Magistrate Courts	Address children's issues, including child labor, through 10 district courts and 36 magistrate courts.(4)

Organization/Agency	Role
Regional and Vigilance Committees	Prevent child trafficking, dismantle human trafficking rings, and raise awareness of the worst forms of child labor. In the case of vigilance committees, which work in 30 localities, report suspected cases of illegal transport of minors to the police.(4, 21)

Law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS) employed 52 labor inspectors throughout Niger to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.(4) Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of labor inspectors is inadequate. During the reporting period, all labor inspectors received training on the worst forms of child labor and also provided training to 30 members of the Workplace Safety and Health Committees in the regions of Tillabéry, Dosso, and Zinder.(4) Niger has a labor inspectorate office in each of the country's eight regions. Inspectors conduct both routine and complaint-based inspections.(21) However, MELSS but does not have a system with sufficient reach or standard protocols to conduct inspections effectively in the informal sector where most child labor occurs. The Labor inspectorate has the authority to determine penalties and/or assess penalties.(4) However, research could not find information regarding the number and quality of inspections, or whether there were any law violations, complaints, citations, and penalties related to child labor.

Victims of the worst forms of child labor are occasionally referred to the Ministry of Population, Women's Promotion and Child Protection or to NGOs depending on the case and location. During 2014, law enforcement agencies rescued and assisted 45 children from Koranic teachers who had exploited them as street beggars.(4) Reports indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to conduct effective child labor inspections and legal proceedings.(4, 40)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, Ministry of Justice officials received training on legislation related to human trafficking and children's rights.(4) Information on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor is unavailable. Criminal enforcement agencies received and investigated 101 child trafficking cases; of these, 61 were convicted and sentenced to prison.(4) Also, the first conviction for the "wahaya" practice took place on May 2014.(13) Despite these efforts, both the MELSS and the Ministry of Justice indicated that the number of convictions related to the worst forms of child labor were inadequate, given the magnitude of the problem.(21) During 2014, criminal law enforcement agencies and NGOs rescued and assisted 205 children from exploitative situations, although it is unclear how many involved child labor. Reports indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to effectively conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.(4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6)

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Review proposals for action plans for the ILO-IPEC country program and ensure that they are consistent with national child labor policy and priorities.(21)
National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons (CNCLTP)	Coordinate efforts to combat human trafficking, and develop and implement policies and programs related to human trafficking.(21, 34, 39) The CNCLTP comprises five executive board members and 19 other members, including representatives of government ministries; members of CNDH, civil society organizations, women's rights groups, labor unions, judges, bar associations; and two foreign donor representatives who act as observers.(21, 41)
National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (ANLTP)	Implement policies and programs developed by the CNCLTP; conduct awareness campaigns about human trafficking in conjunction with the CNCLTP; provide training and education to reduce the risk of human trafficking; and maintain a hotline to receive complaints of human trafficking.(21, 39, 41)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Combat the Phenomenon of Street Children	Coordinate activities to combat the phenomenon of street children. Placed under the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection.(11)
National Committee to Combat Child Labor in Agriculture*	Coordinate policies and programs to combat child labor in agriculture.(42) Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture and includes representatives from the MELSS and the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection. Also includes nongovernmental stakeholders such as NGOs, labor unions, international organizations, and social partners.(43)
National Committee to Combat the Vestiges of Forced Labor and Discrimination	Develop and implement a national action plan to combat the vestiges of forced labor and discrimination.(44)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

The National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons (CNCLTP) and the National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (ANLTP) met to develop drafts of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, which was adopted in July 2014.(4, 45, 46) The number of calls received by the ANLTP’s hotline that involve child trafficking is unknown. Research did not determine if the National Steering Committee on Child Labor, the National Committee to Combat the Phenomenon of Street Children, and the National Committee to Combat the Vestiges of Forced Labor and Discrimination were active and received adequate funding to fulfill their mission during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Niger has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Strategy for Development and Security in Sahel-Saharan Areas of Niger (2012-2017)*	Describes Niger’s overall security and development agenda with local populations in northern Niger. Seeks to increase youth employment and improve infrastructure and strengthening social services, particularly in health, education, and transportation.(52, 53)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons†	Includes goals of enhancing the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, effectively implementing the laws, providing effective protection and care for victims, and strengthening social and educational initiatives for vulnerable children.(4, 45, 46)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor drafted in 2010 aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Niger by 2025.(4) It also addresses child labor in a variety of sectors, including agriculture, mining, domestic work, and begging.(11) However, the Plan has yet to be adopted.(4, 11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Niger participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description

Migration Forum*	Government forum, with support from the ILO-IPEC and a local NGO, that combats migration of youth, especially girls, from rural to urban areas.(21)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Niger has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the problem, especially in agriculture, herding, and mining. Niger also lacks a specific program to assist children exploited by religious instructors.(22)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Nigeria made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government continues to fund and participate in programs that focus on the prevention and elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Law enforcement officials received child labor training, and the states of Ogun and Oyo approved Action Plans on Child Labor. The Senate and House of Representatives passed a bill to restrict the ability of judges to offer fines in lieu of prison time for human trafficking offenses. However, children in Nigeria are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. The legal framework has inconsistencies regarding child labor, and the minimum age for work is below international standards. Due to budget constraints, the Government did not take actions to implement the 2013 National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nigeria are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nigeria.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	31.1 (13,924,739)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	76.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	26.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		76.0

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1, 3-5, 10, 23)
	Begging, domestic service, street hawking, mining and quarrying gravel and granite, and work in agriculture, including in cocoa, as a result of human trafficking (1, 3-5, 12, 21, 23-25)
	Used in illicit activities for armed groups, sometimes as a result of forced recruitment, including participating in extortion, intimidation, armed robbery, and drug trafficking (3, 5, 10, 22)
	Used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forced recruitment, including as messengers, transporters, informants, spies, and suicide bombers (4-7, 23, 26, 27)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In northern Nigeria, many families send children from rural to urban areas to live with and receive a Koranic education from Islamic teachers known as mallams. These children, known as almajiri, may receive lessons, but teachers often force them to beg on the streets and surrender the money they collect.(1, 4, 22, 28) In December 2010, the Ministerial Committee on Madrasah Education estimated that Nigeria had about 9.5 million almajiri.(5)

Nigeria is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking.(4, 29) Children in Nigeria are trafficked internally to work in agriculture, begging, domestic service, mining, quarrying, and street hawking.(4, 23, 24) Children from Nigeria are trafficked to Equatorial Guinea, where they may be forced to work as domestic servants, market laborers, vendors, and launderers.(30) Nigerian children are also trafficked to Saudi Arabia and forced to work as beggars and street vendors.(28, 31) Girls from Nigeria are trafficked to Europe for commercial sexual exploitation.(4, 23)

Children from Benin, Ghana, and Togo are trafficked to Nigeria, where many are forced to work in granite mines.(4) Boys from Niger are subjected to forced labor, including forced begging in Nigeria, by corrupt mallams.(28, 32)

Pervasive poverty, coupled with mass unemployment and a poor education system, has created an atmosphere in which youth are susceptible to participation in armed conflict with various groups, including ethnic-based militia organizations, criminal gangs, extremist groups, and partisan political organizations, such as party “youth wings.”(22, 33-35) Children as young as age 8 are recruited, and sometimes forced, into such groups. Street children are most at risk for recruitment.(22) Research did not find reports of children being used in the Government’s armed forces.

The terrorist group Jama’atu Ahlis Sunna Lidda’awati wal-Jihad, commonly known as Boko Haram, recruited and used child soldiers during the reporting period.(7, 22, 25-28, 37) Boys as young as 11 years old were reportedly forced to fight, plant bombs, spy, and act as suicide bombers.(7) Girls have been abducted by Boko Haram for domestic labor, sexual exploitation, and to act as suicide bombers.(25, 28, 38) Borno State’s Civilian Joint Task Force (CJTF) works with security forces by identifying and helping to arrest suspected Boko Haram members.(39) Research found that children as young as 14 years old have joined the CJTF and other civilian vigilante groups, either voluntarily or forcibly, to man checkpoints, gather intelligence, and participate in armed patrols.(22, 27, 28, 39) Although it is unclear whether the CJTF forcibly recruited children under age 18 during the reporting period, the Nigerian military has reportedly told the group not to allow children to join.(22, 28)

Boko Haram has continued to carry out regular attacks on primary and secondary schools in Northeast Nigeria. Boko Haram shot and burned to death 59 boys at a secondary school in Buni Yadi, Yobe State, in February 2014.(6, 36, 37) In April 2014, Boko Haram abducted 276 girls from a secondary school in Chibok, Borno State.(6, 7) In addition to targeted attacks, Boko Haram threatens and intimidates teachers and students to keep them from going to school.(6, 7) This insecurity has led to mass school closures in the Northeast and the withdrawal of many students, especially girls, from school.(3, 6, 7, 38, 39)

Although free and compulsory education is federally mandated by the 2004 Compulsory, Free Universal Basic Education Act, little enforcement of compulsory education laws occurs at the state level.(5) While some states do offer free education, free universal compulsory education does not yet fully exist in Nigeria.(3) School fees are often charged, and the cost of books, uniforms, and other supplies can be prohibitive for low-income families.(5) Under financial strain, many families choose to send girls to work and boys to school.(3)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Nigeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Nigeria has ratified the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa (Kampala Convention).<sup>(40)</sup> The Convention prohibits armed groups from recruiting children, or otherwise permitting them to participate in conflict, and engaging in sexual slavery and trafficking, especially of women and children.<sup>(41)</sup>

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	12	Article 59 of the Labour Act; Articles 28 and 29 of the Child's Right Act, 2003 (42, 43)

Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article 59 of the Labour Act (42)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 34 of the Constitution; Article 28 of the Child's Right Act, 2003 (43, 44)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 15 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Law Enforcement and Administration Act, 2003; Article 30 of the Child's Right Act, 2003 (43, 45)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 28 of the Armed Forces Act; Article 34 of the Child's Right Act, 2003 (43, 46)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Articles 2 and 15 of the Compulsory, Free Universal Basic Education Act, 2004; Article 15 of the Child's Right Act, 2003 (43, 47)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of the Compulsory, Free Universal Basic Education Act, 2004; Article 15 of the Child's Right Act, 2003; Article 18 of the Constitution (43, 44, 47)

* No conscription (48)

The Federal 2003 Child’s Right Act (CRA) codifies the rights of children in Nigeria and must be ratified by each state to become law in its territory.(5, 43) There were no new adoptions of the CRA during the reporting period.(5) To date, 23 states and the Federal Capital Territory have ratified the CRA, with 12 of the remaining 13 states located in northern Nigeria.(5, 20)

Nigeria’s laws regarding minimum age for employment are inconsistent. (7) The CRA states that the provisions related to young people in the Labour Act apply to children under the CRA, but also that the CRA supersedes any other legislation related to children. The CRA restricts children under the age of 18 from any work aside from light work for family members; however, Article 59 of the Labour Act, which is in force in all 36 states of Nigeria, sets the minimum age of employment at 12 years.(43, 49, 50) The Act also permits children of any age to do light work alongside a family member in agriculture, horticulture, or domestic service.(42, 50, 51) This language makes it unclear what minimum ages apply for certain types of work in the country.

While the Labour Act forbids the employment of youth under age 18 in work that is dangerous to their health, safety, or morals, it allows children to participate in certain types of work that may be dangerous by setting different age thresholds for various activities.(42) For example, the Labour Act allows children ages 16 and older to work at night in gold mining and the manufacturing of iron, steel, paper, raw sugar, and glass.(42) Furthermore, the Labour Act does not extend to children employed in domestic service. Thus, children are vulnerable to dangerous work in industrial undertakings, underground, with machines, and in domestic service. In addition, the prohibitions established by the Labour Act and the CRA are not comprehensive nor specific enough to facilitate enforcement.(51, 52) In 2013, the National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Nigeria (NSC) validated the Report on the Identification of Hazardous Child Labor in Nigeria. Currently, the report is with the Ministry of Labor and Productivity (MOLP) for the promulgation of guidelines for operationalizing the report.(10, 28)

States may also enact additional provisions to bolster protection for working children within their territory. Some states within Nigeria have taken such action and closed gaps in the law.(53) The 2006 Abia State Child’s Rights Law prohibits all children under age 18 from engaging in domestic service outside of the home or family environment.(54) The state governments of Anambra, Bayelsa, and Lagos have prohibited children from all street trading, while Delta State only prohibits children from street trading during the school day. Kano State has initiated a prohibition against almajiri begging on the street.(10)

Some states that apply Shari’a (the moral code and religious law of Islam) treat children as offenders rather than victims. The Shari’a Penal Code of Zamfara State defines an offender as anyone who “does any obscene or indecent act in a private or public place, or acts or conducts himself/herself in an indecent manner.”(52) Treating child victims of commercial sexual exploitation as offenders contradicts internationally accepted standards for the treatment of such children.(52)

Although the 2003 Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Law Enforcement and Administration Act prohibits human trafficking for forced or compulsory recruitment in armed conflict, the legal framework does not proscribe punishments for non-state armed groups that recruit and use children.(22, 55)

The 2003 Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Law Enforcement and Administration Act prescribes penalties of 5 to 15 years’ imprisonment for labor and sex trafficking offenses; however, the law also allows convicted offenders to pay a fine in lieu of prison time.(4) For sentences that only include a fine, penalties are not sufficiently stringent to deter violators. By March 2014, the House of Representatives and Senate passed a bill that would amend the anti-trafficking law to restrict the ability of judges to offer fines in lieu of prison time. However, the bill is awaiting approval by the President.(4, 23, 28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Productivity (MOLP), Inspectorate Division	Enforce federal child labor laws. Labor inspectors are deployed across 36 state labor offices and the Federal Capital Territory, including Abuja, and are responsible for investigating all labor law violations, including those related to child labor.(1, 56, 57)

Nigeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
National Agency for the Prohibition of Traffic in Persons and Other Related Matters (NAPTIP)	Enforce anti-human trafficking legislation. Have the power to conduct investigations to determine whether any person has committed an offense under the anti-trafficking law.(58) Officials turn over rescued children to state-level agencies.(56)
Nigeria Police Force	Enforce all laws prohibiting forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Support MOLP and collaborate with NAPTIP on trafficking enforcement.(10)
Nigerian Immigration Service	Collaborate with NAPTIP to enforce laws against trafficking in children.(10)

Law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, MOLP employed 258 factory inspectors and 402 labor officers, a decrease of 222 inspectors from 2013.(5) Evidence indicates that the number of inspectors is inadequate to deal with the wide-scale problem of child labor.(5) In April 2014, 93 MOLP labor inspectors participated in child labor inspection workshops to develop monitoring and reporting tools.(59) MOLP provided 3 hours of training on child labor to new labor inspectors.(28) In 2011, MOLP collected data from state governments on the prevalence of child labor, but the data have not been made publicly available.(10)

Information on the number of child labor law inspections, violations, and citations issued during the reporting period is not available.(10) Inspections can be unannounced, are conducted through site visits, and tend to focus on large businesses such as factories.(60) MOLP typically sends letters of caution to employers, encouraging them to resolve violations, and then conducts follow-up inspections.(5) It is unclear whether this system sufficiently encourages compliance with labor laws. The Labor Inspectorate director can also halt employer operations, but information is not available as to whether this occurred during the period.(5)

There are no labor inspectors available to conduct inspections on seafaring vessels.(61) Since the Labour Act states that children ages 15 and older may work onboard these vessels, children are unprotected by the country's enforcement framework.(42) Additionally, research did not find mechanisms to enforce existing protections for street children.

Agencies at the state level are responsible for enforcing the CRA.(10) States may also undertake other measures that aid in the enforcement of labor provisions. In Edo State, for example, labor officers work alongside the transportation industry to prevent children from working as bus conductors during the school day.(10)

MOLP refers cases of children gravely in danger to the National Agency for the Prohibition of Traffic in Persons and Other Related Matters (NAPTIP); however, research did not find other referral mechanisms between MOLP and social welfare services.(60)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor was inadequate.(28) From March to April 2014, representatives from NAPTIP participated in workshops with other Government and NGO officials to focus on improving the transitional services provided to children in or at high risk of child labor, and enhance the development and adherence to child protection standards and codes of conduct.(59) NAPTIP received a $9.4 million budget from the Government, a slight increase from the previous year's budget of $8.9 million.(23)

The Nigeria Police Force (NPF) does not receive training on state laws and may not have knowledge of state laws that protect children from the worst forms of child labor within a specific state. This limits the capacity of the NPF to enforce the laws protecting children from the worst forms of child labor.(62)

During the reporting period, NAPTIP investigated 236 cases of human trafficking involving children, including 99 for child labor.(5) Information on the number of prosecutions and convictions is unavailable.(5, 63) During the reporting period, a Government official was investigated for allegedly violating child labor laws.(4, 28)

Although NAPTIP coordinates the National Referral Mechanism to provide rehabilitation and other social services to trafficked children, research did not find a referral mechanism for children found in other worst forms of child labor, including armed conflict.(5, 23) Research found that Government armed forces arrested and detained boys as young as age 9 for suspected alliance with Boko Haram. Additionally, the military arrested girls as young as age 13 who were married to senior Boko Haram members.(64)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Nigeria (NSC)	Coordinate efforts to combat child labor. Represented on the NSC are MOLP; Ministry of Women's Affairs and Social Development; and Ministries of Mining and Metal Production, Agriculture, Foreign Affairs, and Education—along with NAPTIP and the National Bureau of Statistics.(5) Additionally, includes representatives from ILO-IPEC, UNICEF, NGOs, and faith-based organizations that work on child labor issues.(10)
Ogun and Oyo State Steering Committees on Child Labor (SSC)	Facilitate each state's Action Plan for the elimination of child labor and enhance collaboration among agencies. Include officials from State-level MOLP, Ministry for Women Affairs and Social Development, Ministry of Education, NAPTIP, Nigeria Police Force, Nigeria Immigration Service, and NGOs.(65, 66) Meet regularly throughout the year.(66)
Presidential Task Force on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate child labor issues related to human trafficking. Chaired by NAPTIP, which is primarily responsible for social services to children and repatriation of trafficked children to their families.(5)
State Level Child Labor Taskforces	Ensure that children attend school. Established in Akwa Ibom, Delta, Lagos, Ogun, Ondo, and Oyo States.(10, 67)

MOLP reported that the NSC did not meet in 2014 due to funding constraints.(5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Nigeria has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on Child Labor	Aims to significantly reduce prevalence of child labor in Nigeria by 2015 and achieve total elimination by 2020.(68)
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor in Nigeria (2013 – 2017)	Provides a roadmap for implementation of the National Policy on Child Labor in Nigeria.(69)
Ogun and Oyo State Action Plans on Child Labor (2014 – 2017)†	Guides implementation of the National Policy on Child Labor in Ogun and Oyo States.(66, 70, 71)
National Policy on Protection and Assistance to Trafficked Persons in Nigeria	Outlines protection and rehabilitation services for trafficking victims.(72, 73) NAPTIP developed Guidelines on National Referral Mechanism for Protection and Assistance to Trafficked Persons in Nigeria to coordinate and improve service provision for trafficking victims.(63)
Five-Year Strategic Plan for NAPTIP (2012 – 2017)	Provides an organizing framework for mobilizing NAPTIP and all stakeholders involved in combating human trafficking within Nigeria and internationally. Structured around six main areas: organizational development; research and assessment; prevention, protection, return, and re-integration measures; legal, prosecution, and law enforcement; monitoring and evaluation; and international cooperation.(74)
ECOWAS Regional Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor	Aims to eliminate worst forms of child labor in ECOWAS member states by 2015.(75) ECOWAS conducted its first peer review to evaluate efforts to combat child labor at the country level. With Côte d'Ivoire, Nigeria reviewed Ghana's efforts to combat child labor and provided preliminary findings and recommendations.(76, 77)
National Framework for the Development and Integration of Almajiri Education into the Universal Basic Education Scheme	Provides guidelines for state governments to regulate almajiri schools in order to more effectively address the challenges that the traditional Islamic education sector faces on itinerancy and begging.(10, 78-80) Outlines Government plans to build about 400 schools for almajiri by 2015.(10, 81) By August 2014, the Government completed construction of 152 schools, an increase of 29 schools from the previous reporting period.(5)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Government reported there was no action to implement the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor in 2014 due to funding constraints.(5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Nigeria funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Akwa Ibom State*‡	State government provides free primary education.(5)
Anambra*‡	State government initiated programs to raise public awareness of its ban of children in street trading.(5)
Borno State*‡	Governor has instituted programs that provide funds, buses, and lunch to vulnerable children to help them attend school.(67)
Delta State*‡	State government provides compulsory, free primary education.(82)
Kano State*†‡	State government provides free primary education, free school meals, and some free transportation for children to attend school. State is introducing kindergarten classes.(5) In 2014, the U.S. Embassy worked with the Kano State Government and two NGOs to launch an advocacy campaign designed to combat labor exploitation of almajiri.(28, 83)
Katsina State*‡	State government program that provides free primary and secondary education.(5)
Ogun State	USDOL-funded pilot program implemented by the ILO that aims to provide education and skills training to 500 children previously engaged in child labor or at risk of doing so. The program also improves the income-generating capacity of families.(5)
Ogun State‡	State Government-implemented program for labor officers to initiate awareness-raising programs for parents of children working in stone quarries.(7)
Osun Elementary School Feeding and Health Program *‡	State government established a free lunch program for elementary school students. In October 2014, Osun State officials claimed that the program was feeding 252,000 students and was responsible for a 25 percent increase in enrollment.(5)
Rivers*‡	State government provided free primary education to all children.(5, 67)
Sokoto and Niger States*†	United Kingdom's Department for International Development-funded program in collaboration with the Government and UNICEF to provide cash transfers to pay for textbooks and other school-related costs. The program aims to reach 23,000 girls ages 6 to 15.(84)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa by Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS (ECOWAS I)	USDOL-funded, $7.95 million, 5-year project implemented by the ILO with direct interventions to accelerate progress on the elimination of the worst forms of child labor in Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, and Nigeria. Supports ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity-building support for all ECOWAS states.(85, 86) In Nigeria, the project supported national- and state-level efforts to eliminate worst forms of child labor in the country, including the identification of hazardous work for the National Hazardous Child Labor List.(87)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa by Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS (ECOWAS II)	Linked to the ECOWAS I project, a $5 million, USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by the ILO with direct intervention in Benin, Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, and Nigeria. Supports ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity-building support for all ECOWAS states.(85, 86) The project provided educational services to 779 children in Ogun and Oyo States and livelihood services to 326 households.(88)
NAPTIP shelters for human trafficking victims‡	Government-funded program that operates nine shelters in Nigeria with a total capacity for 313 victims.(4) NAPTIP and the Ministry of Women's Affairs and Social Development coordinate social services for trafficked children and repatriation to their families.(10) In 2014, the Abuja shelter was refurbished with funding from the EU. It now has the capacity to accommodate 38 victims of human trafficking, provide counseling and rehabilitation services, and offer vocational services.(88)
Safe Schools Initiative*†‡	Government-funded program with support from the UN that aims to provide remedial education and pilot 10 safe education facilities in northeastern Nigeria, specifically in Borno, Yobe, and Adamawa States. The initiative combines school-based interventions, community interventions to protect schools, and special measures for vulnerable populations.(6, 89)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Nigeria.

Although Nigeria has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address children engaged in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic service, forced labor, illicit activities, or armed conflict.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Nigeria (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Increase the minimum age for regular work to at least age 14, in accordance with international standards; ensure that national legislation related to minimum age for work is consistent and that children working in all sectors are protected; ensure that provisions related to light work conform to international standards.	2009 – 2014
	Ensure that all children under age 18 are protected from hazardous work and that legislation is comprehensive and specific enough to facilitate enforcement.	2009 – 2014

Oman

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Oman made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted the Child Law, which prohibits the use of children in illicit activities and raises the minimum age for work and compulsory education to 16. The Government also established a Child Protection Committee to receive complaints related to violations of children's rights, including the worst forms of child labor. Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children are engaged in child labor, including in the agricultural sector in Oman. The Government lacks a policy to address all worst forms of child labor, and information on the enforcement of child labor laws is not publicly available.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children are engaged in child labor, including in the agricultural sector in Oman.(1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Oman. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		103.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(2) Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,* activities unknown (1, 4)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (1, 4)
Services	Working in small businesses* (1)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

There is no evidence that the Government of Oman has conducted or participated in research to determine the extent to which children are engaged in child labor, including its worst forms.(5-7) The ILO has consistently requested that the Government assess its child labor and human trafficking situation in order to ensure that adequate protection mechanisms are in place for vulnerable children.(6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Oman has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 46 of the Child Law (8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 76 of the Labor Law (9); Article 45 of the Child Law (8)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 1, 2, and 9 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking (10); Article 3bis of the Labor Law (9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 1, 2, and 9 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking (10)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 1, 2, and 9 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking (10); Articles 220, 221, and 224 of the Penal Code (11)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 99 and 229 of the Penal Code (11); Article 58 of the Child Law (8)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	16	Article 55 of the Child Law (8)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 36 of the Child Law (8)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of the Basic Law (12)

* No conscription (13)

The Government has been developing a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children younger than age 18; however, the Government has not yet enacted the list into law.(6)

In 2014, the Government adopted the Child Law, which raises the minimum age for work to 16 and establishes additional protection against the use of children in illicit activities. It prohibits the use of children in places of production and marketing of drugs. It also establishes compulsory education until the end of basic education, which is typically age 16.(4, 14)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Manpower	Monitor and enforce child labor laws; conduct labor inspections; share information with the Royal Oman Police on labor and criminal law violations when penalties are pursued.(7)
Royal Oman Police	Monitor and enforce the Child Law, including its provisions related to child labor; refer cases to the Public Prosecution.(7, 15)

Organization/Agency	Role
Public Prosecution	Prosecute trafficking and sexual exploitation cases in court with assistance from the Royal Oman Police.(7, 16)
Child Protection Committee	Protect the child from violence, exploitation and abuse, and to receive complaints and reports of violations of child rights, including the worst forms of child labor. Established in 2014, in accordance with the Child Law, the Committee was not active in 2014, as by-laws to implement provisions of the Child Law were in development.(8)

Law enforcement agencies in Oman took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Manpower employed 200 labor inspectors, who carry out regular workplace inspections and receive training in conformity with international standards on child labor issues.(4) Inspectors are allowed to make unannounced visits, and they inspect all sectors covered by law.(17) However, based on available information, inspections are generally carried out in large industries and construction sites, and rarely in small farms and fishing boats where children typically work.(15) Research did not find information on the number and type of inspections carried out, or the number of violations found or citations or penalties imposed. There is no referral mechanism between labor enforcement and social welfare services.(4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Royal Oman Police and Public Prosecution received no training on identifying victims of human trafficking or the worst forms of child labor.(4) There was no evidence of child trafficking in the reporting period.(18) No information was found on the number of criminal investigators, the number of investigations regarding cases other than human trafficking, prosecutions, and convictions, or imposition of penalties. Research found no evidence of formal mechanisms or procedures to proactively identify children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking	Oversee the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking. Includes the Royal Oman Police; the Public Prosecution; the Ministries of Information, Education, Manpower, Health, Social Development, Justice, Foreign Affairs, and Legal Affairs; and the Oman Chamber of Commerce and Industry.(16)
National Committee on Implementing the UNCRC	Led by the Ministry of Social Development, members include representatives from the Ministries of Health and Education, as well as the Royal Oman Police. Subcommittees have been established in each of Oman's 11 governorates.(4)

In 2014, the National Committee on Implementing the UN CRC met three times. Members of the subcommittees received training from UNICEF on the content of the UNCRC as well as on UNCRC obligations to report child rights violations and intervene in suspected cases of child rights violations, including child labor.(4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Oman has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking	Lays out the roles and responsibilities of governmental organizations involved in combating trafficking and describes procedures for applying the Law to Combat Human Trafficking.(16)

There is no comprehensive policy that addresses all forms of child labor, including in farming and fishing.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Oman funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Microfinance Program*‡	Ministry of Social Development program that provides microfinance opportunities to unemployed youth to start their own businesses.(19)
Programs of the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking‡	Government programs under the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking. Includes implementation of awareness-raising activities on human trafficking in schools and among the general population, provision of social services for trafficking victims, and coordination with international organizations on human trafficking developments.(16)
Trafficking Victims' Shelter‡	Government-run shelter that provides accommodations and social, psychological, legal, and medical services for up to 50 women and children who are victims of trafficking.(20, 21)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Oman.

There is a Government-run shelter for victims of human trafficking, including children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(22) The exclusion of migrant workers and their children from public social, health, education, and housing benefits available to citizens may increase their vulnerability to forced labor and the worst forms of child labor.(23)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Oman (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

	Establish a referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services.	2014
	Develop formal mechanisms and procedures to proactively identify victims of all worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2014

In 2014, Pakistan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Federal Government continued to fund and participate in programs to combat child labor, including its worst forms. The Sindh Provincial Government operationalized the Sindh Child Protection Authority and approved the Sindh Education Sector Plan. The Balochistan Provincial Government enacted legislation mandating free and compulsory education for children ages 5 to 16. However, children in Pakistan engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including bonded labor. Provincial Governments have not established a minimum working age, and the federal minimum age for hazardous work falls short of international standards. Not all of Pakistan's provinces prohibit human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Provincial Governments do not have the resources necessary to enforce laws prohibiting child labor, including its worst forms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Pakistan are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including bonded labor.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Pakistan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

	Used in armed conflict as a result of forced recruitment* (30)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

A national child labor survey has not been conducted since 1996 and the lack of recent data hampers the Federal and Provincial Governments’ ability to accurately assess the scope and prevalence of child labor.(30) Some children work as bonded laborers in the production in bricks, carpet weaving, and in coal mines, typically as a result of Pakistan’s debt bondage system (peshgis) in which children are forced to work to pay off a family loan.(23, 24, 31) Children, especially girls, are victims of human trafficking and are placed in third-party homes as domestic workers.(1) Some child domestic workers are subjected to sexual assault and extreme abuse, including instances in which child domestic workers were killed by their employers.(25, 30, 32)

Boys are victims of human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation around hotels, truck stops, bus stations, and shrines in Pakistan.(1, 26) Girls are trafficked internationally into commercial sexual exploitation.(1) Children are sold or kidnapped and forced to beg in Pakistan. Disabled Pakistani children may be forced to beg in other countries, such as Iran.(33, 34) Children are used to smuggle drugs and small arms across the Pakistan-Afghanistan border.(28, 29)

Non-state militant groups, such as pro-Taliban insurgents, force children to engage in espionage, armed conflict and suicide attacks. These children may be trafficked between Pakistan and Afghanistan and subjected to physical, sexual, and psychological abuse.(1, 30)

While education is free and compulsory through age 16, access to education is still limited. High rates of teacher absenteeism, inadequate facilities, and corporal punishment may deter children from attending school.(30) In conflict zones, military operations often disrupt school attendance and damage infrastructure.(35) Armed groups and extremist groups regularly attack schools, disrupting children’s access to education.(36)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Pakistan has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

* No conscription (47)

The 18th Amendment to the Pakistan Constitution devolves all child welfare and labor issues from the Federal Government to the four Provincial Governments. Until each province repeals or adopts a replacement law, federal laws on child protection and bonded labor are in force.(30) Pakistan's federal and provincial laws are not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor, including the worst forms of child labor. The federal law does not establish a national minimum age for employment, which may increase the likelihood that very young children engage in activities that jeopardize their health and safety. The federal law for the minimum age for hazardous work is also not consistent with international standards and may jeopardize the health and safety of young people ages 14 through 17.(51) Punjab is the only province to have passed a law on the minimum age, but it replicates the federal law. Each of Pakistan's provinces has drafted legislation that prohibits work for children under age 14, and hazardous work for children under age 18; however, legislation in each province has been pending ratification since 2012.(52)

Pakistan

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Pakistan's labor laws do not extend to workers in domestic service, a sector in which many children work. Domestic work is also not covered by the list of hazardous occupations or processes prohibited for children.(29) Pakistan's labor laws do not extend to workplaces with fewer than 10 persons employed and in agricultural work.(53, 54)

While the federal Penal Code prohibits kidnapping and abduction, the federal Prevention and Control of Human Trafficking Ordinance does not specifically prohibit internal human trafficking. In 2013, the Federal Government drafted anti-trafficking legislation that would address both internal and transnational trafficking, with a focus on crimes against women and children; however, it has yet to be introduced into the National Assembly.(1) The Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Child Protection and Welfare Act prohibits child trafficking but similarly restricts its definition to international trafficking.(45)

Pakistan's federal laws do not specifically prohibit child pornography; however, the Penal Code outlaws the circulation or production of any obscene books, drawings, representations, or other objects.(40, 55) Khyber Pakhtunkhwa is the only province to have enacted a law prohibiting child pornography.(45) Federal law also does not specifically prohibit the use of children in illicit activities. Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Punjab provinces have enacted legislation prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities, including begging.(45, 46)

In 2014, Balochistan became the second province to enact legislation mandating free and compulsory education for children ages 5 to 16.(50)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Provincial Labor Inspectors	Inspect industrial areas and markets to identify child labor violations, enforce provincial labor laws, and pursue legal action against employers.(56)
Provincial and Regional Police	Enforce violations of provincial and federal laws, including the Pakistan Penal Code and the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act, concerning the worst forms of child labor. Refer children taken into custody to Child Protection Officers.(57)
District Vigilance Committees	Implement the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act and assist in rehabilitating bonded laborers.(58)
Anti-Trafficking Unit of the Federal Investigation Agency	Enforce transnational trafficking-related laws, particularly the Prevention and Control of Human Trafficking Ordinance. Cooperate with other governments on trafficking cases, operate a hotline for victims, and publish information on anti-trafficking efforts on its Web site.(59)
Child Protection Officers	Take into custody at-risk children, including those rescued from exploitative labor situations. Bring children taken into custody before the Child Protection Court or the appropriate authority. Established in Punjab, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, and Sindh provinces.(45, 46, 61)
Child Protection Courts	Determine protective custody for at-risk children, including those rescued from exploitative labor situations. Established in Punjab and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa provinces.(45, 46)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Pakistan took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Provincial Governments conducted labor inspections, but research did not find information on the number and training of inspectors. Research also did not find information on the number of labor inspections, child labor violations, and penalties or citations issued. While information on labor inspections is reportedly collected, this information was not made public.

Although the Ministry for Inter-Provincial Coordination is responsible for overseeing the coordination of an annual report on labor inspections, there is no central authority that collects and publishes this information.(62)

There is a critical shortage of labor inspectors in the country; labor inspectors receive very little training and have insufficient resources to adequately inspect workplaces.(62) Provinces reportedly have a training center where labor inspectors receive training on child labor.(63) Labor inspections vary across Provincial Governments; in Punjab, inspections are regularly conducted, while in Sindh, inspectors are required to give advance notice to employers.(62) Fines and penalties are only infrequently assessed and are insufficient to deter employers from using child labor.(30)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Government of Pakistan does not collect data on the number of criminal investigations, prosecutions, children assisted, or convictions of child traffickers and those using children in other exploitative forms of labor.(52) In 2014, the UNODC worked with the Federal Government to establish a research center at the Federal Investigation Agency (FIA) headquarters, to be manned by FIA officers who will capture and analyze data to improve FIA's ability to track trafficking trends.(64)

In 2014, the Federal Government worked with international and NGOs to provide training on identifying human trafficking to law enforcement officials.(64) Law enforcement officials lack the necessary personnel, training, and equipment to confront the armed guards who often oversee bonded laborers.(22) These circumstances have hampered the effectiveness and enforcement of the Bonded Labor System Abolition Act; since its passage in 1992, there have been no convictions under the Act.(34) District Vigilance Committees have been established in Punjab, and cases of bonded labor have been reported by the local police. However, in other provinces, District Vigilance Committees may not be functioning.(63, 65)

Unlike other provinces, Balochistan does not have a referral process by which rescued children can be placed in protective custody and obtain rehabilitation services. Research did not find evidence that a referral mechanism exists between the provincial labor officers and the police.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role &amp; Description
Federal and Provincial Child Labor Units	Advise Provincial Governments and coordinate reporting responsibilities on the implementation of child labor conventions.(66) Conduct research, build capacity, and coordinate anti-child labor activities.(29, 59)
Interagency Task Force	Coordinate the anti-human trafficking efforts of the Ministry of the Interior; intelligence and law enforcement agencies; the Ministry of Law, Justice, and Human Rights; and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Support 13 anti-trafficking units that work with provincial- and district-level police officers to monitor and combat internal and transnational human trafficking.(64) Maintain an Integrated Border Management System.(67)
National Commission for Human Rights	Coordinate Pakistan's compliance with international treaty obligations, including those related to child labor.(29, 68)
Punjab Child Protection and Welfare Bureau	Coordinate the protection of destitute and neglected children by appointing child protection officers, supervising child protection units, and establishing child protection institutions and child protection courts.(46)
Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Child Protection and Welfare Commission	Coordinate efforts to enhance the safety, welfare, and well-being of children, including by running programs for the prevention of exploitative child labor practices.(69)
Sindh Child Protection Authority	Coordinate efforts to ensure the rights of children in need of special protection, including child laborers, by establishing child protection units and appointing child protection officers.(61) Members include the provincial minister, two parliamentarians, lawyers, social activists, and representatives from departments that deal with children's issues. Became operational in 2014.(70)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Balochistan is the only province that does not have a coordination mechanism to ensure the welfare and protection of children at the provincial level. A draft of the Balochistan Child Welfare and Protection Bill was approved in 2011, but it has yet to be passed by the Provincial Assembly.(71)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Pakistan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Education Sector Plan (2010–2015)*	Sets out strategies to increase student enrollment, improve the quality of education, and improve school infrastructure and learning environments.(84)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Pakistan funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Centers for Rehabilitation of Child Labor‡	Pakistan Bait-ul-Mal program that aims to remove children ages 5 to 14 from hazardous labor and provide them with education, clothing, and a stipend. Provides primary education to 19,574 students at 158 centers operating across the provinces.(11, 85)
Child Support Program*‡	Pakistan Bait-ul-Mal program that distributes conditional cash transfers to families living below the poverty line to send their children ages 5 to 16 to primary school. Approximately $3 million has been disbursed.(86)
Benazir Bhutto Income Support Program‡	Federal Government scheme that provides financial assistance to underprivileged families and offers incentives for parents to keep their children in school and out of work.(30)
Decent Work Country Program (2010–2015)	ILO technical assistance program that includes strategies to reduce the worst forms of child labor by strengthening institutions and taking direct action to withdraw children from the workforce. Program also seeks to combat forced labor by strengthening law enforcement interventions in cases of internal human trafficking and bonded labor in the Sindh and Punjab Provinces.(87)
Sabawoon Rehabilitation Center‡	Pakistan Army center that rehabilitates children who were recruited and ideologically influenced by terrorist organizations and militant groups. Reintegrated more than 2,200 youth into society.(64)
Project to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor#	Punjab Provincial Child Labor Unit program that provides nonformal education and literacy services to children in the worst forms of child labor in four Punjab districts. Provides livelihood services to target families and improve working conditions.(88)
Elimination of Bonded Labor in Brick Kilns#	Punjab Provincial Government project that provided nonformal education, interest-free loans, national identity cards, and health services to assist bonded laborers. Established 200 nonformal education centers where 9,717 students were enrolled. Project completed in July 2014.(63, 89)
Education Voucher Scheme*#	Punjab Educational Foundation program that provides stipends to students from low-income areas to attend private schools.(11, 90)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Pakistan.

Program is funded by the Provincial Government of Punjab.

The social programs of the Federal and Provincial Governments are insufficient to address the prevalence and scope of Pakistan's child labor problem. Existing programs also do not provide enough protection and rehabilitation services for bonded laborers and victims of human trafficking.(1) Government initiatives are needed to specifically target child domestic workers. Additional social programs are also necessary to raise awareness and provide assistance to children used by non-state militant groups to engage in armed conflict.(52)

In 2014, Panama made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Panama initiated its biennial national child labor survey, created a subcommittee to address the causes of child labor in the province of Bocas del Toro, and expanded the Direct Government Action Program to provide nationwide social and economic services aimed at preventing and eliminating child labor. However, children in Panama are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. The law does not adequately define light work and fails to prohibit minors under 16 from engaging in hazardous work within training establishments. Moreover, the law does not clearly sanction violations related to the hazardous work in which children are prohibited to engage.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Panama are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Panama.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	3.7 (25,545)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	95.2

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

According to the results of Panama's 2014 biennial Survey on Child Labor, the highest prevalence of child labor is in autonomous indigenous areas, followed by the provinces of Bocas del Toro and Darién.(35) Children of indigenous descent face greater barriers to accessing education services, including having to travel significant distances to reach school.(31, 36) Additionally, children from indigenous communities frequently migrate with their families to work in agriculture.(9, 10) Farm owners often pay wages according to the amount of crops harvested, leading families to bring their children to work alongside them to harvest more crops.(10, 34) Girls from indigenous communities are also subjected to forced domestic work.(3) Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts has noted that children from indigenous and Afro-Panamanian communities are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor and recommends government efforts to ensure their social integration and access to education.(37)

Commercial sexual exploitation of children occurs mainly in tourist areas of Panama City and beach communities.(19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

† No standing military (38, 46)

While the Constitution, Family Code, and Labor Code set the minimum age for employment at 14, Article 70 of the Constitution allows children below the minimum age to work under conditions established by law.(38-40) Article 716 of the Family Code permits children ages 12 to 14 to perform domestic and agricultural work as regulated by the Labor Code.(39) Article 119 of the Labor Code allows children ages 12 to 15 to perform light work in agriculture if the work is outside regular school hours and Article 123 allows children over the age of 12 to perform light domestic work. However, the Labor Code does not define the kinds of tasks children may perform as light work.(40)

Article 118 of the Labor Code and Article 510 of the Family Code allow minors to perform hazardous work in training establishments when the work is approved by the competent government authority and carried out under its supervision, but neither law establishes a minimum age for this work.(39, 40) Article 5 of Executive Decree No. 19 indicates that violations related to hazardous child labor will be sanctioned in accordance with existing laws, and the Government of Panama has stated that the penalties established in Article 215 of the original Penal Code apply to the worst forms of child labor.(4, 42) However, these penalties are not present in the updated Penal Code and it is unclear whether the penalties provided for in Article 202 and 203 of the updated Penal Code or Article 125 of the Labor Code are applicable.(40, 41)

In 2014, several government agencies continued to review and comment on the updated draft of the List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children.(2, 4, 19, 47, 48)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL)	Enforce child labor laws. Contains two directorates with direct authority over child labor matters: the Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers (DIRETIPPAT) and the Labor Inspection Directorate.(2) The Labor Inspection Directorate carries out labor inspections in establishments and sites where children may be working, particularly in the formal sector. DIRETIPPAT is a supervising entity responsible for overseeing the fulfillment of laws related to working children in the formal and informal sectors and plans and executes public policies; carries out education programs on child labor for employers, parents, and children; and coordinates the implementation of the National Plan for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Young Workers.(2, 7, 49-51) Refers cases of children found in exploitative work to the Child and Adolescent Courts or to the National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF).(2, 7)
Attorney General's Office	Investigate and prosecute crimes of sexual exploitation. Investigations initiated by the Judicial Investigative Directorate; cases passed to the prosecutors.(52)
Public Ministry's Organized Crime Unit	Investigate trafficking cases and operate a unit dedicated to investigating trafficking in persons for sexual exploitation.(7, 53)
National Commission for the Prevention of Crimes of Sexual Exploitation (CONAPREDES)	Investigate cases of commercial sexual exploitation.(25) Coordinate, advise, and implement policies related to sexual exploitation, as well as study related trends and prevalence. Promote public policies for the prevention and eradication of sexual exploitation through specific actions, projects, and programs.(54) Members include the Attorney General as well as the ministries of Labor, Education, Social Development, and Health. Refer cases of sexual exploitation to the Attorney General's Office.(22, 54)
National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF)	Carry out inspections to identify children and adolescents engaged in child labor, particularly in the informal sector.(4) Enhance government agencies' and NGOs' capacity to address child labor by monitoring and coordinating a network of government services that address the needs of vulnerable populations. Promote education as a means to eliminate poverty.(2, 29)
Childhood and Adolescence Police	Carry out inspections to identify children and adolescents engaged in child labor, particularly in the informal sector.(4) Support SENNIAF inspections in areas with high rates of child labor.(29)

Law enforcement agencies in Panama took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL) employed 251 staff, including 10 labor inspectors and 8 child labor inspectors.(4, 19) All labor inspectors are trained to look for evidence of child labor; in 2014, MITRADEL inspectors received four trainings related to child labor.(4, 19, 55, 56) MITRADEL's Labor Inspection Directorate allocated $1,739,942 in 2014.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Government reported that the 2014 budget of $83,475,300 allocated to the Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers (DIRETIPPAT) was insufficient to meet their commitments for coordination, implementation, and monitoring related to child labor.(4, 19) Both DIRETIPPAT and the Labor Inspection Directorate had access to vehicles and computers.(4, 19)

Complaints related to child labor may be filed through the “311” citizen complaint telephone hotline run by MITRADEL, or they can be filed in person at one of the MITRADEL offices or social service centers throughout the country.(4, 7, 19, 53) The complaints are assigned a case number and are processed by the appropriate government agency.(2) The Government reports that 10 complaints were received during 2014.(29)

During the reporting period, MITRADEL carried out 908 child labor inspections and 2,244 general labor inspections.(4) Additionally, MITRADEL conducted 34 operations to investigate child labor in such activities as washing cars, working in and around taxi and bus stops, fishing, working in ports, and working in public landfills.(4)

In 2014, DIRETIPPAT visited several communities, including the indigenous comarcas Ngäbe Buglé, Guna Yala, and Embera-Wounaan, as well as San Miguel Island and Esmeralda Island. DIRETIPPAT identified 1,508 children and adolescents engaged in street work and other hazardous labor, including 695 children engaged in informal work, 398 in agricultural activities, and 114 in fishing.(4, 19) DIRETIPPAT removed 1,426 working children and incorporated them into the Direct Government Action Program. The children will receive school scholarships and academic monitoring for 3 years.(4) The Labor Inspection Directorate removed an additional 16 children engaged in child labor, and the National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF) identified 673 child laborers.(4, 29) Despite these efforts, civil society groups note that labor inspections focus primarily on the formal sector, leaving children in the informal sector vulnerable.(19)

In 2014, MITRADEL received and investigated 18 complaints for violations of child labor laws. From this total, 7 were sanctioned, 10 are in process, and 1 was cleared.(4, 19) MITRADEL noted that Article 125 of the Labor Code sanctions fines ranging from $50 to $700 for child labor violations but does not specify whether the employer can be charged this amount per each affected worker.(4, 19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The National Commission for the Prevention of Crimes of Sexual Exploitation (CONAPREDES) developed training workshops on the legal framework related to commercial sexual exploitation and reached approximately 300 law enforcement officials in the provinces of Coclé, Colón, Veraguas, Herrera, Los Santos, Panamá, Chorrera, and San Miguelito.(57) Although CONAPREDES member agencies receive training to carry out covert organized crime operations related to commercial sexual exploitation, turnover in personnel has resulted in a lack of permanently trained staff at CONAPREDES.(25) SENNIAF trained police on the risks and consequences of child labor.(29)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers (CETIPPAT)	Coordinate various efforts to combat child labor. Led by the First Lady of Panama and includes MITRADEL; the ministries of Education, Health, and Agriculture; as well as representatives from civil society and organizations of workers and employers.(54)
CONAPREDES	Coordinate government efforts to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by the Office of the Attorney General and includes members from the ministries of Labor, Education, Social Development, and Health.(58) Conduct investigations in the area of sexual exploitation.(25)
SENNIAF	Enhance government and NGO capacity to address child labor by creating a network of services that addresses the needs of vulnerable populations and promoting education as a means to eliminate poverty.(2, 29)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Subcommittee to Combat Child Labor*	Incorporate Panamanian Institute for Sports and the Ministry of Education in efforts to address child labor and its causes. The first agreement was managed by MITRADEL for the province of Bocas del Toro, which had the highest rates of child labor in the 2012 survey on child labor and 6 percent of child laborers identified by DIRETIPPAT in 2014.(19, 51, 59)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2014, the Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers (CETIPPAT) prepared a study on the status of implementation of the Bilateral Agreement between Costa Rica and Panama for the protection of child labor migrants and began building a child labor monitoring system based on the Unique Registration of Child Labor system developed in Ecuador.(19)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In September 2014, Panama participated in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. Held in Bridgetown, Barbados, these discussions promoted the exchange of information on policies and programs that seek to formalize the informal sector, uphold workers' rights, and prevent and eliminate child labor.(65, 66)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Panama funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Direct Government Action Program for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor‡	MITRADEL program implemented through the Institute for Training and Utilization of Human Resources that provides a network of social and economic services to child workers and children at risk of child labor. * The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Panama.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Papua New Guinea

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Papua New Guinea made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government enacted the Criminal Code Amendment Act, which prohibits all forms of human trafficking and establishes penalties for trafficking children. To complement this new legislation, the Department of Justice and the Attorney General (DJAG) worked with the IOM to draft Papua New Guinea's first Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan (TiPNAP). The Government also launched an anti-trafficking training program in Port Moresby and seven border provinces to familiarize police officers and other relevant actors with the contents of the new anti-trafficking law and to facilitate its effective enforcement. However, children in Papua New Guinea are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Papua New Guinea does not have legislation to comprehensively prohibit hazardous occupations and activities for children. Additionally, child labor laws are not effectively enforced and the lack of compulsory education may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor. The Government lacks social programs to specifically assist children engaged in child labor in all relevant sectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Papua New Guinea are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Papua New Guinea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(5)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2015.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on tea,* coffee,* cocoa,* copra,* oil palm,* and rubber plantations* (1, 2, 7) Domestic work (1, 2, 4, 8, 9)
Services	Street work, including vending, chopping firewood for sale, moving furniture, loading and unloading boxes from containers, carrying heavy bags of food, scavenging for scrap metal and scrap food for pig feed, and begging (1, 7, 10-12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including working in bars, night clubs, and brothels, and used in the production of pornography,* each sometimes as a result of trafficking (1, 2, 4, 7, 8, 11, 13) Forced domestic work (1, 4, 7, 8, 11, 13)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

A number of children in urban areas, such as Mount Hagen, work as porters for market taxis and carry extremely heavy loads. Children living in informal settlements on the outskirts of Port Moresby, who have been orphaned by AIDS or abandoned by their families, are particularly vulnerable to this type of employment.(7, 11, 12, 14)

Some children engaged in domestic work are held in indentured servitude in order to pay off family debts.(1, 4, 8, 11, 13) These children work long hours, lack freedom of mobility, do not have access to medical treatment, and do not attend school.(8)

Limited evidence suggests that members of the Papua New Guinea police are responsible for committing acts of sexual violence against children, and for facilitating trafficking by accepting bribes and ignoring victims forced into commercial sexual exploitation or labor.(1, 3, 11, 15-17) There are reports that the threat of sexual violence against young girls, and the shame and stigma that follows this violence, prevents many girls from attending school.(3, 18, 19) Although free education through grade 10 has been a government policy since 2011, in practice, many schools charge fees for books, uniforms, and other supplies.(3, 20-23) These additional school fees may be a barrier to education for some children.(3, 11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Papua New Guinea has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Papua New Guinea

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although commercial sexual exploitation of children and human trafficking are a concern in Papua New Guinea, the Government has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography or the Palermo Protocol.

There is a lack of harmony among existing laws regarding the minimum age for hazardous work in Papua New Guinea, which may result in enforcement challenges. While the Child Bill prohibits and sets penalties for the engagement of a child (defined as a person under age 18) in “harmful child labor,” which includes hazardous work, the Employment Act does not prohibit injurious work by 16- and 17-year-olds.(3, 21, 24) The laws do not define the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children in a manner that is comprehensive or specific enough to facilitate the effective implementation of penalties for child labor violations and the removal of children from harmful work. The Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DLIR) has been developing a hazardous list since late 2012 for inclusion in amendments to the Employment Act and the Occupational Safety and Health Act.(1, 10, 28). Over the past few years, the DLIR has also reviewed a subsidiary set of laws called the Common Rule, which may provide a better legal platform for developing stronger provisions related to the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(7) However, Parliament did not consider either of these proposals in 2014.(7)

On July 7, 2014, Parliament enacted the Criminal Code Amendment Act of 2013 that contains specific provisions prohibiting domestic and international trafficking of men, women, and children for the purpose of both forced labor and sexual exploitation.(9, 29) The new legislation also contains provisions for victim assistance and protection, and augments penalties for smugglers and traffickers, such as increased terms of imprisonment, for offenses that involve children under the age of 18 years.(4, 30)

Papua New Guinea does not have laws that prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.(31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DLIR)	Implement and enforce child labor laws.(3)
Department of Religion, Youth, and Community Development (DRYC)	Enforce the Child Bill ( Lukautim Pikinini ). (3)
Royal Papua New Guinea Constabulary Sexual Offenses Squad	Enforce laws against commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities.(3)

Law enforcement agencies in Papua New Guinea took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, research did not find information on the number of labor inspectors in Papua New Guinea, but in the past, the ILO has reported that the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DLIR) employs approximately 30 general inspectors, 15 of whom focus on child labor. Research found that this number was inadequate to enforce child labor laws effectively, especially as inspectors are required to perform diverse functions.(3, 7) Some labor inspectors previously received training on child labor inspection techniques from the ILO, but not all inspectors have been trained, and research did not find evidence of more recent instruction.(7)

Research did not find information on the number of child labor inspections carried out in 2014. Labor inspectors have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections at any site where they have reason to believe a person is working for an employer.(24) However, due to limited capacity, the inspectorate carries out inspections only when specifically requested and rarely initiates routine or targeted inspections.(7) In collaboration with the ILO, the DLIR and provincial governments created Child

Labor Inspection and Referral Forms to identify and track child labor cases in Papua New Guinea. In 2014, the Government began using these forms throughout the provinces on a trial basis.(7)

The labor inspectorate is empowered to assess penalties if inspectors uncover labor violations, but research found that the DLIR did not pursue any child labor complaints during the reporting period and did not issue any citations or penalties for child labor violations.(3) Both the ILO Committee of Experts and senior staff at the Department of Religion, Youth, and Community Development have noted that enforcement is ineffective because of inadequate resources and cultural acceptance of child labor.(14, 16, 28, 31) Inadequate technical capacity and referral mechanisms among agencies constitute additional obstacles to effective enforcement.(3, 4, 16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, research did not find information on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Following the enactment of the Criminal Code Amendment Act, the Government of Papua New Guinea and the IOM activated a new anti-trafficking in persons training program for police officers, Papua New Guinea Customs, NGOs, and magistrates. At the close of the reporting period, trainings had been conducted in Port Moresby and in seven border provinces.(9)

In January 2014, the Government opened one investigation into a possible child trafficking case involving two girls in a rural village who were unwillingly given in marriage as recompense to the family of a deceased teacher. However, there have not been any charges filed. No additional prosecutions or convictions for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor were reported in 2014.(3, 16) The Government currently lacks a mechanism to refer children identified in the worst forms of child labor to appropriate social services.(9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established a coordination mechanism to combat human trafficking, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role &amp; Description
National Human Trafficking Committee (NHTC)	Coordinate efforts to combat trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Department of Justice and the Attorney General (DJAG).(9) Includes representatives from the Office of the Prime Minister, the Department for National Planning and Monitoring, the Immigration and Citizenship Service Authority, Customs, the Royal Papua New Guinea Constabulary, the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DLIR), the Office of the Public Prosecutor, the National Council of Women, the Consultative Implementation and Monitoring Council, the State Solicitor's office, the Department of Provincial and Local Government Affairs, the Department for Community Development, various NGOs, IOM, UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR), UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCHR), UNICEF, UN Women, and U.S. Embassy Port Moresby.(16)

Coordination mechanisms that were expected to launch in 2012 were still pending during the 2014 reporting period. The Department of Labor and Industrialized Relations (DLIR) Child Labor Desk, designed to track child labor cases and facilitate coordination among relevant agencies, was not yet in place.(3) Additionally, research did not find evidence that the Secretary of DLIR has signed the endorsement necessary to establish the Project Advisory Committee (PAC), a permanent, interagency committee on child labor.(3, 32)

In 2014, the National Human Trafficking Committee (NHTC) convened twice. With new anti-trafficking legislation now in place, the NHTC plans to focus on developing standard operating procedures and a national referral mechanism for trafficking victims.(9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Papua New Guinea has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Papua New Guinea

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Universal Basic Education Plan (2010–2019)*	Seeks to ensure that all children complete 9 years of basic, quality education starting at age 6; to reduce poverty through education; and to build government capacity to manage education.(22) Key objectives include building infrastructure, including more classrooms and staff housing; increasing access to safe drinking water and sanitation facilities at school; providing teacher training; providing over-age children access to basic education; and abolishing all school fees. Aims to provide full Government funding for basic education by 2015.(22, 33)
Tuition Fee-Free Policy*	Aims to improve access to education by abolishing school fees for children in grades 1 through 10 and providing subsidies for those in grades 11 and 12.(7, 34)
Vision 2050*	Sets a long-term strategy for Papua New Guinea's socioeconomic development; pillars of the plan include Human Capital Development, Gender, Youth, and People Empowerment.(35) Prioritizes access to education, knowledge, and improved technology; community empowerment; access to credit; the inclusion of more individuals in the formal economy; and equitable development in rural areas where poverty is most pronounced.(35)
Medium-Term Development Plan (2011–2015)*	Establishes a 5-year plan for national development, in line with Vision 2050, and including budgets, targets, and outputs.(36) Designates which authorities are responsible for implementation, and gives highest priority to education and public utility infrastructure improvements.(36)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

There is no overall policy to combat child labor in Papua New Guinea. The National Action Plan on Child Labor (NAP) has been in draft form since 2012. Sources expected that the Department of Labor and Industrialized Relations (DLIR) would finalize the NAP and submit it for Parliamentary approval in early 2014, but this did not occur.(3) During the reporting period, the Department of Justice and the Attorney General (DJAG) and the IOM drafted the first Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan (TiPNAP) for Papua New Guinea. The National Human Trafficking Committee is currently reviewing the draft, and it is expected to be finalized at their next meeting.(7, 9)

Although Papua New Guinea's Universal Basic Education Plan includes the goal of establishing 3 years of mandatory schooling for children until age 9, the Government has not yet enacted an enforceable policy for compulsory education. The lack of standards in this area may increase the risk of children's involvement in child labor, as children are not required to be in school nor are they allowed to legally work until age 16.(10, 32)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Papua New Guinea participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2013–2015)	Implemented by the Government, the Trade Union Congress, and the Employers' Federation through technical assistance from the ILO and cooperation with the Government of Australia. Seeks to establish a national employment strategy. Explicitly recognizes the relationship between education and child labor, and prioritizes youth employment services.(37) Concrete measures to be taken include finalizing child labor provisions in the draft Employment Bill, drafting a hazardous work list, and formalizing the Child Labor Unit in the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DLIR). Includes a youth employment initiative that provides business training to out-of-school youth, particularly those who are marginalized or disabled.(37)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by The Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers.(38) Project was discontinued in Papua New Guinea in 2014 due to technical challenges in implementation.(39)
Urban Youth Employment Project*‡	Jointly -funded Government and World Bank project that aims to provide training, temporary jobs, skill development through apprenticeships, and 2-month placements on public works projects for youth. Targets 13,500 disadvantaged youth in and around Port Moresby.(40) To date, 1,300 youths have received basic life skills training and 250 youths have received pre-employment training, half of whom were subsequently placed in trainee positions.(40)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Papua New Guinea.

Although the Government has implemented programs that address child domestic workers and children engaged in street work, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children involved in commercial sexual exploitation or agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Papua New Guinea (Table 9).

In 2014, Paraguay made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government strengthened legal protections for incarcerated adolescents by specifying the circumstances and conditions under which they can work in the Penal Implementation Code, included funds in its 2015 budget to hire 40 additional labor inspectors, and established working groups to strengthen coordination among government agencies on child labor issues. In addition, the Government continued to fund conditional cash transfer programs to combat child labor. However, children in Paraguay are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work. Coordination mechanisms among government agencies working to eradicate child labor need strengthening and remain underfunded relative to the scope of the problem. In addition, the Government is unable to provide accurate statistics on whether businesses were fined for child labor infractions because labor inspectors report the fines in aggregate.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Paraguay are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service.(1, 2) The 2011 National Survey of Child and Adolescent Activities (EANA) found that 21 percent of all Paraguayan children are engaged in hazardous work, and that approximately 90 percent of all working children perform hazardous tasks, such as carrying heavy loads or using dangerous tools.(2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Paraguay.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10-14 yrs.	15.3 (113,072)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	90.3

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3 (a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The 2011 EANA indicated that children who speak Guarani exclusively are more likely to be involved in child labor and have higher rates of school absence as compared to other working children; poverty is pervasive in rural Paraguay, where Guarani is the predominant language.(2, 24) Children work alongside their parents in debt bondage on cattle ranches in the remote region of the Chaco.(1, 9) A 2011 quantitative study on child labor in Paraguay’s sugarcane sector estimated that children comprise more than 25 percent of the sugarcane workforce, and about one out of four of those children suffer injuries twice a year, on average, while working.(7) There is limited evidence of children engaged in gold mining in small family-run mining operations in Paso Yobái, Guairá.(1)

The practice of criadazgo, a system whereby middle-class and wealthy families informally employ and house young domestic workers from impoverished families, is pervasive in Paraguay. The NGOs have noted that domestic workers are particularly vulnerable to being trafficked for sexual exploitation, and reported that 60 percent of rescued trafficking victims began working as domestic servants as minors.(6, 25) Children from poor rural areas, in particular the Departments of Caaguazú and Alto Parana, are subjected to forced commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking, in the border areas with Argentina and Brazil and in urban areas, including Asunción, Ciudad del Este, Encarnación, and Filadelfia.(12, 18, 25) The Government acknowledged the recruitment and use of several child soldiers by armed groups, including the Paraguayan People’s Army and the Armed Peasant Association. Some children were recruited at the age of 14 or younger and, in 2014, two child soldiers were killed.(25)

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 76 of the Constitution; Article 32 of the General Education Law No. 1264 (31, 37)

The Government has not yet adopted regulations governing the nature and conditions of light work that is permitted for children between ages 12 and 14. Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts has recommended that Paraguay strengthen its laws regarding light work for children.(39) Research did not find specific legal provisions that stipulate penalties for violations of the List of Work Endangering Children (Decree No. 4951) or which ministries are responsible for enforcing this law.

In October 2014, the Government modified the Penal Implementation Code to include articles specifying the circumstances and conditions under which incarcerated adolescents can work.(6, 40) The updated law stipulates that such work must be compensated and must prepare adolescents for employment opportunities after their release; it also prohibits coerced labor. The code did not previously regulate work for minors within the incarceration system.(6, 40)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Work and Social Security (MLWS)*	Enforce laws related to child labor and hazardous child labor, inspect workplaces for child labor, and fine companies found in violation of labor laws.(1) Refer cases involving criminal violation of child labor to the Public Ministry or the National Secretariat for Children and Adolescents (SNNA).(1) In 2014, a General Directorate for Working Children and Adolescents was created.(41)
National Police	Maintain a special unit of 33 police officers that handle complaints regarding trafficking in persons, including children, with offices in five cities.(1)
The Public Ministry (Prosecutor's Office)	Enforce criminal laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Investigate and prosecute violators based on complaints, its own information, or referrals from the MLWS and other agencies, such as the SNNA and the Public Defender's Office.(1) Maintain a Special Directorate to Fight the Trafficking of Persons and Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children that works with local prosecutors nationwide to prosecute human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation crimes.(1)
SNNA	Maintain a unit dedicated to fighting child trafficking.(1) Sponsor a hotline to report cases of human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children; provide social services to trafficking victims upon receiving referrals from law enforcement agencies.(20) In 2014, provided services to eight children identified in sex trafficking and four children in labor trafficking.(42)
The Public Defender's Office	Protect the due process of law. Endowed with legal, administrative, and budgetary autonomy within the judicial system.(5) Established a permanent Observatory Unit on Torture and an Observatory Unit on Penal Conditions. Employs 200 attorneys.(5)
Ministry of Women's Affairs (MWA)	Provide services to female victims of trafficking, half of whom are estimated to be children. House an office dedicated to combating trafficking of children. Handle most social services for trafficking victims. Have five dedicated personnel.(1, 20)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Law enforcement agencies in Paraguay took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor, Work and Social Security (MLWS) employed 26 inspectors nationwide in eight state-level branch offices to conduct all labor inspections, including for child labor violations.(6) Given the extent of child labor in Paraguay, the number of labor inspectors is inadequate.(6) In 2014, the ILO provided various trainings for MLWS labor inspectors that were not child labor specific, and held a September workshop in Asunción for Southern Cone representatives, including MLWS officials, on rural poverty and child labor in agriculture.(6, 43)

On January 1, 2014, the Ministry of Justice and Labor split into two ministries: the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, and the MLWS.(1) During the operational transition after its creation, the MLWS relied on funds previously assigned to the Vice Ministry of Labor and did not have its own operational budget for 2014. Throughout the reporting period, the MLWS lacked adequate resources to enforce child labor laws, including dedicated vehicles and travel funds.(6) The 2015 budget of nearly $35 million was approved at the end of the reporting period and allows the MLWS to hire 40 additional labor inspectors.(6)

The MLWS conducted 30 labor inspections in 2014, including in charcoal factories, agricultural markets, supermarkets, restaurants, and a poultry farm. The MLWS noted that many inspections were reduced or suspended due to internal investigations and ongoing reorganization of its Office of the Inspectorate; government officials considered the number of inspections in 2014 to be inadequate.(6) The MLWS targets certain sectors and industries for general labor inspections but usually carries out child labor inspections in reaction to complaints rather than specifically targeting child labor.(6) Five labor inspections in 2014 directly targeted child labor in San Pedro, Paraguari, Asunción, and Central but did not identify any violations.(6) Enforcement of child labor laws is inadequate in the informal sector, and the MLWS is unable to provide accurate statistics on the number of citations or penalties issued for child labor law violations because labor inspectors report the fines in aggregate.(6)

An additional constraint to labor law enforcement is the legal requirement that the Public Ministry and the MLWS secure a search warrant from a judge if an employer does not permit them to enter a workplace, including the workplace of domestic servants, to inspect it. There is a lack of efficient and timely cooperation by judicial authorities in granting search warrants for workplace inspections; the system is paper-based and orders routinely take over 3 months to arrive.(1, 6, 44) In 2014, the MLWS proposed a cooperative agreement with the Supreme Court to create an electronic filing and communication system to allow judges to submit and receive legal orders and information requests more quickly.(6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Public Ministry employed three specialized prosecutors in its Special Directorate to Fight the Trafficking of Persons and Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children.(6) These prosecutors were based in Asunción and had a staff of 35 assistants.(6) The Directorate reported that more specialized prosecutors were needed to support local prosecutors nationwide and to increase the Public Ministry's ability to investigate and prosecute child labor cases.(6) The National Police maintained a department for complaints regarding trafficking in persons, including children; the department was staffed with 33 police officers and maintained offices in five cities.(6) In 2014, 13 human trafficking workshops were held, for a total of 80 Attorney General Prosecutors and employees.(25) The Ministry of Women's Affairs' (MWA) Anti-trafficking in Persons Unit organized training seminars for 20 judges, 18 police officers, 2 prosecutors, and 32 employees from various government agencies.(25)

The Special Directorate to Fight the Trafficking of Persons and Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children has insufficient resources, including vehicles, fuel, and logistical support, to carry out investigations, particularly in remote areas such as the Chaco region, where the worst forms of child labor, human trafficking, and debt bondage are most prevalent. Overall, Paraguay's law enforcement agencies lack resources, including staff and training, to sufficiently identify, investigate, and prosecute cases of the worst forms of child labor; as a result, the number of convictions of crimes related to the worst forms of child labor is insufficient, and existing penalties are inadequate deterrents.(1, 6, 45)

In 2014, the Attorney General's Anti-trafficking in Persons Unit reported 173 child pornography cases, including 120 that originated from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children cyber tip line. The Anti-trafficking in Persons Unit reported an increase in the number of investigations and convictions related to human trafficking during the reporting period, including 80 trafficking in persons cases, 28 prosecutions, and 16 convictions.(25) There is a lack of formal referral mechanisms between prosecutors in the Attorney General's Office and other agencies that receive complaints related to the worst forms of child labor, such as the National Secretariat for Children and Adolescents (SNNA).(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role &amp; Description
The National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate the Exploitation of Children (CONAETI)	Lead government efforts against child labor and include representatives from the MLWS, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, the MWA, the SNNA, and other government agencies, as well as labor union representatives, industry associations, and NGOs.(1, 46)
National Council for Children and Adolescents (National Council)	Establish policies to protect children's rights and approve specific programs aimed at children and adolescents.(1, 46)
Inter-Institutional Working Group on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking	Coordinate inter-agency efforts to combat all forms of trafficking in persons, including child trafficking. Headed by the Ministry of Foreign Relations.(1, 12, 46)
Defense Councils for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (CODENI)	Coordinate government efforts to protect children's rights at the municipal level, including by maintaining a registry of children and youth involved in economic activities and coordinating with vocational training programs for adolescent workers.(1, 26)
National Commission of Fundamental Labor Rights and Prevention of Forced Labor	Include representatives of employers, unions, and government agencies, such as the MLWS.(6)

In 2014, the MLWS signed a framework agreement with several ministries to define and coordinate the responsibilities of each agency and to create a national registry of adolescent workers.(6) The National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate the Exploitation of Children (CONAETI) held regular meetings during the reporting period and created working groups to establish coordinating mechanisms among government agencies. CONAETI organized several workshops with employers, unions, and adolescent workers to discuss regulations governing the nature and conditions of light work.(6) CONAETI continued to work closely with the Sugarcane Growers' Association to implement several ILO/USDOL-funded programs aimed at eradicating child labor in sugar plantations.(1) Despite these efforts, Government coordination—including between CONAETI, the MLWS, and other agencies, such as the Prosecutor’s Office, Public Defender’s Office, and the Judicial branch, and particularly at the local level—is done on an informal basis and remains insufficient to combat child labor.(1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Paraguay has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents (2010 – 2015)	Serves as the Government’s main policy framework to address child labor. CONAETI-approved plan, aims to combat the worst forms of child labor. Provides access to free, quality education for child laborers and livelihood alternatives for their families. Raises public awareness of child labor and improves enforcement of child labor laws.(1, 46)
National Plan for Development (2014 – 2030)†	Includes goals for reducing child labor as part of broader efforts to reduce social exclusion and poverty. Includes the Embrace Program, which specifically aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor.(6, 47)
National Plan on Human Rights	Includes components on child labor, forced labor, and indigenous child labor. Established in 2012, the plan has no expiration date.(1)
Inter-Institutional Agreement on Government Procurement	Seeks to ensure that any goods or services procured by the Government are not produced through child labor. Established between SNNA and the National Bureau for Public Contracts.(48)
MERCOSUR United Against Child Labor Campaign	Develops public awareness about the need to combat child labor in MERCOSUR. Addresses child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and sexual exploitation, with particular emphasis on communities along country borders.(49)

MERCOSUR Southern Child Initiative	Aims to defend the rights of children and adolescents in the region by raising awareness and seeking coordination among member states regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking and pornography, child labor, and migrant labor; by improving country legal frameworks to harmonize them with international conventions affecting children; and by exchanging best practices.(52)
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014 – 2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through signatories’ efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Paraguay at the ILO’s 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru, in October 2014.(53, 54)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In September 2014, Paraguay participated in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. Held in Bridgetown, Barbados, these discussions promoted the exchange of information on policies and programs that seek to formalize the informal sector, uphold workers’ rights, and prevent and eliminate child labor.(55, 56) In October, the Governments of Paraguay and Colombia signed a memorandum of understanding for the Prevention and Investigation of the Crime of Human Trafficking and Assistance for Victims.(57)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Paraguay funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Embrace Program ( Programa Abrazo ) (2005 – 2014)‡	SNNA program that assists children engaged in exploitative work by providing them and their families with health and education services and cash transfers conditioned on children's school attendance and withdrawal from work.(46) Works closely with NGO Fortalecer in the implementation of ILO-IPEC programs, and with the Sugarcane Growers' Association, Ministry of Education and Culture (MEC), and CONAETI to set up programs tailored to at-risk children who work during the sugarcane harvesting season.(1) As of November 2014, provided support to 8,531 children ages 0–14. The Government budgeted $6.7 million in 2014 and provided monetary and in-kind support, particularly in direct food distribution.(6)
Well-Being Conditional Cash Transfer Program ( Tekopará )‡	Government-administered program through the Secretariat for Social Action.(1) Provides conditional cash transfers to families in moderate to extreme poverty in the Concepción, San Pedro, Canindeyú, Caaguazú, and Caazapá departments.(1) Incorporates aspects of the Abrazo program, such as the family monitoring methodology, to ensure beneficiary families do not allow their children to engage in child labor.(1) As of October 2014, served 81,741 families.(6)
Mutual Aid Conditional Cash Transfer Program ( Nopytyvó )‡	Government program that provides conditional cash transfers to impoverished indigenous families in the Chaco region.(58) Cash transfer is conditioned on families withdrawing children from child labor and meeting education and health requirements. Program assists approximately 774 families, including 1,256 children and adolescents.(6, 58)
Shout Program (2008 – 2014)	MEC/ILO program that carries out child labor awareness-raising activities among students and teachers to help school administrators identify child laborers and prevent children from engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(6, 46)
Comprehensive Attention Program for Street Children and Adolescents*‡	SNNA program that provides assistance and services to children living on the streets. Program's goal is to assist approximately 200 children.(46)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (2013 – 2017)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in at least 10 countries to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. Aims to improve legislation addressing child labor issues, including by bringing local or national laws into compliance with international standards; improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor; and enhance the implementation of national and local policies and programs aimed at the reduction and prevention of child labor in Paraguay.(59) In 2014, held four workshops on light work and hired a consultant to lead discussions on hazardous work.(41)
Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (2013 – 2017)	USDOL-funded research project implemented by the ILO in 10 countries to increase the knowledge base around child labor by collecting new data, analyzing existing data, and building capacity of the Government to conduct research in this area. In 2014, began preparatory discussions on a sectoral survey of child labor in agriculture.(60)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (2011 – 2015)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor in Paraguay.(61)
Regional Action Group for the Americas ( Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas )	Regional initiative that conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(62)
Southern Child Initiative ( Niñ@sur )	Regional initiative that carries out public campaigns against commercial sexual exploitation, trafficking, and child labor; facilitates technical assistance to improve domestic legal frameworks to comply with international standards on those issues; and supports the exchange of best practices related to victim protection and assistance.(63, 64)
Global Program on the Eradication of Child Labor	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 3-year project implemented by the ILO-IPEC to combat child labor.(65)
Partnership Program to Eliminate Child Labor	$2.3 million Government of Brazil-funded, 4-year project implemented by the ILO-IPEC to combat child labor.(65)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Paraguay.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The 2012 Law Against Trafficking in Persons requires the MWA to provide compensation and financial assistance to victims of sexual and labor trafficking, including minors. However, the Government has not allocated funding for the MWA to implement such a program, and most victims did not have access to comprehensive care.(6, 33, 42) MWA ran a temporary shelter in Asunción for female victims of human trafficking and domestic violence that provided lodging and counseling to 18 teenage girls in 2014.(42) Although Paraguay has programs that target child labor, the scope and funding level of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Additional programs are needed to reach the large numbers of working children, especially in agriculture and domestic service.(6)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Paraguay (Table 9).

In 2014, Peru made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Peru approved the Intersectoral Protocol against Forced Labor and strengthened the Penal Code's penalties for human trafficking. Peru also joined the UNODC Blue Heart Campaign Against Human Trafficking and engaged with officials in Ecuador, Colombia, and Brazil on child labor issues. The Public Ministry opened a criminal prosecution office in Lima to specialize in human trafficking cases, and the National Labor Inspection Superintendency hired over 90 new labor inspectors and opened 8 regional offices. However, children in Peru continue to engage in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Peruvian law does not fully comply with international standards to protect children engaged in night work and hazardous work. Labor inspectorates remain underfunded and the number of child labor inspections is insufficient, especially in regions with the highest rates of child labor. In addition, not all Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor have drafted and funded action plans to combat child labor, although they are mandated to do so.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Peru are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-7) According to the Government's 2011 National Household Survey, 68 percent of child laborers under the legal working age work in rural areas, principally on farms.(1, 8) According to the same survey, approximately 31 percent of child laborers in urban areas work in the service sector, including in hazardous occupations such as street work. Official statistics indicate that the rates of child labor are significantly higher in the highland and jungle regions of Peru than in the coastal regions.(8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Peru.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6-14 yrs.	19.4 (1,014,688)
Attending School (%)	6-14 yrs.	79.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	14.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.0

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Working in bars and brothels, commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 4-7, 19-21)
	Growing and processing coca (stimulant plant) sometimes as a result of human trafficking, transporting drugs, and smuggling gas and gasoline* (2-5, 7, 14, 20, 21)
	Used in armed conflict sometimes as a result of forced or compulsory recruitment* (2, 3, 5)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Remnants of the terrorist group Shining Path use children as soldiers. The Shining Path, as well as other drug traffickers, use children to produce coca and transport drugs.(2-5, 7) Colombian children from the departments of Amazonas and Nariño frequently travel across the border to Peru to work in the cultivation of coca and illegal drug production. Sometimes these children, including indigenous children, are trafficked to perform these activities.(22, 23)

Evidence suggests that children in Peru work in informal mining, particularly in informal gold mines and peripheral services. Informal and small-scale mining companies have higher risks of being exposed to hazardous incidents including wall and mine collapses, landslides, explosives accidents, and exposure to harmful gases.(4, 14, 24) Children engaged in fishing often work at night, leading to frequent absences from school, and face risks including entanglement in nets, falls, and exposure to the elements.(14)

Domestic work is principally carried out by girls, who often migrate from impoverished areas in the highland and jungle regions to the coastal areas to work in third-party homes.(4) Girls are found in commercial sexual exploitation across the country, in particular in mining communities.(19, 25) Commercial sexual exploitation of children is also a problem in the tourist zones of Cuzco, Iquitos, and Lima.(2, 26) Research indicates that young Colombian girls and boys often enter Santa Rosa, Peru by canoe where they engage in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities and are further exploited in commercial sexual exploitation because they are unable to return to Colombia at night, as canoe access to Colombia closes from 6 pm to 6 am every day.(20, 21)

Adolescents from indigenous communities had a 42.5 percent secondary school completion rate in 2013, compared to the 67.6 percent completion rate of non-indigenous youth. Only 42.1 percent of girls ages 17 to 18 from rural communities completed secondary school in 2013, as opposed to 75.7 percent of girls in urban areas.(27) Some parents choose not to send their daughters to high school because of the distance, cost, and concerns over sexual violence and teen pregnancy.(28) A 2012 family health survey indicated that 34.9 percent of girls who have only completed primary school are pregnant or already have a child.(29) School authorities reportedly deny girls admission to school if they are pregnant or dating, despite legislation requiring school directors to ensure that students who are pregnant or have children remain in school and do not face discrimination.(28, 30)

In 2014, the Government signed legislation for the Complete School Day, which aims to increase instruction time from 35 to 45 hours per week in 1,000 public high schools in 2015 and to all public high schools by 2021. The Complete School Day aims to strengthen the quality of education, particularly in mathematics and English.(31, 32)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Peru has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 2 of the Constitution; Articles 128–129, 153, and 168 of the Penal Code (36, 37)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 4 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Articles 153 and 182 of the Penal Code (34, 36, 38, 39)

Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 42 of the Military Service Law (42)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 42 of the Military Service Law (42, 43)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 17 of the Constitution; Article 12 of the General Education Law (37, 44, 45)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the General Education Law (37, 44)

Article 57 of the Child and Adolescent Code prohibits children under age 18 from working between the hours of 7 p.m. and 7 a.m., with the exception that a judge may authorize children age 15 and older to engage in night work not exceeding 4 hours a day. The Government of Peru has indicated that the pending bill to amend the Child and Adolescent Code may raise the minimum age for authorized night work to 16, which would bring the law into compliance with international standards on hazardous work.(34, 46)

Although Section A of the Supreme Decree No. 003-2010-MIMDES designates fishing and mining as work that is hazardous by nature, Article 51 of the Child and Adolescent Code allows children to perform work in mining at age 16 and in commercial fishing at age 17, without provisions to ensure that their health, safety, and morals are fully protected, or that they receive specific instruction or training in these activities.(33, 35)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, the Government updated Article 153 of the Penal Code to increase the maximum penalties applicable to perpetrators of human trafficking crimes and to require anyone who facilitates trafficking in persons to be charged as a principal offender. The modifications to the Penal Code also add forced labor as a form of human trafficking.(39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Promotion of Employment (MTPE)	Set national policies and guidelines for labor law enforcement, including for inspections. Responsible for supporting and overseeing the National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL).(47)
National Labor Inspection Superintendency	Enforce child labor laws, including prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor.(48) Carry out labor inspections in the Lima region, as well as inspections of employers outside of Lima with more than 10 registered workers, in coordination with regional labor inspectorates.(49) Maintain a Special Inspection Group against Forced Labor and Child Labor, composed of 15 inspectors who conduct inspections targeting forced labor and child labor violations, and train other inspectors on these topics.(14, 42, 50) Address possible child labor violations during all inspections and refer cases of child labor to the Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations (MIMP) and the Public Ministry, as appropriate.(51, 52) In 2014, opened regional administrative units in Huánuco, Loreto, Ica, Moquegua, Tumbes, La Libertad, Cajamarca and Áncash.(7, 53)
Regional Labor Inspectorates	Inspect employers in regions outside of Lima with 10 or fewer registered workers, in coordination with SUNAFIL.(47, 49)
Public Ministry	Coordinate with the MTPE, SUNAFIL, and the National Police to investigate and prosecute cases of criminal violations of child labor laws.(52)
Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations	Maintain a Children's Bureau that coordinates with the MTPE and SUNAFIL to document complaints of violations of child labor laws.(48, 54) Maintain a hotline for exploited children, including child laborers, and provide social services to children found working in the worst forms of child labor.(50, 52)
National Police	Enforce criminal laws regarding child labor and child exploitation and maintain a Trafficking Investigation Unit to investigate cases of child trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation.(48, 52) Coordinate with the Public Ministry and MIMP to place rescued minors in the care of family members or state social services.(1)
Ministry of the Interior (MININTER)	Maintain a hotline functioning during office hours to receive reports of trafficking in persons. Provide victims and the general public with information on human trafficking; communicate cases of human trafficking to relevant government offices; and coordinate services for victims.(1, 55)

Law enforcement agencies in Peru took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL) employed 295 labor inspectors focused on the formal sector, 83 of whom were based in regional inspectorates outside of Lima.(7) In October, SUNAFIL announced the hiring of more than 90 new labor inspectors assigned to the regional administrative units of Huánuco, Loreto, Ica, Moquegua, Tumbes, La Libertad, Cajamarca and Áncash.(56) The MTPE and SUNAFIL provided training on child labor to 258 labor inspectors in 2014.(7, 54)

The 2014 budget for MTPE efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor was approximately $552,729. (14) SUNAFIL reported that its 2014 Budget was $24,647,980.(7) In general, inspectors lack sufficient resources, such as transportation and fuel, to address the problem of child labor, and inspections did not take place in the informal sector.(3, 14, 48) Many Regional Labor Inspectorates outside of Lima and Callao are particularly understaffed and underfunded, and the MTPE has reported that the number of inspectors is insufficient to conduct inspections effectively. Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts has noted that the number of labor inspectors is also inadequate to monitor the informal economy, in which the majority of child labor in Peru occurs.(7, 57)

As of November 2014, SUNAFIL inspectors had carried out 692 labor inspections.(54) Inspections included routine, unannounced visits to areas with reported child labor problems, including in the agriculture, fishing, mining, construction, commerce, hotels and restaurants, and transportation sectors, as well as inspections responding to specific complaints. The number of child labor violations found as a result of these inspections was not available, although the MTPE reported that child labor was found mainly in the mining, agriculture, fishing, and commerce sectors.(7) Regional inspectorates conducted inspections only as a result of child labor complaints.(7) In May 2014, Peru's Office of the Ombudsman published a study on the MTPE's actions on child labor, with a focus on the inspection system. The study produced recommendations to improve government actions on child labor, including by increasing supervision in the informal sector and coordinating with social protection agencies before, during, and after labor inspections.(58)

As of November 2014, the Government had imposed fines on 23 employers for child labor violations, totaling approximately $5,292,000 and assisted 15 children working illegally, all in the Lima metropolitan area. Fines were insufficient to prevent child labor violations, however, particularly as NGOs estimate that only 10 percent of fines were collected.(7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the MTPE, the National Police, and the Public Ministry worked together to investigate and prosecute criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor. The National Police's Trafficking in Persons Unit (DIRINTRAP) expanded from a small division to a directorate investigating cases involving the trafficking of minors for labor and hired 65 new officers in 2014, for a total of 110 National Police personnel.(7)

The Public Ministry investigated and prosecuted 110 cases involving trafficking in persons, and coordinated legal and psychological assistance for 177 victims; however, these data do not distinguish between children and adults.(14) In October, the Public Ministry converted a Lima office for criminal prosecution into an office specializing in human trafficking cases.(14, 59) There are 11 trafficking in persons prosecutors.(7) The Ministry of the Interior (MININTER) and the National Police participated in three bilateral operations with Ecuador, resulting in the repatriation to Ecuador of four adolescent victims trafficked into sexual exploitation and three adolescent victims of migrant trafficking.(60) MININTER reported having received approximately 1,099 calls to the trafficking in persons hotline, but information is unavailable on the number of these calls that were related to the trafficking of children. (14) The Judiciary reported having convicted 19 people for trafficking in persons between January and November of 2014, although the number of these cases involving children is unknown.(61) DIRINTRAP identified 25 minor victims of trafficking in persons; however, information was not available on the total number of children who were rescued or had received services in 2014.(61, 62)

The Public Defender's Office has recommended increasing the penalty for child endangerment beyond the maximum sentence of 4 years.(63, 64)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role &amp; Description
National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (CPETI)	Propose public policies and coordinate, evaluate, and monitor government actions to combat child labor.(3) Maintain several subcommittees, including one on informal mining and one on child labor in indigenous villages.(3) Led by the MTPE and includes 17 government agencies, including MININTER, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Justice, as well as representatives from business associations, unions, and NGOs.(3)
Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Carry out CPETI's mandate at the regional level.(65) Created in all 25 regions of Peru.(14) In 2014, a total of 1,700 public officials involved in efforts to address child labor in 24 regions received training.(54)
National Commission against Forced Labor	Coordinate government efforts to combat forced labor, including conducting research on forced labor, awareness-raising efforts, developing legislation, and strengthening Peru's institutional capacity to address forced labor. Led by the MTPE with participation of eight additional government ministries.(48)
Permanent Multi-Sectoral Commission on Illegal Mining	Coordinate the Government's efforts to address illegal mining, including by developing programs to eradicate child labor and child prostitution in mining areas. Led by the Prime Minister's Office and includes the participation of regional governments and six national government agencies, including the Ministry of Energy and Mines and MININTER.(66)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Multi-Sector Committee Against Trafficking in Persons	Lead and coordinate government efforts to combat trafficking in persons. Chaired by MININTER and includes 12 government agencies, including the Ministry of Justice, MIMP, and the MTPE.(48)

In October 2014, the Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations and five other ministries met to develop strategies to combat child labor in the streets of Lima, focusing on preventative actions to be implemented in child laborers' communities of origin. The MTPE plans to provide additional funding to this initiative in 2015.(67)

In general, government agencies that identify and assist child laborers, as well as law enforcement agencies that investigate child labor cases, do not consistently coordinate with one another or share information about planned interventions or raids.(7, 62) The National Commission Against Forced Labor met infrequently throughout the reporting period.(7) The failure of law enforcement officials in different parts of the country to coordinate with one another on child trafficking cases also led to significant delays in both investigating the crimes and rescuing the victims.(2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Peru has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor for 2012–2021	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by improving the livelihoods of low-income families, improving education opportunities, raising awareness of child labor, improving work conditions for adolescents, and increasing child labor law enforcement.(8, 54) Also seeks to improve the quality of child labor data in Peru. Includes the objective of carrying out pilot programs to combat child labor in urban and rural areas.(8)
National Action Plan for Children and Adolescents for 2012–2021	Establishes a comprehensive set of government policies for children and adolescents, including the goal of eradicating the worst forms of child labor.(1, 48, 54)
Sector Strategy on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Includes the objectives of increasing the availability of child labor data, raising public awareness, strengthening coordination between public and private entities on child labor issues, and improving investigations of child labor violations. Developed jointly by the MTPE and the ILO.(52, 68)
Second National Plan to Combat Forced Labor for 2013–2017	Establishes the Government's policies and priorities for combatting forced labor. Includes the goal of reducing children's vulnerability to becoming engaged in forced labor.(24)
Intersectoral Protocol against Forced Labor (2014)†	Outlines the Government's role in combatting forced labor and provides for the housing, legal defense, and educational reintegration of children and adolescent victims of forced labor. Monitored by the National Commission Against Forced Labor.(7, 69)
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014–2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through signatories' efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Peru at the ILO's 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima (October 2014).(70, 71)
A Peru without Child Labor (2014)†	Aims to prevent and eradicate child labor through a partnership between the Government and a network of private businesses committed to supporting the National Strategy by investing in child development and building a skilled workforce. Signed by the MTPE and principal business associations in June 2014.(54, 72)
Illegal Mining, Drug Trafficking, Inequality, and Poverty Elimination Agreement Between the Government of Colombia and the Government of Peru†	Outlines 11 agreements between the 2 nations, including several that focus on child and adolescent labor protection issues, such as identifying and assisting children and adolescents who work in mining activities and are in vulnerable situations.(73) In addition, establishes a roadmap to apply concepts from the Cooperation Agreement on the Exchange of Experiences and Good Practices regarding labor and labor relations, including child labor.(73)

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

As a part of the agreement with the Government of Colombia, the Government of Peru met with officials from Colombia and developed a workshop for an information and coordination exchange on the development of a Binational Peru-Colombia Child Labor Registration System. The Government also met with civil society partners and officials from Colombia and Brazil to coordinate efforts to prevent the sexual exploitation of minors in border areas.(74) In addition, the Governments of Peru and

Ecuador participated in a workshop to develop a bilateral protocol on the eradication of child labor.(75, 76)

Although the Second National Plan to Combat Forced Labor for 2013–2017 has been approved, the Government has not allocated funding to implement many components of the Plan.(3, 7) Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor are mandated to create action plans to combat child labor, but not all regional commissions have action plans in place and some regions have not provided funding to their commissions to carry out the action plans.(51, 77)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Peru funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Seed Project ( Proyecto Semilla ) (2011–2015)	$13 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by the NGO Desarrollo y Autogestión to combat rural child labor. Supports the national and regional governments in developing child labor policies, carries out awareness-raising campaigns, and aims to provide 6,000 children and 3,500 families with education and livelihood services to reduce the incidence of child labor.(15, 78) As of October 2014, had assisted 4,422 children and 2,707 families.(79) In 2014, the Ministry of Education hired 23 teachers for the project's high school tutoring program in Junín and Huancavelica, funded 3 workshops for the project, and hired 2 staff members to conduct a study on expanding the project to additional schools in 2015.(79, 80)
Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (2013–2017)	USDOL-funded research project implemented by the ILO in 10 countries, including Peru, to increase the knowledge base around child labor by collecting new data, analyzing existing data, and building the capacity of the Government to conduct research in this area.(81)
Project to Consolidate Efforts to Combat Forced Labor in Brazil and Peru (2012–2016)	$6 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by the ILO to combat forced labor, including forced child labor, in Brazil and Peru, and to share Brazil's good practices with the Government of Peru and Peruvian stakeholders. In 2014, the project began to develop a monitoring tool to track the implementation of the National Plan to Combat Forced Labor, and supported activities to promote the exchange of good practices to Combat Forced Labor.(82–84) It also carried out an exchange activity between the Brazilian and Peruvian Commissions to Combat Forced Labor to share good practices and develop an agenda for further information-sharing activities.(83, 84)
Carabayllo Project (2012–2014)‡	2-year pilot project implemented by the Government that provides scholarships, education assistance, psychological help, and other services to 1,000 families and 1,500 children, with the aim of reducing urban child labor, especially in garbage dumps.(1, 8, 50)
Huánuco Project (2012–2014)‡	2-year pilot project implemented by the Government that seeks to improve school retention and attendance rates among child laborers in rural areas. In conjunction with the Together Program, assists approximately 4,000 children and 3,200 families by providing them with cash transfers, education, and livelihood services.(1, 8, 50)
Together Program ( Juntos )*‡	Ministry of Social Development program to provide cash transfers to approximately 650,000 low-income households in 14 of the country's 25 departments.(85, 86)
Peru Works ( Trabaja Perú )‡	MTPE program that offers temporary work and technical training to low-income households. Requires beneficiaries to ensure their children attend school and do not engage in child labor.(48, 52)
Youth to Work ( Jóvenes a la Obra )*‡	MTPE program to provide youth ages 16 to 24 with free job training, including on-the-job training in companies.(3)
Go Peru (Vamos Perú)*‡	MTPE program to provide job training and assistance to entrepreneurs, and job placement services to the unemployed, including youth.(3)
Street Educators ( Educadores de Calle )‡	MIMP program to provide counseling and training to children engaged in begging and street work in 20 cities throughout Peru.(87) Connects working children and their families to educational and social services with the goal of withdrawing them from exploitative work and improving family welfare.(51, 87) In October 2014, 122 Street Educators members attended a national meeting to exchange experiences and strengthen intervention efforts.(88) Coordinated with the MTPE to provide workshops on the prevention of trafficking in persons to more than 1,000 children in 2014.(61)
Regional Action Group for the Americas ( Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas )	Regional initiative that conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(89, 90)

Program	Description
Education and Monitoring Program for the Eradication of Child Labor (2012–2014)	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aimed to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in the Americas, including Peru. Included the objective of developing information systems on the worst forms of child labor.(91)
Blue Heart Campaign against Human Trafficking (2014)†‡	Government of Peru and UNODC campaign that aims to raise awareness of combatting human trafficking.(92) Funded by the Government of Peru.(14)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Peru.

Although Peru has programs that reach children who work in agriculture in rural areas, the scope of these programs is still insufficient to fully address the large numbers of children engaged in hazardous occupations in agriculture. Peru also lacks targeted programs to assist children who are subjected to forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and child soldiering, as well as children who work in mining, logging, and domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Peru (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that only children age 16 and older are authorized to work between the hours of 7 p.m. and 7 a.m.	2014
	Ensure that minors engaged in fishing and mining receive adequate, specific instruction or training in these activities, and that their health, safety, and morals are fully protected.	2014
Enforcement	Increase the level of funding allocated to the MTPE, SUNAFIL, and Regional Labor Inspectorates to help ensure effective enforcement of child labor laws, particularly in the informal sector and regions with high rates of child labor.	2009 – 2014
	Increase the amount of information that is publicly available about child labor law enforcement efforts, particularly at the regional level, including the number of child laborers identified and assisted as a result of inspections, the number of fines imposed and collected for child labor violations, and the number of criminal cases involving the worst forms of child labor that were investigated, prosecuted, or convicted.	2012 – 2014
Coordination	Strengthen coordination and information-sharing mechanisms among government agencies dealing with child labor issues.	2012 – 2014
Government Policies	Allocate sufficient funding to fully implement the Second National Plan to Combat Forced Labor.	2013 – 2014
	Ensure that regional CPETI commissions develop action plans to combat child labor, and allocate sufficient funding to implement these plans.	2010 – 2014
Social Programs	Improve access to education for girls in rural and indigenous communities.	2014
	Assess the impact that existing social programs, such as the Juntos conditional cash transfer program, may have on addressing child labor.	2013 – 2014
	Expand social programs to reach a greater number of children working in hazardous occupations in agriculture, and initiate social programs to address forced child labor, child commercial sexual exploitation, child soldiering, child labor in mining, child labor in logging, and child domestic work.	2009 – 2014

In 2014, the Philippines made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Child Labor Committee (NCLC) finalized its Strategic Plan for 2014–2016, which will serve as the operational framework to address components of the Philippine Program Against Child Labor (PPACL). Four NCLC subcommittees conducted year-end assessments on the accomplishments of their respective 2014 strategic plans to identify the implementation gaps and formulate their 2015 strategic plans under the PPACL Strategic Framework. The Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT) trained over 5,000 service providers to ensure the protection, prevention, and prosecution of human trafficking cases, and established three additional regional task forces bringing the countrywide total to 19. However, children in the Philippines are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and domestic work. Despite nearly doubling the number of Labor Law Compliance Officers (LLCO), enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to the limited number of inspectors and lack of resources for inspections.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Philippines are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and domestic service.(1-5) The 2011 National Survey on Children indicated that 3.2 million children are engaged in child labor, of which approximately 3 million work in hazardous labor.(6) Most child labor occurs in the informal sector, with approximately 60 percent working in agriculture.(7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the Philippines.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	7.5 (1,549,677)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	93.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	7.8

	Forced begging* (11)
	Used in illicit activities, including the trafficking of drugs (2, 11, 15, 33)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, primarily girls, are trafficked from rural to urban areas for domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.(7, 24, 29) Emerging reports indicate that boys are increasingly trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, particularly for child pornography.(25, 29) In addition, very young Filipino children are coerced to perform sex acts for live Internet broadcast to paying foreigners. This typically occurs in private residences or Internet cafés, and it is often facilitated by family members.(27) The Philippine National Police (PNP) noted that child trafficking for labor is prevalent from Lanao del Sur Province in Mindanao.(11, 34)

Children commonly work as domestic workers or kasambahays.(1, 22, 23) Many child domestic workers work long hours, and their isolation in the homes where they work creates the potential for sexual harassment and verbal and physical abuse.(24, 27, 30, 35) Child domestic workers are often denied access to education.(22, 23, 35) Some children end up in situations of forced labor, especially those who receive no pay or have their wages withheld.(23, 29, 35)

Child soldiering is a problem, particularly among antigovernment and terrorist organizations.(7, 24, 25, 31, 32) Sources indicate that children continue to be found in the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), working as guides, messengers, and porters.(7, 25, 31) In early 2014, the Government of the Philippines signed a peace agreement with the MILF, completing negotiations that had been ongoing for more than a decade.(32, 36) UNICEF conducted preventative programs with the group on the recruitment and use of children. The MILF also reconstituted a panel to monitor implementation of the UN-MILF Action Plan to monitor cases of grave child rights violations.(32, 33)

Children have been found in the Moro National Liberation Front where abductions have been reported, including for the use of children as human shields, as well as in the Bangsamoro Islamic Freedom Fighters (BIFF) and the New People’s Army. Children have also been used as both combatants and non-combatants by the Abu Sayyaf Group.(7, 31-33, 37) In September, combatants from the BIFF attended workshops led by UNICEF, the Bangsamoro Development Agency, and Plan International on topics including children in armed conflict, the framework for child protection, and monitoring and reporting grave violations.(33) In addition, the UN has raised concerns about the use of children by security forces of the state.(7, 25)

Although the law mandates free education, many children do not attend school because the costs of books, uniforms, meals, and transportation are prohibitive for many families.(1, 2, 38) In addition, distant school locations are often not accessible to rural students, especially at the secondary school level.(7, 38, 39)

Typhoon Haiyan hit the Philippines in late 2013, leaving behind devastation that affected millions of people.(40, 41) Prior to the typhoon, children were already heavily involved in agriculture; the loss of family livelihoods and incomes has increased child labor in hazardous work.(42-44) Adult migration for work and displacement from their homes have made children more vulnerable to exploitation in hazardous work and/or human trafficking.(25, 27, 42, 43, 45, 46)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Philippines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Bureau of Working Conditions (BWC)	Enforce child labor laws and regularly train inspectors and regional personnel. Inspect establishments and monitor compliance with labor laws in all sectors, including the informal sector, nontraditional and informal establishments, and agricultural and mining operations.(11)
Rescue the Child Laborers Quick Action Teams ( Sagip Batang Manggagawa – SBM )	Lead the regional mechanism for rescuing children who work in exploitative and dangerous situations. (15) Interagency quick action mechanism partnering with the Philippine National Police (PNP); the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI); the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD); local representatives of various government agencies; local NGOs; labor unions; and the business community in a cooperative effort to detect, monitor, and respond to instances of child labor in the formal and informal sectors.(11, 33) Exchange information on child labor cases in meetings of the Regional Child Labor Committees and in conferences of regional SBM Quick Action Teams. Refer child laborers to DSWD for rehabilitation and reintegration.(33)
Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD)	Rehabilitate and reintegrate children.(2, 15) Coordinate regional Special Action Units, with at least one dedicated staff member per region to conduct rescue operations for child laborers and cooperate with social workers to manage the ongoing cases of victims.(15) Maintain 16 Crisis Intervention Units and 30 residential facilities nationwide to address cases of child abuse and support child abuse victims, including children exploited in hazardous labor.(11, 33)
Philippine National Police (PNP)	Investigate and prosecute child labor cases.(29, 62) Lead the enforcement of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children laws as well as other tasks related to the protection of children by the PNP's Women and Children's Protection Center.(11) Maintain 1,833 women and children's desks throughout the country with a total of 3,675 personnel.(27)
National Bureau of Investigation (NBI)	Investigate and prosecute child labor cases.(29, 62) Operate a national Trafficking in Persons Task Force to conduct preliminary investigations and prosecute trafficking in persons cases, as well as a Task Force on the Protection of Children from Exploitation and Abuse.(27, 63) Employ 16 agents and investigators assigned to investigate cases of trafficking and illegal recruitment in the Anti-Trafficking Division.(33)
Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA)	Enforce the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act, Republic Act No. 9165. Maintain a national hotline for reporting cases of children used in illicit activities.(2) Coordinate with DSWD to assist during rescue operations once information is verified through surveillance.(11)

Law enforcement agencies in the Philippines took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

DOLE's Bureau of Working Conditions (BWC) increased the number of Labor Laws Compliance Officers (LLCOs) during the year by more than double, raising the number from 237 to 572.(33, 64) Despite the increase in the number of LLCOs, NGOs report that enforcement of labor laws, particularly DOLE's ability to monitor and investigate child labor law violations, remains difficult due to the limited number of inspectors and lack of logistical resources.(33) DOLE includes a child labor component in its training for labor inspectors.(11)

The budget of DOLE's regional offices for inspection activities increased from $2.73 million in 2013 to $4.05 million in 2014. The Government indicated that it has sufficient office facilities but lacks funding for transportation, fuel, and other necessities to carry out inspections, particularly in the informal sector.(33) During the year, DOLE started using a Labor Law Compliance System Management Information System, a Web-based application system that uses tablet computers for transmitting and processing real-time data collected from the field using an electronic checklist.(33)

Rescue the Child Laborers SBM Quick Action Teams conducted 15 rescue operations in five regions that led to the rescue of 78 children working in hazardous activities. These children were then referred to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) for rehabilitation and reintegration.(33) While the SBM Quick Action Teams can conduct unannounced compliance visits in video karaoke bars, massage parlors, sauna/bath houses and farms, they are not authorized to conduct visits in private homes to search for underage child domestic workers.(33)

DOLE's BWC reported that in the National Capital Region, 86 minors were found working part-time making local delicacies.(64) Research did not find the total number of child labor inspections conducted, the number of violations identified, or the number of children assisted as a result of inspections because the Government does not have a system in place to disaggregate data.(33)

Criminal Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) employed 35 drug enforcement officers per region who were involved in anti-illegal drug operations, however there are no officers dedicated solely to investigating cases involving children in illicit activities. Two focal persons per PDEA regional office were designated to oversee operations involving children in illicit activities.(33) From January to November, the PDEA and other law enforcement units conducted 14,801 anti-drug operations, an 80 percent increase in the number of operations conducted in 2013. Of these operations, 120 cases involved the use of minors.(33)

Law enforcement agencies do not have specific funding to combat human trafficking or the use of children in illicit activities. Also, the limited number of law enforcement agents dedicated expressly to child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children continued to hinder the Government's ability to investigate and prosecute complaints and violations.(11, 33) The overall number of prosecutors assigned to specific anti-human trafficking task forces did increase, from 93 in 2013 to 135 in 2014.(27) The PNP has noted that child protection at the grassroots level remains weak as many local councils for the protection of children lack the resources to address issues.(11) Law enforcement agencies do not have budget allocations specifically for combating human trafficking, but do assign personnel and allocate resources from their general budgets, which are often determined by local government leaders.(33)

In 2014, the Philippine National Police (PNP) investigated 273 child trafficking cases, including 159 cases of trafficking for sexual exploitation and 114 cases for labor.(33, 64) The National Bureau of Investigation's (NBI) Anti-Trafficking Division investigated 28 cases of human trafficking, 19 of which involved the trafficking of children.(64) The Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT) task forces investigated 182 alleged trafficking in persons cases involving 811 victims. Of these cases, 69 involved minor victims.(33) Many cases of trafficking of minors, particularly for child labor, continue to be undocumented for fear of retaliation from employers.(11, 34)

DSWD reported assisting 424 minor victims of trafficking as well as 112 minor victims of prostitution and 24 victims of pornography. While there were no prosecutions reported for the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict, DSWD reported having assisted 22 minor children involved in conflict.(33) Enforcement agencies filed five criminal cases related to child prostitution at the prosecutor's office and local courts. Eight establishments found to have engaged 25 minors in prostitution were permanently closed by DOLE.(33)

In 2014, the Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT) provided a series of trainings for service providers to ensure the protection, prevention, and prosecution of human trafficking cases. IACAT's Training Section conducted 18 training sessions with 772 government personnel and IACAT task forces conducted 91 training sessions with 4,824 government personnel, mostly from the justice sector and other law enforcement agencies.(33) IACAT also operated the 24/7 Actionline against Human Trafficking to receive and immediately respond to requests for assistance and referrals from trafficking victims, their families, and the public.(11) From April 2014 to January 2015, the hotline assisted 23 alleged trafficking victims, 3 of whom were minors.(27)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Labor Committee (NCLC)	Coordinate national efforts to combat child labor under DOLE.(15) Promote information sharing at the national level and has been replicated at the regional and provincial levels.(2) Composed of more than 15 agencies and NGOs.(15)
Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT)	Coordinate, monitor, and oversee ongoing implementation of efforts to combat trafficking in persons, including child trafficking. Co-chaired by the Department of Justice and DSWD, and works with other government agencies and two NGOs representing women and children.(11, 63) Currently composed of 19 anti-trafficking task forces established in eight regions and 7 interagency task forces in major seaports and airports.(11, 33) Meet regularly to share information and assessments, and coordinate member agencies' respective anti-trafficking initiatives and policies.(33) Received a budget of $2.3 million in 2014, up from $2.25 million in 2013.(27) During the reporting period, established three additional regional task forces.(33)
Inter-Agency Council for the Welfare of Children (CWC)	Operate a monitoring and response system through its Subcommittee on Children Affected by Armed Conflict and Displacement for situations of children engaged in armed conflict, including recruitment and use of child soldiers.(29)
Inter-Agency Committee on Children Involved in Armed Conflict (IAC CIAC)	Advocate for protecting children and preventing the involvement of children in armed conflict. Composed of 14 government agencies and chaired by CWC.(33) Work under the direct supervision of CWC as the lead agency in implementing the CIAC Program Framework to address the involvement of children in armed conflict.(11) Convene on a bimonthly basis for reporting and monitoring.(33)

During the year, the Inter-Agency Council for the Welfare of Children and partner agencies trained 176 frontline workers in Mindanao, using the Protocol on Monitoring, Reporting, and Response System on Grave Child Rights Violations in Situations in Armed Conflict.(27) The training and orientation covered 10 provinces in Mindanao and was provided to social workers, teachers, police officers, health workers, Local Government Unit officers, and personnel of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.(33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of the Philippines has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Committee (NCLC) Strategic Plan (2014–2016)†	Serves as the operational framework of the NCLC to pursue various components of the PPACL up to the deadline in 2016.(60) In 2014, four NCLC subcommittees conducted year-end assessments on the accomplishments of their respective 2014 strategic plans to identify implementation gaps and formulate their 2015 strategic plans under the PPACL Strategic Framework.(33)
Philippine Program Against Child Labor (PPACL) Strategic Framework (2007–2015)	Lays out a blueprint for reducing the prevalence of child labor by 75 percent.(15, 65, 66) Identifies concrete objectives such as improving access for children and their families to appropriate services to help prevent incidences of child labor and to reintegrate former child laborers.(15, 67) Includes the Convergence Action Plan (H.E.L.P. M.E.: health, education, livelihood and prevention, protection and prosecution, monitoring, and evaluation), which aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor by 2016 and to remove 893,000 children from hazardous child labor across 15,568 target barangays (districts).(66, 68) During the reporting period, 75,724 child laborers in 406,887 households were profiled for program inclusion.(33) Has been allocated $220 million for implementation over 4 years, from 2013 to 2016.(34, 68, 69) Includes the Batang Malaya Child Labor-Free Philippines Campaign, which institutionalizes the Survey on Children to be regularly conducted by the Government; mainstreams child labor prevention into local development plans; adds child labor elimination as a requirement in conditional cash transfer programs; strengthens the labor inspectorate to monitor child labor; improves enforcement of Republic Act No. 9231; and strengthens the NCLC through a legal mandate, budget, and a dedicated secretariat.(70)
Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan (MTPDP) (2011–2016)	Specifies government commitments to strengthen mechanisms for monitoring the implementation of child protection laws, to develop strategies to respond to child trafficking and pornography, and to implement an enhanced program for preventing children from being engaged in armed conflict.(2)
Philippine Labor and Employment Plan (2011–2016)	Operates within the framework of the MTPDP and includes the goal of reducing exploitive child labor.(2, 11, 71)

Policy	Description
National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2012–2016)	Contains specific provisions on preventing trafficking of children, including raising awareness and creating local programs to prevent children from being lured by traffickers.(2, 11) In 2014, the Government conducted a monitoring and evaluation workshop to assess each member agency's compliance to the National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons.(33)
National Plan of Action for Children*	Approved by CWC, is designed to continue and implement Child 21.(63) Connected to the MTPDP with three strategic components: (1) policy and legislative agenda, (2) programs and strategies, and (3) governance.(63)
National Strategic Framework for Plan Development for Children (Child 21) (2000–2025)*	Sets out broad goals for national government agencies, local governments, and NGOs to achieve improved quality of life for Filipino children by 2025.(15, 63, 72)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2012-2018)	Identifies major development priorities, including reducing and eliminating child labor.(73)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of the Philippines funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
DOLE Child Labor Prevention and Elimination Program‡	DOLE program that implements local awareness-raising campaigns, institutes child labor monitoring mechanisms, and requires barangays to develop child labor elimination plans with short- and long-term objectives.(74) Includes the Campaign for Child-Labor Free Barangays, which seeks to make villages child labor-free through community orientations on child labor and anti-trafficking laws, and through government livelihood programs and guidelines.(11, 24, 34, 75) From January to October, 7 resolutions and 14 ordinances were passed at the local level in support of the Child Labor-Free Barangay Program. In addition, three Voluntary Codes of Conduct on the Elimination of Child Labor in the Sugar Industry were formulated and adopted in the sugarcane-growing provinces of Batangas, Bukidnon, and Negros Occidental.(33) Also, during the reporting period, DOLE regional offices awarded Child Labor-Free Establishment Certificates to 76 establishments nationwide.(33) Program also includes the Livelihood for Parents of Child Laborers (KASAMA) program, which provides funds to parents of working children for projects such as raising livestock, producing souvenirs, food vending, and other service professions.(62, 74, 76) DOLE regional offices provided livelihood assistance to 9,396 parents of child workers and children-at-risk in 16 regions.(33) A third component, Project Angel Tree, redistributes shoes, school bags, toys, and other supplies donated by private sponsors to children at risk of, or engaged in, child labor.(15, 62, 76) From January to October, a total of 4,585 children received school supplies.(33) Sources indicate that the program's budget is not sufficient compared to the size of the problem.(11)
Conditional Cash Transfer program ( Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino ) Program‡	DSWD and Local Government Unit social assistance and development program that provides conditional grants to poor families with children, from newborn to age 17, to improve their access to health care, adequate nutrition, and education.(11, 15, 77, 78) Covers 1,627 cities and municipalities in 79 provinces and all 17 regions.(33) Specifically targets households of child laborers and includes a condition prohibiting hazardous child labor as a program requirement.(69, 79) Provided assistance to 4.09 million households as of June 2014. Budget was increased from $1.2 billion in 2013 to $1.44 billion in 2014; however, funding remains insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem.(33, 64)
Alternative Learning System (ALS) Program*‡	Department of Education program that offers nonformal education to out-of-school children, including child laborers, as well as opportunities to attain a certificate of education equivalency.(80) Has limited resources, represents less than 1 percent of the Department of Education's budget, and has only one teacher for every 24 communities, so it cannot reach many out-of-school youth.(38, 76)
Social Amelioration Program (SAP)*‡	DOLE, National Tripartite Council, and Sugar Industry program that provides a cash bonus to sugar workers and funds social protection, livelihood, and education programs for sugar workers and their families through a tax imposed on refined sugar.(81, 82) Integrated Services for Migratory Sugar Workers Program under the SAP seeks to improve the livelihoods of migrant sugar workers and their families as well as increase income.(15, 82) Includes services such as educational materials and scholarships.(62, 76) Also provides skills training and other capacity-building opportunities to beneficiaries through DOLE's Bureau of Workers and Special Concerns and DOLE regional offices.(11)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Recovery and Reintegration Program for Trafficked Persons‡	DSWD and IACAT program that provides services to victims of trafficking and raises awareness in vulnerable communities. Includes services such as shelters, crisis intervention, awareness campaigns, and residential facilities.(28, 29) Includes the National Referral System, a mechanism to strengthen the referral networks of agencies dealing with trafficked persons by allowing case managers to efficiently handle trafficking in persons cases through the use of standard referral and reporting forms, ensuring uniformity of documents and avoiding repetition of interviews of human trafficking survivors. There are 149 referral networks established in 16 regions.(33) Received a budget of $532,440 for 2014.(27)
Special Social Services for Children in Armed Conflict‡	DSWD program that provides special services to protect and rehabilitate children after their direct or indirect involvement in armed conflict.(83) Includes services such as emergency evacuation and rescue; family reunification; provision of food, clothing, and shelter; and psychosocial rehabilitation.(62)
Philippines ABK3 LEAP—Livelihoods, Education, Advocacy, and Protection to Reduce Child Labor in Sugarcane (2011–2016)	$16.5 million, USDOL-funded, 4-year and 11-month project implemented by World Vision to reduce child labor in sugar-producing areas in 11 provinces of the Philippines.(84) Seeks to provide education services to 54,000 children engaged in, or at risk of engaging in, the worst forms of child labor, and to provide livelihood assistance to 28,090 households of targeted children. Engages the sugar industry in raising awareness of child labor among sugar workers and their families.(84, 85) In 2014, introduced Child Labor Monitoring Systems to stakeholders in 31 cities and municipalities, and in 3 provinces.(33)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor, improve the evidence base on child labor and forced labor through data collection and research, and strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers in the Philippines. In 2014, facilitated technical advice to DOLE in the finalization of the revised Hazardous Work List for Children.(86)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor	USDOL-funded capacity building project implemented by the ILO in at least 10 countries to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. Aims to improve legislation addressing child labor issues, including by bringing local or national laws into compliance with international standards, improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor, implement a national action plan on the elimination of child labor, and enhance the implementation of national and local policies and programs aimed at the reduction and prevention of child labor in the Philippines. In 2014, conducted meetings with officials of the Department of Education and DOLE for the creation of an Education Roadmap to Eliminate Child Labor and began work on an assessment of existing educational programs.(60)
UNICEF Country Program (2012–2016)*	Program that supports the Government of the Philippines in fulfilling the rights of children, paying particular attention to vulnerable children. Contributes to the MTPDP, 2015 Education for All plan, and the Basic Education Sector Reform Agenda.(87)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of the Philippines.

During the year, DOLE’s Institute for Labor Studies conducted a study in coordination with the Bureau of Workers with Special Concerns to examine the link between the Livelihood for Parents of Child Laborers program and the children’s work situation and well-being. The research documented changes in the lives of former beneficiaries as a result of the program, assessed the contributions of the intervention, and gathered insights on how to enhance the impact and improve the future design.(33) Overall, the program was not found to have improved the work situation or well-being of the beneficiaries due to the limited benefits they received. Improvement was, however, observed when the program provided parents with counseling on family values and the importance of education.(64)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in the Philippines (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor and resources available in order to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2014

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

	Dedicate law enforcement agents to child trafficking, children engaged in illicit activities, and CSEC issues so they may effectively investigate and prosecute those issues.	2013 – 2014
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategic Framework for Plan Development for Children (Child 21) policy.	2014
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the types of activities carried out by children working in construction in order to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2014
	Take steps to ensure that all children have access to schools and do not face prohibitive costs for education-related expenses.	2010 – 2014
	Provide necessary resources to help more out-of-school youth access ALS so they can complete their basic education.	2011 – 2014
	Assess the impact that existing social programs may have on child labor.	2011 – 2014

In 2014, the Russian Federation made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government committed to assessing and improving working conditions in its 2014 Employment Plan. The Government continued the implementation of a social protection mechanism defined by the Social Contract law to financially support vulnerable citizens, including child trafficking victims. The Government also continued support of the Russian Children in Need Fund, which aims to rehabilitate disadvantaged and homeless children.

However, children in Russia are engaged in child labor, including in work on the street, and in the worst forms of child labor, including being used in the production of pornography. Laws do not prohibit possession of child pornography or benefiting from its proceeds. In addition, Russia continues to lack a mechanism to coordinate nationwide efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, and it has no social programs specifically targeting this goal.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Russia are engaged in child labor, including in street work.(1-3) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including being used in the production of pornography.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Russia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(5)

Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2015.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,* activities unknown (1, 2, 7)
Industry	Construction,* activities unknown (7, 8)
Services	Street work, including collecting bottles and other waste,* washing cars,* street sweeping,* and vending* (1-3)
	Working at marketplaces,* activities unknown (2, 3)
	Dishwashing* (2, 3)
	Begging* (9, 10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in the production of pornography sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4, 11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3, 12-14)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

A source reported that, while child labor in agriculture, industry, and services exists, it is not widespread or common.(15)

Children in Russia, especially orphans, street children, and migrant children, continue to be used in the production of child pornography.(1-4, 11) Commercial sexual exploitation of children, especially in large cities, also remains a concern. Street children and migrant children from Ukraine and Moldova are the primary victims.(2, 3) In addition, children, both boys and girls, are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation internally from rural to urban centers, between regions, and transnationally.(10) Russia is also a destination country for children trafficked from abroad, including from Eastern Europe.(12, 14) Research found that the rates of both child trafficking and the use of children in the production of pornography have increased in recent years.(3, 4)

The Federal Law No. 3266-1 on Education only guarantees free public education for Russian citizens.(16) Migrant children who have entered the country illegally or irregularly lack the registration documents needed to access education and social services and as a result are often denied access to schools by regional authorities.(1, 2) Migrant children who do not attend school constitute the population most vulnerable to labor exploitation, and a study from 2013 estimates that there are currently between 40,000 and 60,000 such children in Russia.(3) Russian citizens who do not have registration documents, such as members of the Roma community, are also sometimes denied access to schools at the regional level, although there is no national law or policy requiring this practice.(1) Since 2003, asylum-seeking children between ages 6 and 12 have had access to schooling, although there are cases of children being denied access for various reasons, including lacking appropriate documents. Denied access was also reported for children with protective status, which is granted to certain categories of refugees and asylum seekers.(15) In 2014, the Russian Government added a special provision guaranteeing access to education for Ukrainian national minors fleeing the conflict in southeastern Ukraine. However, local NGOs have reported that some schools have denied these minors access to education due to lack of proper documentation and lack of capacity, especially for kindergarten.(15)

During the reporting period, news outlets reported, through a variety of media platforms, over a dozen cases of the use of children by combined Russian-separatist forces in the conflict in eastern Ukraine.(17, 18) One of these children stated that he had received arms in Russian-occupied Crimea before participating in the conflict in eastern Ukraine.(17) An additional two children stated that they had received training at a military base in Russian-occupied South Ossetia.(17) To date, these reports are unconfirmed by UN personnel.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Russia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 63 of the Labor Code (19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 265 of the Labor Code (19)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Government Decision No. 163; Article 265 of the Labor Code (19, 20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 37 of the Constitution of the Russian Federation; Article 127.2 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation; Article 4 of the Labor Code (19, 21, 22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 127.1 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation (22)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 134 and 240-242.2 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation (22)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 150-151 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation (22)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 22 of Federal Law No. 53-FZ on Military Conscription and Military Service (23)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	16	Article 35 of Federal Law No. 53-FZ on Military Conscription and Military Service (2, 23)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 19 of Federal Law No. 3266-1 on Education (16)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 5 of Federal Law No. 3266-1 on Education (16)

In October 2014, the Ministry of Internal Affairs prepared a draft federal law that would introduce criminal responsibility for using minors in begging. Article 151 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation currently assigns criminal responsibility only for involving minors in the act of begging, which in practice does not protect infants or minors with disabilities who are unable to actively beg themselves, but who may be used by adults as passive participants in begging.(24)

Research did not find evidence of laws or regulations to criminalize possessing child pornography or benefiting from its proceeds. In November 2014, the Criminal Law Committee of the State Duma recommended the adoption of a 2012 draft law that would define child pornography and criminalize its possession.(24-26) However, the law was not adopted during the reporting period.(27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Federal Labor and Employment Service (RosTrud) under the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection	Enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor, and conduct labor inspections.(2, 26) Provide employment services and unemployment assistance and services related to labor migration, as well as social assistance for socially vulnerable citizens, and regulate disputes between unions and employers.(28)
Prosecutor General's Office	Oversee the enforcement of laws relating to child labor under the Labor Code.(28) Coordinate joint inspections with RosTrud.(2) Manage the investigation of Trafficking in Persons cases and prosecute associated crimes.(3)
Office of the Children's Rights Ombudsman	Investigate violations of children's rights, monitor offices dealing with minors, and evaluate legislation affecting children.(29, 30)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforce criminal laws against forced child labor, trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities.(2, 11) Conduct and provide training to the police on handling human trafficking cases.(3)
Investigative Committee (SledCom)	Investigate cases of forced labor and human trafficking, including cases involving minors and cases involving Russian nationals abroad.(28, 31-33)

Law enforcement agencies in Russia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the most recent year for which data are available, RosTrud had a total of 2,909 staff positions, including vacant positions (compared to a total of 3,233 positions in 2012). The number included 1,039 labor inspectors for legal issues and 1,105 labor inspectors for occupational safety.(15) According to RosTrud, the number of labor inspectors was insufficient to effectively enforce labor laws.(2)

In 2013, RosTrud conducted 2,850 inspections that found 1,580 child labor violations. Child labor violations included failing to provide obligatory medical checks (30 percent), employing minors in prohibited jobs (17 percent), engaging minors in overtime and holiday work (14 percent), and denying obligatory annual leave (10 percent).(15) Labor inspectors issued 478 obligatory compliance instructions and brought administrative action against 468 employers and companies, resulting in fines totaling approximately $183,000. In addition, 24 cases were brought to the prosecutor's office.(15) Research did not find information regarding whether inspectors made unannounced visits or on the type or quality of inspections. In addition, although evidence suggests that children who are victims of labor violations were referred to appropriate social care, research did not find the existence of formal referral mechanisms between RosTrud and social service providers.(30)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the most recent year for which data are available, 146 persons were convicted for crimes against minors under Articles 242.1 and 242.2 of the Criminal Code, which are related to the use of children for the production of pornography.(28, 34) The Government registered five child trafficking offenses for the first 4 months in 2013.(12) Based on unofficial sources, in 2012, the most recent period for which data are available, human trafficking prosecutions under Article 127.1 represented a total of 21 child victims.(35) However, complete data on the number of investigators employed to enforce criminal laws on all forms of child labor were not available. Information on the number and quality of investigations and the number of prosecutions, convictions, and implemented penalties related to criminal laws on all forms of child labor was also unavailable.

The Ministry of Internal Affairs conducts regular training to guide officers in handling human trafficking cases. The Prosecutor General's Office and the Investigative Committee also conduct periodic training on this topic.(3)

Although evidence suggests that children who are victims of crimes were referred to appropriate social care, including through informal referral mechanisms for trafficking victims operated by NGOs in Moscow and St. Petersburg, research did not find the existence of formal referral mechanisms between law enforcement agencies and social service providers.(11, 30) In addition, human trafficking cases involving illegal migrants often resulted in the detention, arrest, and deportation of the victims for violation of migration regulations. In cases in which assistance was rendered to victims of human trafficking, there was no formal referral mechanism, and victims were often transferred to homeless shelters or crisis centers for women.(3)

In addition to the enforcement of laws by criminal investigators, the Government has established guidelines for placing domain names, URLs, and network addresses into a register of banned sites if they contain materials with pornographic images of minors or invite minors to perform as actors in pornographic shows.(2) The information on websites with unlawful content is accepted from private persons, government agencies, and local government bodies. After a review, selected websites are entered into the register, which allows for their blocking.(28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Russia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Strategy 2012 – 2017*	Covers issues such as child protection, accessibility of quality education, equal opportunities for children in need of special care by the Government, and the development of a child rights protection system.(30)
Concept of Children's Information Security*	Aims to coordinate legislation within the scope of protecting children against harmful information.(2)
Employment Plan 2014*†	Outlines the labor market challenges in Russia and commits Russia to new policies and programs to address these challenges. Includes commitments to assess and improve working conditions in Russia and provide vocational and employment programs targeted at youth.(36)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Russia funded and participated in programs that may have an impact on child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Contract‡	Social protection mechanism to provide financial support to vulnerable Russian citizens, including victims of child trafficking and low-income families. Established by Federal Law No. 258 FZ of December 25, 2012.(3)
Russian Children in Need Fund*‡	$21 million, Government-run program to rehabilitate orphaned, disadvantaged, and homeless children through the provision of mobile crisis centers, psychological centers, and social and physical rehabilitation services.(2, 30, 37)
Shelters for Victims of Human Trafficking*†‡	IOM-funded shelters in St. Petersburg and Moscow operated in partnership with the Russian Red Cross in St. Petersburg and the Russian Orthodox Church in Moscow. Provide accommodation and psychological counseling for victims of human trafficking.(3, 11, 38) In St. Petersburg, the municipal government provides the facilities in which the shelter is housed.(11, 38) In Moscow, the IOM has partnered with the municipality to complement the church shelter with designated spaces for adult human trafficking victims at a city-run homeless shelter and for child victims at a municipal youth shelter. Government support of the Moscow shelter began in 2014.(3, 11, 38)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Russia.

Research found no evidence of any programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. In particular, the Government has noted that there is a lack of shelters for human trafficking victims, and the provision of assistance to victims is not standardized.(3, 11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Rwanda made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Rwanda secured funding to continue the Rwanda Demobilization and Reintegration Commission Child Rehabilitation Program, provided funding for districts to implement child protection programs, created District Steering Committees on Child Labor in all 30 districts, and adopted a national anti-trafficking plan of action. The Government also participates in and implements several additional programs to combat the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. However, children in Rwanda are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service. Gaps exist in the Government's enforcement of laws on child labor, and social programs lack adequate safeguards to protect children engaged in domestic service.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Rwanda are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Rwanda.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked internally in the country for domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation, and are trafficked externally for agricultural labor.(18, 23)

Although education is free and compulsory, in practice, the costs of uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees may preclude some families from sending their children to school.(17, 25-28)

Rwandan law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. Children working in non-contractual employment do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in contractual employment.(29, 36, 37)

In addition to national-level regulations on child labor, the Kigali City Security Council also has guidelines on child labor.(31) These guidelines prohibit the employment of children in Kigali City as domestic servants, street beggars, porters, bar attendants, hairdressers, and dancers in clubs. It also prohibits using children to make pornographic productions, to sell drugs, and to replace their parents in paid employment.(31) In addition, the guidelines require local authorities to raise awareness of child labor and calls for a census at the local cell administrative level to estimate the prevalence of child domestic workers.(31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA)	Enforce labor laws, including laws on child labor.(8, 38-40)
Rwandan National Police (RNP)	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor and operate a free hotline to report incidents of gender-based violence and child abuse, including child labor.(8, 41, 42)
Child Protection Unit	Investigate cases of child abuse, including the use of children in commercial sexual exploitation. Located within the Commission for Criminal Investigations of the RNP.(8, 43, 44)
Directorate for Anti-Gender-Based Violence	Assist victims of the worst forms of child labor through anti-gender-based violence officers. Located within the RNP, at each of Rwanda's 78 police stations.(12)
Directorate General of Immigration and Emigration	Receive referrals for trafficking cases and employ an anti-trafficking specialist.(42) Verify that children transported across the border are traveling with the permission of their parents or guardians.(8, 45)

Law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA) employed 30 labor inspectors (1 per district) who work with the Rwandan National Police (RNP), under supervision of district authorities.(17, 38-40) At the national level, MIFOTRA employed two chief labor inspectors, who are supervised by the Directorate General in charge of labor.(12, 38) According to MIFOTRA, one labor inspector per district is not enough to conduct all of the necessary inspections.(46) The MIFOTRA reviews the performance of its labor inspectors every 6 months and provides them with training twice a year on identifying and investigating child labor violations.(12, 17) Labor inspectors hold quarterly district trainings on child labor issues for employers and local authorities.(12, 42) MIFOTRA provided labor inspectors with laptops and funds for Internet service. In addition, half of all labor inspectors received motorcycles and funds for fuel and maintenance.(12) Despite these improvements, MIFOTRA reports that many labor inspectors still lack transportation to carry out inspections.(42, 46) MIFOTRA also requires an annual report on activities from its labor inspectors and audits the disbursement of labor inspection funds to ensure that it matches appropriations.(12)

Rwanda

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Inspections may be conducted without prior notice, and labor inspectors may issue warnings, which require correction of the violating condition within 7 days. Otherwise, the labor inspector may ask the authorities to temporarily close the establishment under investigation.(38) Law No. 13/2009 permits labor inspectors to enter workplaces only during normal business hours, even though ILO C. 81, which Rwanda has ratified, notes that inspectors should be able to enter workplaces at all times.(47) Labor inspection reports do not contain information related to the worst forms of child labor.(48) Data regarding child labor inspections, citations, and penalties are not publicly available.(17, 46)

Labor law enforcement agencies at the district level have also been reported to take actions to combat child labor.(49) Performance contracts signed between the President and district authorities also include targets for reducing child labor and increasing school enrollment.(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The RNP operates an anti-trafficking unit within the force's Interpol directorate that is staffed with 15 full-time officers.(12, 17, 18, 50) However, RNP officials report that the unit has insufficient officers to address the problem.(8) In addition, evidence suggests that some RNP staff members are not sensitive to the needs of child trafficking victims, and that some children found engaged in commercial sexual exploitation and market vending were detained in transit centers for months.(12) Some officials also lack awareness and training about the laws on internal trafficking.(8, 50) With support from Interpol, the RNP operates an office at the Kigali International Airport to combat trafficking in persons and it plans to open 13 more offices at border crossings.(12, 51) During the reporting period, the RNP and the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion (MIGEPROF) expanded training and outreach on trafficking in persons to encourage collaboration with investigators.(17)

The Government continued to operate a network of 15 "One-Stop" centers in hospitals and district capitals for victims of gender-based violence and trafficking, including those who have experienced child domestic servitude, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor. These centers provide medical exams, counseling, legal assistance, short-term shelter, and police assistance.(18) In 2014, the RNP referred some child domestic workers and children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation to "One-Stop" centers for police assistance, legal aid, shelter, medical exams, and counseling.(12, 17) Within villages, citizens can report instances of child labor to the RNP or to a local volunteer officer in charge of social affairs. If the officer cannot resolve the problem, it may be referred to the village leader, who in turn may contact the RNP.(42) Although the RNP operates a free hotline staffed by social workers to report incidences of gender-based violence and child abuse, including child labor, it is unknown how many of these complaints were related to child labor.(18, 41, 42)

From June 2013 to June 2014, the RNP arrested and referred 10 suspected human traffickers for prosecution, of which three were convicted under Articles 252 or 255 of the Penal Code and four were acquitted. Between June 2014 and February 2015, the RNP arrested 24 individuals suspected of being involved in human trafficking; of these, 6 were prosecuted, 4 convicted, and 2 acquitted.(18) Research did not find information about the punishments assigned in these cases, and it is unclear how many of these cases, if any, involved child trafficking crimes. The cases against 21 individuals remain pending judicial review or prosecution.(18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Advisory Committee on Child Labor	Coordinate government efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, review child labor laws, advocate for the inclusion of child labor policies in national development plans, oversee the implementation of child labor interventions, and conduct field visits to assess the prevalence of child labor and to raise awareness of child labor. Meets quarterly and includes representatives from MIFOTRA; the Ministry of Youth; the Ministry of Education (MINEDUC); the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion (MIGEPROF); the Ministry of Local Government (MINILOC); the Ministry of Sports and Culture; the RNP; the National Human Rights Commission; the Rwanda Demobilization and Reintegration Commission (RDRC); trade unions; the ILO; UNICEF; the Private Sector Federation; and Winrock International.(12, 46, 51)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Consultative Forum on Human Trafficking, Drug Abuse, and Gender-Based Violence	Enable national-level discussion of and coordination of efforts to address human trafficking. Chaired annually by the First Lady of Rwanda and comprises parliamentarians; representatives of MIGEPROF, the Ministry of Justice (MINIJUST), MINEDUC, and the RNP; NPPA prosecutors; NGOs; and faith-based and civil society leaders. Convened for the first time and adopted a national anti-trafficking action plan in October 2014; MIGEPROF was selected to coordinate implementation of the plan.(18)
National Commission for Children (NCC)	Monitor, promote, and advocate for children's rights; develop action plans to protect children from abuse and exploitation. Overseen by MIGEPROF and supported by a board of directors and an advisory council of 14 institutions.(12, 52-54)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Rights	Coordinate and assess the progress of the Integrated Child Rights Policy (ICRP) and Strategic Plan in Rwanda. Mandated to meet at least once a year. Includes members from MIGEPROF; the Ministry of Health; MINEDUC; MINILOCO; MINIJUST; and the Ministry of Finance and Economic Planning.(8, 12, 35)
National Commission on Orphans and Vulnerable Children	Monitor and protect orphans and vulnerable children in Rwanda. Composed of the NCC, MIFOTRA, MIGEPROF, and UNICEF.(8, 45, 55)
Child Labor Committees	Monitor incidents of child labor nationwide, through 149 local committees.(12, 51) In the case of Gender-Based Violence Committees, operate at the district level. In the case of Child Protection Committees, identify and report cases of child rights violations at the district, sector, and cell levels.(56, 57)
Friends of the Family ( Incuti Z'Umuryango ) Committees	Support child welfare and protection, combat child labor, and counter trafficking in persons through the creation of the national-to-village level reporting and social assistance structure.(17, 18)
Kigali City Council Task Force	Coordinate activities to combat child labor in the districts of Gasabo, Kicukiro, and Nyarugenge.(15, 57, 58)

The National Commission for Children (NCC) employed 19 staff members and coordinated child protection activities on a daily basis.(12, 52, 54, 55) The NCC appointed 10 National Protection Officers and 48 social workers responsible for child labor issues during the reporting period. Additionally, 320 child labor focal point volunteers were appointed at the village level to support these staff members.(17) During the reporting period, the NCC sent psychologists and social workers to 3 of Rwanda's 30 districts to address child labor.(51) The NCC had a budget of $2.4 million for 2014, which included $1.5 million earmarked for districts to implement child protection programs.(51) In 2014, District Steering Committees on Child Labor were created in all 30 districts.(59)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Rwanda has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor (2013) and 5-Year Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Aims to prevent at-risk children from entering exploitative child labor; withdraws children engaged in exploitative labor through the provision of education; rehabilitates former child laborers through counseling, life skills training, and medical care; raises community awareness on child labor; and establishes monitoring and evaluation mechanisms on child labor. Government committed more than $4.2 million to implement activities listed in the Policy and Plan.(8, 60-62)
Integrated Child Rights Policy and Strategic Plan (2011–2016)	Addresses all children's issues, including child labor. Guided by the principles that deem abuse, exploitation, and violence against children intolerable, and that the Government and caretakers are accountable for the well-being of children.(35, 63) In the case of the ICRP, prohibits child labor, and in the case of the Strategic Plan, provides $9,000 to MIFOTRA to develop timebound programs to eliminate child labor.(35, 63)
National Policy Against Gender-Based Violence (2011–2016)	Acknowledges that orphans and vulnerable children, including child laborers, are at increased risk of gender-based violence and outlines measures to provide assistance to such groups. Implemented by the Gender-Based Violence Technical Working Committee under the MIGEPROF.(64, 65)
National Employment Policy (2007)	Includes a set of integrated strategies for employment promotion and generation. Provides for youth employment programs, which include child labor issues.(46, 66)
Vision 2020 (2000)*	Aims to transform agriculture into a productive, market-oriented, and high-value sector. Calls for the protection of children and provides educational opportunities to children who drop out of secondary school.(42, 67)
National Social Protection Strategy (2011)*	Defines social protection and outlines social development activities to assist poor households, such as providing vulnerable children with grants and free education.(68)

Policy	Description
National Youth Policy (2005)	Seeks to address concerns facing youth, including economic exploitation and education.(42, 69)
12YBE Policy*	Provides free education for 12 years and aims to improve access to education by hiring new teachers and building schools.(28)
Economic Development and Poverty Reduction Strategy (2013–2018)	Describes the social policies and programs necessary to promote growth and reduce poverty. Supports access to education and seeks to eliminate child labor.(70)
National TVET Policy (2008)*	Aims to establish a well-trained and adaptable workforce and provides educational alternatives to children who have dropped out of school.(71)
Girls' Education Strategic Plan (2009–2013)	Aims to improve access and quality of girls' education to prevent girls from engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(72)
UNDAF Rwanda (2013–2018)	Enhances government efforts to protect children from exploitation.(73)
Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2014)†	Aims to improve government efforts to combat human trafficking through awareness raising, research, poverty reduction strategies, improved service provision, enforcement, and collaboration. Developed by the Consultative Forum on Human Trafficking, Drug Abuse, and Gender-Based Violence.(18, 74)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

It is unclear how the Integrated Child Rights Policy (ICRP) and its Strategic Plan are coordinated with the National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor and the 5-Year Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. In addition, current budget allocations may not be sufficient for the full implementation of the ICRP.(64)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Rwanda funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Rwanda Demobilization and Reintegration Commission (RDRC) Child Rehabilitation Program and Center	RDRC-operated center in the Musanze District of the Northern Province for former child combatants returning from the Democratic Republic of the Congo that raises awareness of child soldier issues and provides a 3-month course to former child soldiers, which includes counseling, education, recreational activities, and vocational training.(11, 12, 35, 50) In 2014, the Government secured funding from the World Bank to continue the project.(75) The third stage of the RDRC program plans to help 3,300 child ex-combatants demobilize and reintegrate.(72)
Rwanda Education Alternatives for Children in Tea-Growing Areas (2013–2017)	USDOL-funded, $5 million, 4-year project implemented by Winrock International targets 4,090 children engaged in or at risk of entering exploitative child labor in Rwanda with a focus on the tea sector, and 1,320 vulnerable households for sustainable livelihoods promotion. With support from MIFOTRA, aims to train labor inspectors on child labor issues and develop and eventually operate a mobile-phone child labor monitoring system.(76)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (2011–2016)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor in Rwanda.(77)
Child Labor Awareness Raising‡	MIFOTRA program to raise public awareness of the worst forms of child labor through radio shows, television announcements, and skits. Also implements awareness-raising campaigns to combat commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking in persons.(12, 18)
Friends of the Family ( Incuti Z'Umuryango ) Program	Government social assistance and reporting program launched in November 2014 to support child welfare and counter child trafficking and child labor. Trains volunteers to provide social services to families and children, as well as connect at-risk families to government support programs, while reporting children at risk for trafficking or forced labor to district governments and the RNP. Intended to identify child domestic workers and those subjected to other forms of forced labor. Establishing monitoring committees at the village, cell, sector, district, and national levels.(18)
Counter-Trafficking Program in Rwanda	Government program, with support from the IOM, to raise awareness of human trafficking, train law enforcement officials and immigration officers to identify cases of human trafficking, and establish victim assistance and referral mechanisms.(78)

Program	Description
Positive Parenting to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Drug Abuse‡	MIGEPROF campaign launched in November 2014 that partners with churches and civil society organizations to teach parents and community leaders to recognize risk factors for human trafficking and to report identified victims.(18)
Eastern Africa Police Chiefs Cooperation Organization	Government program to combat human trafficking by collaborating with 11 East African countries to foster regional cooperation and build the capacity of East African law enforcement authorities.(79, 80)
Vision 2020 Umurenge Program*‡	Government cash and in-kind transfer program for child-headed households and street children.(8, 68, 81, 82)
Gitagata Center*‡	Government-operated center for former street children in the Bugesera District that provided education support, vocational training, and psychosocial counseling to street children, and when able to do so, reunites them with their families.(12, 83)
One Cup of Milk per Child Program*	EU-funded school feeding program that provides milk to children in nursery and primary schools.(55, 84, 85)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Rwanda.

In 2012, MIGEPROF announced that it would begin phasing out Rwanda's orphanages and integrating children with families across the country. In 2013, MIGEPROF closed four orphanages.(8, 12, 86, 87) It is too early to determine the impact that the closing of childcare institutions will have on child labor. The Government aimed to place all children with families and transform existing orphanages into institutions to support children and families in 2014, but it was unable to meet this goal.(88)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Saint Lucia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Saint Lucia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government ratified the UNC CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict. The Government funded training workshops on human trafficking for Government and NGO officials and continued to fund education initiatives, including after-school programs, transportation subsidies, and school meals. However, although research is limited, children in Saint Lucia are reported to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Saint Lucia also continues to face legislative gaps. The law does not fully protect children from illicit activities, and the Government has not adopted a list of hazardous activities prohibited for children. Further, Saint Lucia has not conducted research to assess the nature and scope of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although limited, research shows that children in Saint Lucia are engaged in child labor in agriculture and are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Saint Lucia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	7.5
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	99.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	8.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from MICS 4 Survey, 2012.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Agriculture, harvesting bananas* (6-8)
	Selling food and handcrafts in markets* and street vending* (3, 6, 7)
Services	Washing cars* (3)
	Domestic work, cooking, laundry, and other household activities* (3, 9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (1, 2, 10)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Limited evidence indicates that children are sometimes engaged in commercial sexual exploitation with the knowledge or encouragement of parents in situations of financial need.(1) Saint Lucia lacks data on the prevalence of child labor, and especially on the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Saint Lucia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2014, the Government of Saint Lucia ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.(12)

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 122 of the Labor Code; Article 122 of the Labor Code Amendment Act (13, 14)

Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 4 of the Constitution; Article 6 of the Labor Code (13, 16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 5 of the Counter-Trafficking Act No. 7 (17)

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	N/A†
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 27 of the Education Act (19)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Education Act (19)

* No conscription (20)

† No standing military (20)

Article 23 of the Occupational Health and Safety Act prohibits the employment of persons under age 18 in industrial undertakings, which may include working with machinery and in extreme temperatures.(6, 15, 21) However, Article 23 states that young persons who have attained the age of 16 but not yet 18 may engage in these activities if they are supervised as part of an apprenticeship or vocational training program.(15) This provision may expose these children to hazardous work. In addition, research found no evidence that the Government has determined hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children working in non-industrial sectors.(22, 23)

Research found no evidence that Saint Lucia has laws that prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, such as drug trafficking.(11, 23)

Saint Lucia does not have a standing military; the police force is responsible for the security of the country. The minimum age for recruitment to the police force is 18.(7, 20)

Article 16 of the Education Act guarantees free tuition for children attending public institutions. However, other unspecified charges may be applied if approved by the Education Minister.(19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry for Education, Human Resource Development, and Labor	Enforce laws on child labor, in part through labor inspections conducted by its Department of Labor.(7, 11, 23)
Royal Saint Lucia Police Force	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Contains a Vulnerable Persons Unit that investigates cases of child labor, abuse, and neglect, and works in collaboration with the Division of Human Services.(6, 22, 24) Uses a specific manual for the investigation of crimes related to children.(7)
Office of Gender Relations	Provide referrals to trafficking victims for health and legal services.(10)

Law enforcement agencies in Saint Lucia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, Saint Lucia's seven labor inspectors conducted general labor inspections, during which they looked for indications of child labor. Reports indicate that labor inspectors did not receive specific training on child labor.(3) No information is available on the number of inspections carried out during the reporting period; however, no child labor violations were found during inspections. Inspectors are allowed to conduct unannounced inspections.(3) Inspectorates recommend penalties and the Labor Commissioner assesses the fines.(3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

No information is available on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. The Government funded a training workshop, led by the International Organization for Migration on human trafficking, for 32 participants from 20 government ministries and NGOs. During the first quarter of 2014, 130 police officers were trained in human trafficking laws and on how to coordinate and address trafficking-in-persons' issues with other organizations.(2)

During the reporting period, the Government initiated two sex trafficking cases, and in March 2014, the Government identified four potential trafficking victims, a significant increase from 2013 in which there were no cases initiated or victims identified.(2) No information is available regarding whether the Government issued penalties in these cases. (3, 10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Health, Wellness, Human Services and Gender Relations	Coordinate investigations of child labor cases in collaboration with the Royal Saint Lucia Police Force, using established protocols.(7)
Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinate the detection and referral of trafficking-in-persons cases among law enforcement, social service, and immigration officials pursuant to the Counter-Trafficking Act.(7, 17) Currently, developing a national plan of action to combat trafficking in persons with the participation of the International Organization for Migration.(10)
Office of Gender Relations	Provide referrals to trafficking victims for health and legal services.(9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Saint Lucia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
ILO Decent Work Country Program for Saint Lucia (2010-2015)	Promotes economic development and legislative strengthening in Saint Lucia that is consistent with international labor standards, including those on child labor.(25)

There are no policies that address the worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Saint Lucia funded programs that may have an impact on child labor. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Education programming*‡	Government-funded education program that fosters school attendance by providing a book bursary, school meal program, and transit subsidy program at most secondary schools.(7)
Ministry of Social Transformation, Youth and Sports after-school programming*‡	Ministry of Social Transformation, Youth and Sports program that improves academic performance and maintains school attendance among underprivileged children between the ages of 8 and 16 years by providing after-school activities, including assistance with homework and various recreational activities.(3, 24)
Shelters for trafficking victims*‡	Government shelters that provide assistance for trafficking victims, including male children.(2)
Girls' shelter*‡	Government-funded NGO shelter for girls.(2)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Saint Lucia.

No information is available on whether the Government-funded NGO shelter assisted trafficking victims during the reporting year.(2)

Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address children found in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Saint Lucia (Table 9).

In 2014, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government participated in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to engage on policies and programs related to child labor and it also continued to implement social programs that target children who may be vulnerable to child labor. However, although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children are engaged in child labor, including in domestic work, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Gaps remain in the legal framework. The minimum age for hazardous work falls below international standards; and although the use of children for the trafficking of drugs is prohibited, there is no law to prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children are engaged in child labor, including in domestic work. There is also limited evidence that children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(3)
 Data were unavailable from Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2015.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of marijuana* (5)
Services	Domestic work* and begging* (1, 6, 7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (5, 8, 9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182

There is a lack of data and research on the prevalence of child labor and its worst forms in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.(10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

* No conscription (13, 14)

The minimum age for hazardous work is 14. There are no regulations defining or prohibiting hazardous occupations or conditions for children under the age of 18 beyond prohibitions against working at night and in industrial undertakings.(1, 16, 17) The Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act prohibits the use of children in the trafficking of illicit goods, but not the use of children in the production of illicit drugs.(12, 17, 18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforce child labor laws and refer victims to appropriate social services.(1)
Royal Police Force	Make criminal arrests, including those involving the worst forms of child labor; specifically address human trafficking through the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit; refer victims to appropriate social services.(1)
Ministry of Social Mobilization	Maintain Child Protection Unit, which includes Child Protection Officers who report cases of child abuse.(7)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took action to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Department of Labor has seven labor inspectors; however, there are no officers dedicated to child labor issues.(7, 19) In 2014, no information is available on the number of inspections carried out in 2014.(2, 20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

For 2014, there is no information available on the number of criminal investigators; however, a report indicates that there are no investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws solely on the worst forms of child labor.(19) The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit (ATIPU) provided trafficking awareness training to more than 60 officials in related agencies and to members of other units of the police department, immigration officials, and labor officials.(19) The ATIPU did not participate in any additional training. The ATIPU investigated three cases during the reporting period. Two out of the three cases involved adults, and information is still pending on the third case.(20) No trafficking prosecutions were made for the three cases.(20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established a coordination mechanism on trafficking, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons	Develop a national plan to address human trafficking, coordinate the collection of data among government agencies, establish policies to enable government agencies to work with NGOs to prevent trafficking and assist victims, and provide training to all relevant government officials and authority figures; chaired by the Prime Minister.(1, 12, 21)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of any policies to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, in September 2014, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines participated in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. Held in Bridgetown, Barbados, these discussions promoted the exchange of information on policies and programs that seek to formalize the informal sector, uphold workers' rights, and prevent and eliminate child labor.(22, 23)

The National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2013–2015) has not yet been passed by the Parliament. However, civil society members argue that the plan is not in place, while the Government insists that it is in force.(20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines funded and participated in programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 7)

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description

Supplementary Feeding Program*‡	Government program that provides free meals to preschool and primary school students from low-income families.(1, 25)

Street Children Rehabilitation Program*‡	Government program that returns children living or working on the street to school.(6, 27)
Children Against Poverty Program*‡	Government annual 2-week program that addresses gaps in the school system and breaks the cycle of intergenerational poverty.(6, 27, 28)
Crisis Center Shelter*‡	Government program providing short-term shelter that may also be used to house human trafficking victims, including children. Number of children assisted by this shelter is unknown.(1, 8)
Foster Care Program*‡	Government program that provides meals, transportation to school, and school fees for 140 school children.(7)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.

As there is limited evidence of a problem, there appears to be little need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines (Table 8).

Samoa

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Samoa made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed the Occupational Safety and Health Regulations Act that improves the legal framework for identification, assessment, and control of hazards in the workplace.

Government ministries also participated in the National Forum on Child Labor, formulating a task force to review legislation related to the enforcement of international child labor conventions. However, children in Samoa are engaged in child labor, including in street vending. The Government lacks legislation that specifically and comprehensively describes the hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children. The law does not define or specify a minimum age for light work. In addition, there was no publicly available information to confirm that criminal law enforcement agencies made efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, and the Government did not implement any programs to address child labor in the sectors in which it is prevalent.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Samoa are engaged in child labor, including in street vending. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Samoa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(5)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2015.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting, harvesting, and gathering coconuts,* other unspecified fruit,* and unspecified nuts* (1, 2, 7)
	Tending domestic animals* (1, 2, 7)
Services	Domestic work* (1, 2, 7)
	Street vending (1, 2, 4, 7, 8)
	Garbage scavenging* (9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or extent of the problem is unknown.

In 2014, the ILO conducted a survey on child labor in street vending in Samoa; it is currently finalizing the report. However, the Government of Samoa lacks comprehensive, recent research to determine the full nature and extent of child labor in all relevant sectors.(10)

Traditional Samoan culture includes a system of service through which a village elder (matai) may compel others to perform work in service to the family or the community.(2) Limited evidence indicates that in some villages it is common to require children to work on village farms.(2, 7) Research did not identify the nature of this work, nor whether children perform it willingly. Children of primary school age have been observed selling goods and food during school hours and into the night.(1, 3) Child street vendors work in Apia, Samoa's capital, and a few other locations, including the international airport.(1, 2, 9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Samoa has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓

	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 51 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (11)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 51 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (11)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article 51 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (11)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 8 of the Constitution of the Independent State of Western Samoa; Article 18 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Section 157 of the Crimes Act (11, 12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 155-157 of the Crimes Act (13)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 73-74, 82, and 157 of the Crimes Act (1, 13)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A†
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	N/A†
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Education Act 2009 (14)
Free Public Education	No

† No standing military (15)

In 2014, the Government of Samoa passed the Occupational Safety and Health Regulations Act that contains some provisions for the identification, assessment, and control of workplace hazards and hazardous substances.(16, 17) However, this Act does not specifically discuss the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children. The Labor Employment and Relations Act prohibits the employment of a child under age 18 in any occupation or in any worksite under working conditions that are harmful or likely to be harmful to a child's health or morals. It also specifies that children must not operate dangerous machinery.(11) The Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL) has drafted a list to more clearly and comprehensively define the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, but this list was not approved during the reporting period.(18) Currently, legislation is not specific enough to facilitate effective enforcement of hazardous work prohibitions and the removal of children from these activities. (1, 10) There remains no minimum age or definition for light work in Samoan labor law, which is inconsistent with international standards.(8)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although section 82 of the Crimes Act prescribes a penalty of up to seven years imprisonment for crimes related to the production of child pornography, this section of the law defines a child as a person under the age of 16. As a result of this definition, the law does not effectively bar the use, procurement, or offering of children ages 16 and 17 for the production of pornography.(3, 13) Research also found no evidence of laws banning the use, procurement, or offering of a child for illicit activities.

The Education Act stipulates that a child under age 15 cannot be involved in work of any kind at any time during which this work would interfere with the child's school attendance, participation in school activities, or educational development. However, the Act only requires children to attend school from ages 5 to 14 or until they have completed the work of Year 8, whichever occurs sooner.(14) As children cannot legally work until age 15, but complete compulsory education at age 14, children of this age may be particularly vulnerable to involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL)	Investigate potential child labor law violations in response to complaints. Refer cases to the Ministry of Police (MOP) and the Office of the Attorney General for enforcement.(1)
Ministry for Women, Community, and Social Development	Assist MCIL investigations when called upon, based on a mandate to protect children, including those working on the street.(1, 18)
Ministry of Education, Sports, and Culture	Assist MCIL investigations when called upon.(1, 18)
Ministry of Police (MOP)	Enforce criminal laws with respect to the worst forms of child labor.(1)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecute criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor.(1)

Law enforcement agencies in Samoa took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL) employed 11 inspectors and 2 contract officers responsible for investigating complaints related to violations of labor law, including those involving children.(1, 18) Inspectors participated in two desensitization workshops on child labor conducted by the ILO in partnership with MCIL. One MCIL representative also attended a course on eliminating hazardous child labor in agriculture at the ILO International Training Center.(18)

Labor inspectors are authorized to conduct an inspection in any place of employment and have the option to enter unannounced if they judge that prior notice will bias the inspection results.(11) During the reporting period, MCIL received 121 industrial grievances and took corrective action in 75 of these cases. MCIL also conducted random and routine labor inspections in addition to those driven by complaints.(18) Inspectors did not uncover any child labor law violations, and no child labor cases were prosecuted during the reporting period.(18) Research found no evidence of a referral mechanism to ensure that children identified in situations of child labor are provided with appropriate social services.(16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on efforts to enforce criminal laws relevant to the worst forms of child labor, including the number and training of investigators and the number of investigations conducted. There were no prosecutions or convictions for violations related to the worst forms of child labor in 2014.(1, 16)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate government efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms. During the National Child Labor Forum in July 2014, participants developed plans for an informal, interagency task force to review legislation for compliance with conventions related to the worst forms of child labor. When formalized, the task force will be led by the Ministry of Education, Sports, and Culture and will include representatives from the Ministry of Commerce, Industry and Labor (MCIL), the Ministry of Women, Community and Social Development, and the Ministry of Police.(16, 18) Although Samoa does not have a documented child trafficking problem, the Samoa Interpol and Transnational Crime Unit monitors transnational crimes, including human trafficking.(20) Member agencies include the Ministry of Police, Samoa Immigration, the Prime Minister's Office, Central Bank of Samoa, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade, Customs Services, the Attorney General's Office, and the Ministry of Finance.(1, 20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Samoa has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for Children of Samoa (2010–2015)	Aims to address the needs of disadvantaged children, to provide child protection, and to combat poverty. Prioritizes the protection of child street vendors through awareness raising and increased enforcement of compulsory education laws.(8, 21)
Strategy for the Development of Samoa (2012–2016)*	Seeks to improve the quality of life for all Samoans through economic growth, social policies, improved infrastructure, and environmental protection. Access to education and training at all levels is targeted as a key outcome.(22) As part of the strategy, the Government has committed to developing a Medium-Term Expenditure Framework to ensure that education programs currently funded by international donors are sustainable.(22)
Samoa School Fee Relief Grant Scheme (SSFSGS)*	Aims to make school enrollment and attendance possible for children who are unable to pay school fees.(23) Provides free education to all primary school children enrolled in government schools and mission (church-run) schools. Also offers free education at the secondary level for students in government schools and reduced fees for secondary-level students in mission schools.(1) Covers approximately 99 percent of Samoan primary school students. Jointly funded by the Governments of Samoa, New Zealand, and Australia.(1)
Education Sector Plan (2013–2018)*	Calls for improved access to education for all children in early childhood, primary, and secondary school. Monitors the SSFSGS to ensure that children do not face financial barriers preventing them from attending school.(24)
UNDAF Pacific (2013–2017)	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island Countries and Territories: Cook Islands, Fiji, Federated States of Micronesia, Kiribati, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Marshall Islands, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.(25) In Samoa, aims to strengthen implementation of policies related to children and improve mechanisms to protect children from violence and exploitation.(26)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Samoa participated in programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Samoa Decent Work Country Program (2013-2016)*	ILO and Government program that promotes decent work in Samoa by focusing on three priority areas: legal reform and improved implementation of labor laws, including those related to child labor; increased access to information and employment services for youth; and strengthened capacity of trade unions. Includes an activity to assess potential challenges in extending the application of labor laws to the informal sector.(27)
Education Sector Program II (2006–2014)*	$14 million Government of Australia-funded program, with additional assistance from the Government of New Zealand and the Asian Development Bank, that aimed to create a more equitable and effective education system by improving curriculum, learning materials, the national assessment system, teacher training, and educational facilities.(1, 28)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

In 2014, representatives from various government agencies, trade unions, and NGOs participated in a 3-day National Child Labor and Trafficking Forum facilitated by the ILO. The objectives of the forum were to strengthen stakeholders' understanding of the concepts of child labor, hazardous work, and human trafficking; to review relevant international and national legal frameworks, policies, and programs; and to develop a plan of action to address child labor issues in Samoa.(29)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address child labor in the agricultural or service sectors, especially in street vending.

São Tomé and Príncipe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, São Tomé and Príncipe made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government established an Anti-Child Labor Committee to coordinate its efforts to combat child labor and continued to fund and participate in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. However, children in São Tomé and Príncipe are engaged in child labor, including in domestic and street work. The Government has not adopted legislation to protect all children under age 18 from hazardous occupations and agencies responsible for child labor law enforcement lacked sufficient resources to conduct inspections.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children in São Tomé and Príncipe are engaged in child labor, including in domestic service and street work.(1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in São Tomé and Príncipe.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	15.4 (6,218)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	68.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	13.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 2, 2000.(8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,* activities unknown (3, 5)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (1, 3)
Industry	Carpentry,* woodworking* (1-3)
	Domestic service (3, 5, 6)
Services	Working in shops (2, 3, 5)
	Street work, including begging (1-4, 6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

On the island of São Tomé, children are sent to work in another family's home. In this cultural practice, known as Mina Quia, the child conducts domestic activities including washing clothes, cooking, and taking care of other children in the home.(3) Some children are permitted to attend school as long as they are able to conduct their domestic duties. However, limited evidence suggests that many children who work in Mina Quia are victims of sexual abuse and domestic violence.(3)

There is a high loss of students between the first (first through fourth grade) and second level (fifth and sixth grade) of primary education. Evidence suggests that additional costs and a lack of schools that offer fifth and sixth grade are barriers to accessing education.(4, 9, 10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

São Tomé and Príncipe has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 128 of the Legal Regime of Individual Employment Conditions (11)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 129 of the Legal Regime of Individual Employment Conditions (11)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Articles 129 and 134 of the Legal Regime of Individual Employment Conditions (11)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 159 and 160 of the Penal Code (12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 160, 172, and 181 of the Penal Code (12)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 179-181 of the Penal Code (12)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 279, 280, and 289 of the Penal Code (12)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Legislation title unknown (13, 14)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	17	Legislation title unknown (13, 14)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	12	Article 6(1) of the Basic Education System Law (15, 16)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 55 of the Constitution; Article 6(1) of the Basic Education System Law (16, 17)

The Legal Regime of Individual Employment Conditions prohibits children under age 18 from engaging in heavy work carried out in unhealthy or dangerous conditions. It also prohibits underground and night work; however, this legislation is not specific enough to facilitate enforcement.(11) During the reporting period, the Government completed a draft list of hazardous activities for children and submitted it to the National Assembly for review; the list awaits final approval.(18, 19)

The Basic Education System Law establishes a mandatory 6 years of free primary education, which may be completed as early as age 12.(15, 16) Children who stop attending school before reaching the minimum age for employment are especially vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not in school but may not legally work either.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

São Tomé and Príncipe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Department of Labor Inspection within the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs*	Enforce labor laws, including those regarding child labor.(19) The Department of Labor Inspection utilizes small, ad hoc teams to investigate labor exploitation cases. Members are from Labor Inspection and other government agencies, including immigration officials, police officers, tax administrators, social workers, and members of the Social Security Administration.(5, 20)
The Prosecutor's Office and Criminal Police Investigation Unit within the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights*	Enforce criminal laws against child trafficking, forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities.(19, 20)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Government employed 15 labor inspectors. According to the Government, the number of inspectors is insufficient to deal with the full range of labor issues in São Tomé and Príncipe.(19) Inspectors did not receive training on child labor during the reporting period. According to the Department of Labor Inspection, it received a budget of only $16,000 in 2014; as a result, labor inspectors lack equipment and other resources to conduct daily operations.(19)

There were no child labor inspections conducted throughout the reporting period.(19) Although the inspection teams typically plan and announce labor inspections, they are permitted to conduct unannounced inspections. Inspections are typically site visits.(19)

Children found by the Department of Labor Inspection are referred to the Department of Social Services within the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs for counseling and integration into recreational and educational activities.(19, 20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Information on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor was not available. Investigators did not receive training on the relevant worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.(19) According to the Government, there were no reported cases, investigations, or prosecutions involving the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. Ministry of Justice and Human Rights officials can refer child victims to the Department of Social Services within the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs for counseling and integration into recreational and educational activities. (19, 20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Child Labor Committee*	Raise awareness to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2016 and all forms of child labor by 2020.(18) Composed of representatives from Government institutions and members of the ILO, NGOs, labor unions, Chamber of Commerce, and UNICEF.(19)
Directorate of Social Protection and Solidarity	Carry out support programs for families to ensure children attend school. Administer the Disadvantaged Mothers program ( Mães Carentadas ). Worked on the elaboration of a draft list of hazardous occupations for children.(3)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of São Tomé and Príncipe has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan for Education (2002-2015)*	Mobilizes relevant institutional stakeholders so that all children in every part of the country are able to benefit from a quality education. States that basic education is free and compulsory for 6 years.(21)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

During the reporting period, the Government finalized a draft National Action Plan on Child Labor, including the list of hazardous activities for children; the National Action Plan is under review by the National Assembly for approval.(19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of São Tomé and Príncipe funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Workshops for Awareness of the Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Ministry of Labor and Anti-Child Labor Committee program that held nationwide workshops to raise awareness on the worst forms of child labor. The workshops occurred during the first half of 2014 and participants included Government officials, teachers, trade union representatives, businessmen, and the general public.(18, 19) An ILO consultant initiated a study to assess the impact of the workshops on the worst forms of child labor.(19)
Support centers*‡	Government-funded centers run by NGOs with social work staff for approximately 250 at-risk children.(5, 19) The three centers are located in areas with high concentrations of poor families, orphans, and street children. The centers work with parents of at-risk children, provide stipends to families to keep children in school, and teach income-generating skills to children.(19)
Disadvantaged Mothers Program ( Mães Carenciadas )*‡	UNICEF and Government-funded program that provides microcredit loans to families in need. Also offers subsidies for children of mothers who are heads of household to attend school until age 15.(3, 20, 22)
XIV Government Program ( Programa do XIV Governo )*	Government program that seeks to improve the quality of education by providing more infrastructure, educational opportunities, and technical and professional training for students in primary and secondary education.(3)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of São Tomé and Príncipe.

In 2014, the Government worked with the ILO to conduct research on child labor in all sectors of the economy.(19)

Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address children engaged in domestic service or street work in São Tomé and Príncipe.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in São Tomé and Príncipe (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2014
	Ensure that hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children are specific enough to facilitate enforcement.	2009 – 2014
	Establish a compulsory education age that is equal to or higher than the minimum age for employment.	2014

In 2014, Senegal made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government convened a tripartite workshop to revise its laws concerning the worst forms of child labor, and the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP) designed a national database to collect data on human trafficking. However, children in Senegal continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging. Senegalese laws do not fully protect children from child labor, and enforcement agencies lack adequate resources to effectively carry out their work. Furthermore, the responsibility for enforcing child labor laws is spread over several ministries, and redundancy among interagency bodies impedes effective implementation of efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Senegal are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Senegal.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	10.3 (377,148)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	54.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	5.2

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In Senegal, it is a traditional practice to send boys to Koranic schools, called daaras, for education. However, instead of receiving an education, many students, known as talibés, are forced to beg by their teachers, known as marabouts.(2, 25, 28) The marabouts take the talibés' earnings and often beat those who fail to meet the daily quota.(8, 10, 25, 28) The talibés often live in overcrowded, unsanitary conditions; receive inadequate food and medical care; and are vulnerable to physical and sexual abuse.(25, 27) They typically come from rural areas within Senegal and from neighboring countries, sometimes as a result of human trafficking.(8, 25, 29, 30) A 2013 census of daaras in the Dakar region conducted by the Ministry of Justice found that almost 30,000 of the nearly 55,000 talibés are forced to beg.(7, 20, 31, 32) Both UNICEF and the Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, and Institutional Relations (MOL) stress the need to conduct assessments outside the Dakar region to determine whether an increase in daara enrollment has also led to an increase in forced begging.(7)

Access to education in Senegal may be limited by the unavailability of schools and the lack of resources, particularly in rural areas.(9, 18, 33) There are also not enough teachers in Senegal, and both students and teachers are frequently absent.(9, 33, 34) School-related fees and competing economic opportunities further undermine the incentives for poor families to send their children to school.(2, 9, 15) Additionally, students who do not have birth registration certificates are unable to take primary school exit exams.(34) Some girls reportedly leave school after being sexually harassed by school staff, or as a result of early pregnancy.(2, 9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Senegal has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 3 of Law N° 2004-37 (43)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of Law N° 2004-37; Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution (43, 44)

* No conscription (42)

The laws governing hazardous work, Ministerial Orders N° 3750 and 3751, allows boys under age 16 to work in underground mines and quarries if they are doing “light work,” such as sorting and loading ore, handling and hauling trucks within specified weight limits, or handling ventilation equipment.(17, 36, 37, 45).

Article 245 of the Penal Code prohibits begging, with the exception of individuals who solicit alms as part of their religious traditions. Law N° 2005-06 Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices and the Protection of Victims criminalizes profiting from forcing others to beg.(39, 40) There is currently a draft law to improve regulation of daaras, and a draft amendment to the Labor Code before the national assembly.(22, 25, 27, 46) The revision of the Labor Code includes an amendment raising the minimum age of work from 15 to 16, establishes harsher penalties for subjecting children to the worst forms of child labor, and extends protections of trade unions to children.(42, 47) Additionally, the Government convened a tripartite workshop to revise Ministerial Orders N° 3749–3751 concerning the worst forms of child labor.(16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, Professional Organizations, and Institutional Relations (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws in the formal sector, which include state-owned corporations, private enterprises, and cooperatives, through the Labor Inspections Office and by using social security inspectors.(7, 26, 30) In the case of the Child Labor Unit, maintain a database of child labor violations, and monitor and evaluate child labor activities.(3, 29)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce all laws, including those on child trafficking and forced labor, and prosecute violations.(7) Houses the Department of Correctional Education and Social Protection, which provides legal protection to children, organizes prevention initiatives, and oversees rehabilitation of children who are in conflict with the law. Operates protection centers, social rehabilitation centers, and multipurpose centers.(1)
Ministry of the Interior and Public Security	Arrest perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor.(7) In the case of the Children's Unit, specialize in child protection within the city of Dakar. In the case of the Vice Squad, combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children, particularly related to tourism.(1) In the case of the local police and national police, intervene in cases of forced labor and report cases involving children to the Children's Unit.(1, 7, 42)
Office of the President's Coordination Unit for the Fight Against Child Labor	Contribute to the creation and implementation of child protection policies, and develop a national system for collecting and disseminating data about vulnerable children.(1, 7)
Ministry of Women, Family, and Children	Contribute to the creation and implementation of child protection policies, and implement services to victims of exploitative child labor practices.(48) Operate a toll-free child protection line through which the public can report child labor abuses.(1, 8, 25, 49)

Law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the MOL employed 80 labor inspectors and investigators, which is insufficient to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country. None of the inspectors are dedicated solely to child labor issues and they are not required to check for child labor violations during inspections.(7) New inspectors received training in international labor standards, including child labor issues, and Regional Inspectorates received a refresher training from the Directorate General of Labor and Social Security during the reporting period. ILO officials; UNICEF; and the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children have indicated that the training is adequate.(3, 7) Article L. 197 of the Labor Code permits inspectors to conduct unannounced visits to establishments under their purview, which excludes private homes and private farms.(7, 35) Article L. 241 of the Labor Code grants inspectors the authority to assess penalties for minor offenses.(35, 42) However, inspectors rarely assess penalties due to a lack of detailed legislation on enforcement; judges typically determine penalties for violations.(47) Inspections are not proactively planned and are focused primarily on the formal sector, while most children are employed in the informal sector. No inspections were conducted during the reporting period for the purpose of enforcing child labor laws.(7) No violations were found, nor were there any penalties issued or fines collected during the reporting period. Child labor violations are resolved through conciliation at the Labor Inspectorate or are referred to a tribunal for judgment.(7) Government officials, UNODC, UNICEF, and local NGOs have stated that existing penalties may not be severe enough to deter employers from exploiting children in the workplace, particularly since penalties are rarely enforced.(7) The number of calls related to child labor made to the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children's hotline is not known.

Senegal

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Children's Unit within the police force employed three agents and its territorial jurisdiction was limited to Dakar. (1, 42) In addition, the Ministry of Education's daara inspectorate employs eight full-time staff, including two inspectors.(27) Although other police stations in Senegal are expected to report cases involving children to the Children's Unit, research found no evidence that this occurs regularly; the number of dedicated inspectors is also insufficient, given the scope of the problem.(1, 49) The National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP) partnered with other organizations to provide several training sessions for law enforcement and judicial officials, to improve the enforcement of Law N° 2005-06 Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices and the Protection of Victims.(20) However, the CNLTP did not have the resources to fund training sessions themselves.(47) During the reporting period, 100 boys were withdrawn from situations of forced begging and were reunited with their families.(7) Additionally, the Government convicted three individuals for human trafficking.(20) No statistics are available on the total number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, or penalties assessed as a result of these crimes. There is no formal referral mechanism between law enforcement and social service providers, although the Minors Brigade frequently places children in police custody in shelters.(50)

With few exceptions, daaras are not subject to government regulation or inspection, since they are private institutions. The Government has been reluctant to create legislation to regulate daaras for fear of losing the support of powerful Muslim leaders or appearing to attack Islamic education.(22, 25, 27, 46) The Government reports that existing laws are sufficient to effectively prosecute and punish individuals who use talibés for personal profit.(22, 25, 27, 46) However, the courts have had limited success in applying existing laws prohibiting forced begging, partly because some courts and law enforcement officials are not aware that applying Law N° 2005-06 is not in conflict with the Penal Code.(47) Prosecutions under Law N° 2005-06 have been almost nonexistent, despite widespread evidence of forced begging by talibés.(22, 25, 27, 46) Criminal laws related to child labor are rarely enforced in practice, especially those against forced begging.(3, 22, 49)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee Against Child Labor	Coordinate initiatives to address child labor, including the National Action Plan on the Prevention and Abolition of Child Labor in Senegal. Chaired by MOL and includes employers' organizations, 20 government ministries, religious leaders, international agencies, and governors of various regions.(7, 29, 49-52)
Inter-Ministerial Commission	Coordinate implementation of the National Strategy on Child Protection and its related action plan.(7)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons, in Particular Women and Children (CNLTP)	Report on human trafficking in Senegal; coordinate the implementation of the National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Persons and other efforts to prevent human trafficking, prosecute perpetrators, and protect victims.(19, 42, 53, 54) In 2014, organized several public events to raise awareness of human trafficking issues, including an awareness campaign march in The Gambia; designed a national database to collect data on trafficking.(20)
Senegalese Human Rights Committee	Coordinate human rights entities and make recommendations on laws related to human rights.(1, 55) Independent advisory body that promotes human rights and evaluates the human rights situation in Senegal.(1) Operates with an annual budget of approximately $125,000 and coordinates government submissions to the UN and the African Union.(54) Composed of 29 members including government entities, private sector organizations, and NGOs.(1, 55)

The Inter-Ministerial Commission met in 2014, but its activities were limited by a lack of funding.(7, 20) Redundancy among the activities of the coordinating bodies also creates confusion and hinders effective collaboration and implementation of efforts.(1, 25) The National Committee Against Child Labor was inactive during 2014.(42, 52) The CNLTP, also faced funding constraints that limited the scope of their efforts.(20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Senegal has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Prevention and Abolition of Child Labor in Senegal (PCNPETE) (2012-2016)	Aims to raise awareness of child labor issues, reinforce the capacity of law enforcement officials and civil society organizations, and improve the legal framework on child labor, including its worst forms.(3, 16, 22, 54, 56-58) Aims to increase educational and training opportunities for youth, implement pilot cash transfer program by 2016; includes a budget of approximately $2.7 million.(13 16, 56) In 2014, focused on strengthening the capacity of labor inspectors.(7, 16)
National Strategy on Child Protection	Addresses child protection through a national body to coordinate social policy with relevant ministries. Specifically identifies the issue of child begging and the need to enforce laws and policies to protect children from forced begging.(3, 27) Includes an action plan with a recommended budget of $18 million.(3)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings (2012-2014)	Aims to strengthen the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, effectively implement laws, provide protection and care for victims, and strengthen social and educational initiatives for vulnerable children. Implemented by the CNLTP.(1, 20)
National Strategy for Economic and Social Development (SNDES) (2013-2017)*	Includes goals such as promoting youth employment and entrepreneurship, increasing access to social services such as education and health services, and improving the quality of education. Establishes a 10-year education cycle and commits to increasing employment opportunities for youth.(33) The 10-Year Education and Training Program (2012-2025) included in the SNDES aims to improve the education system by mobilizing human and financial resources to enhance educational quality, improve physical infrastructure, and promote vocational training.(9, 33)
National Framework Plan for the Eradication of Child Begging (2013-2015)	Aims to combat child begging by regulating daaras , providing services to children removed from the street, and enforcing penalties for individuals who force children to beg.(3, 22, 27, 54)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Senegal funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Senegal

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Project to Fight Against Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002-2016)‡	Ministry of Women, Family, and Children program that aims to enhance government capacity to design and implement local initiatives to address child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor, particularly forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation.(29) Technical monitoring committees at the local level that are composed of public and private stakeholders oversee implementation of the project, which includes the creation of a support fund to finance activities proposed by local committees.(1, 29)
National Program of Family Assistance Bursaries (2013–2017)*‡	Part of PCNPETE, a government social safety net program that provides $200 annually to 250,000 vulnerable families with children ages 6 to 12 throughout Senegal to strengthen livelihoods and improve educational outcomes.(16, 54, 59) Total budget for this program was approximately $18 million in 2014, an increase of $8 million since 2013.(3, 7)
Daara Mapping Project‡	Project led by the Ministry of Justice and the CNLTP, that seeks to map all daaras located in Dakar to determine which need to be shut down as part of the effort to modernize daaras .(19, 20, 22, 27) Implemented under the auspices of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings.(22) Results were presented and validated in 2014.(20)
Partnership for the Rescue and Rehabilitation of Street Children	Government and NGO program that aims to integrate Koranic schools into the public education system and discourage children from begging through a pilot program for 2011-2014.(22) Partners comprising government officials, NGOs, private-sector entities, religious organizations, and the media provide social services to vulnerable children, particularly talibés , and conduct awareness-raising campaigns.(23, 25, 46)
Interagency Program for Improving the Situation of At-Risk Children in Senegal (2009-2014)	$1.8 million ILO and UNICEF-funded, 5-year program that provides school supplies, vocational training, and assistance with school enrollment directly to victims of the worst forms of child labor.(57, 60, 61) Conducts awareness-raising activities and provides information and training on relevant ILO conventions to local authorities. Also includes a pilot system for observing and monitoring child labor in the rural community of Ngoudiane.(57, 60)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa subregion by providing policy and capacity-building support for all ECOWAS states.(62, 63)
ECOWAS Regional Action Plan on Child Labor (2012-2015)	Aims to eliminate worst forms of child labor in West Africa by 2015 through the implementation of a regional action plan with 14 other ECOWAS countries.(64) In 2014, met to discuss actions taken since Ghana's 2013 Peer Review, progress of the Regional Action Plan's implementation, and the ILO's Study on "Child Labor and Educational Marginalization in West Africa."(65, 66)
Ginndi Center‡	Ministry of Women, Family, and Children-run shelter that serves abused and vulnerable children, including runaway talibés , street children, and child trafficking victims, with an annual operating budget of approximately $73,000.(1, 27, 49) Provides shelter, food, education, vocational training, family mediation, and medical and psychological care.(1, 8, 20, 23)
Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in West Africa (2009–2014)	$5.4 million Government of Spain-funded, 5-year program in four countries in West Africa that aims to contribute to the progressive elimination of child labor, and to the prevention and immediate elimination of the worst forms of child labor through a systemic and sustainable response by the public and private sectors and by civil society.(61)
Education and Family Life‡	Government project in daaras , which trains Koranic teachers and talibés on the rights of the child and focuses on improving living conditions and quality of education in daaras .(1)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Senegal.

Given the rising number of talibés engaged in forced begging, the scope of current government programs and shelters is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(25, 27, 57) Additionally, research found no evidence that the Government has carried out programs to assist children in domestic work, agriculture, or mining during the reporting period.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Senegal (Table 9).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Serbia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Statistical Office of the Republic of Serbia published the results of the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey for Serbia and for Serbia Roma Settlements, which includes data on the prevalence of child labor in the country. The Government also established 92 child protection teams across the country that provided social services to street children, and 10 new anti-trafficking teams to improve prevention and protection efforts at the local level. However, children in Serbia are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. Serbia does not have legislation that clearly and comprehensively describes the hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children. The Government also lacks a national policy to combat child labor and a mechanism to effectively coordinate efforts to address child labor across government agencies.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Serbia are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Serbia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	6.0 (54,045)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	6.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2005.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,* activities unknown (7)
	Manufacturing,* activities unknown (8)
Industry	Construction,* activities unknown (8)

Services	Street work, including washing cars, collecting scrap material, vending, and begging (3, 9-12)

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (1-4, 9, 11, 13, 14)
	Forced begging and used to commit crimes each sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1, 9, 14)
	Used in the production of pornography* as a result of human trafficking (13)

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Used in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs as a result of human trafficking* (13)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2014, the Government of Serbia published the final results of the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey (MICS 5) and the Roma Settlements Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey. The final report indicates that 10 percent of all children in Serbia and 5 percent of children living in Roma settlements ages 5 to 17 are involved in child labor.(15, 16) In rural areas, child labor is more prevalent, with 16 percent of rural children engaged in child labor compared with 5 percent of urban children.(15, 16) Despite these new data, there is still not sufficient research to determine the specific occupations and work activities carried out by children in most relevant sectors.

Children who are most vulnerable to exploitation include children from the Roma population, those from poor rural communities, those living in foster care or low-income families, and those with special needs.(3) The majority of child trafficking victims are trafficked internally.(4)

Economic hardship, ethnic discrimination, and language barriers discourage some children in minority groups from attending school, especially Romani girls.(9, 17) This makes these children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Individuals at risk of statelessness, particularly Romani parents and their children, often lack birth registration and documentation, which restricts their access to basic social services like health care and education.(9, 17) Although a technical working group exists to streamline complex registration procedures for undocumented minorities, including the registration of children whose parents are not registered, training is still needed for judges, registrars, and social workers to implement the revised procedures properly.(9, 18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Serbia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 24 of the Labor Law of the Republic of Serbia; Article 66 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (19, 20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 25 of the Labor Law of the Republic of Serbia; Article 66 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (19, 20)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Articles 25, 84, 87, and 88 of the Labor Law of the Republic of Serbia (20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 26 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (19)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 388 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Serbia; Article 26 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (19, 21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 183–185 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Serbia (21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 388 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Serbia (21)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 4 of the Law on Military, Labor and Material Obligation (22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 39 of the Law on the Army (23-25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 71 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia; Articles 94 and 98 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (19, 26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 71 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia; Article 91 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (19, 26)

Serbian labor law states that children ages 15 through 17 may not engage in work that is harmful to their health, morals, education, or in work which is prohibited by law.(20) According to article 84 of the Labor Law, employees under age 18 are prohibited from strenuous physical work underground, underwater or at excessive heights, work that may expose them to toxic substances or other health hazards, and activities that are judged by a competent health authority to be harmful. In addition, employees under age 18 may not work longer than 35 hours per week or during the night, with some exceptions.(20) Despite these provisions, the Labor Law does not identify the specific hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children in all relevant sectors. This lack of specificity presents challenges for effective enforcement action, including the removal of children from hazardous labor situations and the sanctioning of employers.(20)

The Criminal Code prohibits the use of children under age 14 for the production of pornography, but it applies different penalties to those who use children to make pornography based on the age of the child.(21, 27) When this crime involves children under age 14, the penalties range from 1 to 8 years in prison; however, the penalties for using a minor, defined as an individual age 14 and older but who has not yet attained age 18, to make pornographic materials range from 6 months to 5 years.(27) This minimum penalty of 6 months for using minors to create pornography may be an insufficient deterrent for such a serious crime. While in previous years it was unclear whether Serbian law specifically prohibited the use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, the Government has clarified that Article 388 of the Criminal Code prohibits this offense.(28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Policy's Labor Inspectorate	Enforce labor laws and conduct inspections, including those related to child labor.(15)
Ministry of Interior	Enforce laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking through the Organized Crime Police Force and the Border Police Force.(29) Oversee the General Police Directorate, which consists of 27 local police directorates, all of which have dedicated anti-trafficking units.(4, 12, 30)
State Prosecutor's Office	Lead investigations on trafficking in persons cases and exchange information through a network of 27 local prosecutors and two NGOs.(30) Provide financial support to the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection by collecting fees from defendants in minor criminal cases.(31)
Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection (The Center), Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Policy	Identify and rescue child trafficking victims and children at risk of being trafficked, conduct needs assessments, and refer victims to social services. Maintain a database of its beneficiaries and of the services provided to them, and participate in research projects that relate to trafficking.(12) Includes the Agency for Coordination of Protection of Trafficking Victims and the Urgent Reception Center for Trafficking Victims.(12)

Organization/Agency	Role
Parliamentary Committee on Children	Review all draft legislation in terms of children's rights to ensure that legislation is aligned with international norms and standards. Monitor the implementation of the child-related provisions of all laws.(3) Report to the UN CRC.(3)
Deputy Ombudsman for Children's Rights, Office of the Protector of Citizens	Monitor and conduct research on the situation of children's rights in Serbia. Produce reports on child begging, promote inclusive education of children and legal prohibition of corporal punishment, and manage the drafting of a comprehensive law on children's rights for parliamentary approval.(24, 32)

Law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Policy employed 241 inspectors in the Serbian Labor Inspectorate.(33) Research found that the Labor Inspectorate generally lacked funding to provide specialized training and the necessary equipment, such as computers and vehicles, to facilitate the adequate enforcement of laws prohibiting child labor.(7, 34, 35)

During the reporting period, the Labor Inspectorate conducted 52,863 labor inspections.(33) Inspectors were authorized to conduct both routine and complaint-driven site visits in the formal sector, including for child labor violations.(15) The Labor Inspectorate also has the authority to penalize businesses that are operating without formal registration.(29) Labor law empowers the Labor Inspectorate to file offense proceedings against any employer who has committed a child labor violation. However, research found that inspectors were sometimes denied the right to enter a workplace to conduct inspections, especially in new private enterprises.(36)

In 2014, the Labor Inspectorate reported that it found no incidents of children under age 15 working, and issued no citations or penalties to employers for violations of child labor law governing minimum age.(15) Inspectors also reported that there were 25 cases of minors ages 15 to 18 employed without parental or guardian approval in violation of the labor law, but it is not clear whether this work was hazardous.(33) If children are identified in situations of exploitative labor, they may be referred to receive social services at a center for social work, found within every locality.(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

According to Serbian authorities, there are a total of 352 police officers responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to irregular migration, cross-border crime, and human trafficking; the majority of these officers are stationed in Belgrade and in 26 regional departments.(37) During the reporting period, the Government, along with NGOs and international organizations, trained relevant government officials on how to recognize, investigate, and prosecute human trafficking cases, as well as how to assist victims properly.(3, 31) The Ministry of Interior conducted 19 training sessions for 329 police officers.(12)

In 2014, the Government investigated a total of 55 cases of human trafficking, 35 for the purpose of labor exploitation and 20 for commercial sexual exploitation.(12) The Ministry of Interior reported that authorities identified 12 child trafficking victims, 13 children used in the production of pornography, and 48 children used in the production and trafficking of drugs.(13) In the majority of cases, police officers are the first to encounter victims of trafficking whom they then refer to the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection for formal identification and provision of social services.(8, 31) In 2014, the Center assisted 19 child trafficking victims.(12) During the reporting period, the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection was not able to open its emergency shelter, the Urgent Reception Center, due to continued litigation over the shelter's physical location.(8, 12) When fully operational, the Urgent Reception Center will accommodate child trafficking victims on a temporary basis; however, it is not a specialized shelter for children.(31) NGOs raised concerns that the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection lacked procedures to address the specific needs of child trafficking victims.(31)

The Government reported that it registered 11 criminal acts of trafficking in children in 2014, and it charged 13 individuals for these crimes.(13) There were no reports of convictions or sentences issued in these cases.(33) In previous years, a source indicated that children found in forced begging were often penalized for petty offenses instead of being treated as victims of trafficking; however, there are no reports that this occurred in 2014.(4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its anti-trafficking efforts, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Council for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings	Set government policies against trafficking in persons. Includes the Ministers of Finance; Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Policy; Health; Justice; Economics; and Education. Chaired by the Minister of Interior.(30)
National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons (National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator)	Implement the policies of the Council for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings and coordinate the day-to-day anti-human trafficking efforts of the Implementation Team, which includes representatives from the ministries of Interior; Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Policy; Justice; Public Administration and Local Self-Government; Foreign Affairs; Education, Science, and Technology; Health; Culture and Information; Youth and Sport; and Trade, Telecommunications, and Tourism. Also includes participants from the Republic Public Prosecutor's Office, the Office for Human Minority Rights, the Security Information Agency, the Commissariat for Refugees and Migration, the Social Inclusion and Poverty-Reduction Team, the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection, and local NGOs.(12) Based in the Ministry of Interior.(30)

In January 2014, the Government reestablished the Council for Children's Rights to coordinate government efforts to address and prioritize children's issues in Serbia. The Council includes representatives from international organizations and various government ministries.(12) In November, the Council agreed to establish a working group that would be responsible for developing an action plan to address the issue of children who beg on the streets, but this working group has yet to convene.(33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Serbia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategy for the Improvement of the Status of Roma in the Republic of Serbia (National Roma Strategy)*	Aims to improve the status of Roma people in Serbia in terms of housing, education, employment, and health.(17) Seeks to include representatives of Roma communities in the process of policy implementation. Resulted from the signing of the Declaration of the Decade of Roma Inclusion (2005–2015) in 2005.(17)
Anti-Discrimination Strategy and Action Plan (2013–2018)†	Seeks to prevent discrimination and improve the situation of nine vulnerable groups, including children and ethnic minorities. Targets children subjected to multiple forms of discrimination, such as Roma children, refugees and internally displaced children, and victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, including those used in the production of pornography.(37, 38) In 2014, the Government adopted the Action Plan for Implementation of the Strategy. Specific objectives of the Action Plan include monitoring the progress of efforts to promote inclusive education and reduce discrimination in schools, and ensuring support in education for children with disabilities, Roma children, and children living and working on the streets.(15)
Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (2006) and the National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings (2009–2011)	Aims to address the problem of trafficking in persons in the areas of institutional framework; prevention, assistance, protection, and reintegration of victims; international cooperation; and monitoring and evaluation of mechanisms to combat human trafficking. In effect until the new strategy is adopted, but lacks dedicated state funding for anti-trafficking activities.(30, 37)
Special Protocol on the Treatment of Trafficking Victims by Judicial Authorities	Aims to provide judicial officials with clear guidance to facilitate adequate treatment of trafficking victims.(39)
National Plan of Action for Children and General Protocol on Child Protection from Abuse and Neglect (2005–2015)*	Establishes policies to promote quality education for all children and to protect children from abuse, neglect, exploitation, and violence. Associated protocols include the Special Protocol on Behavior of Law Enforcement Officers in Protecting Juvenile Persons from Abuse and Neglect and the Special Protocol on Protection of Children Accommodated in Social Care Institutions.(24, 27)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the Government continued to consider a draft National Strategy for Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Persons for 2015–2020 (National Strategy) and its accompanying Action Plan for 2015–2016 (Action Plan), but it has not yet been adopted by the National Assembly.(30, 31, 33) The Government reported that the new National Strategy and its Action Plan will incorporate policy positions from the previously proposed National Strategy to Prevent and Protect Children from Trafficking and Exploitation for Pornography and Prostitution (2012–2016).(8) There has not been an up-to-date National Strategy in place since 2011.

Research found that although the Government of Serbia has formulated strategies in the context of the Decade of Roma Inclusion, its commitment to implementation of these strategies has been low. In particular, the National Roma Strategy did not sufficiently address housing issues for Romani people in Serbia who have been forcibly evicted or are at risk of eviction from informal settlements.(33, 40–42) This situation increases the vulnerability of children in such families to involvement in the worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Serbia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Allowance Program*‡	Government cash benefits program for poor families, conditioned upon school enrollment for children age 7 or older. Provides a regular allowance of approximately $32 for parents, and of $39 for single parents with children.(24, 43)
Assistance to Roma Children in Education*‡	Ministry of Education program that seeks to improve the school attendance rate of Roma children. Includes a Serbian language training component to help Roma students integrate into the school environment.(24, 44)
European Support for Roma Inclusion (2013–2014)*	$5.3 million EU-funded, 2-year project implemented by OSCE to improve the situation of Roma people in Serbia, including by providing support for Roma people to register and obtain official documentation, providing scholarships for Roma children to reduce secondary school dropout rates, and monitoring and improving housing conditions in Roma settlements.(15, 45)
Programs Under Social Security Law*‡	Government program that provides a range of social services, including assistance to trafficking victims.(46) Requires Social Services Centers in 140 communities to maintain 24-hour duty shifts in order to protect children from abuse and neglect, including Roma children.(8, 28)
Local Communities Against Trafficking‡	$180,000 IOM and Swiss Development Agency-funded project, implemented by the Ministry of Interior in collaboration with NGOs that establishes multi-sector anti-trafficking teams to improve prevention and protection efforts at the local level.(35) Teams consist of representatives from local police departments, the Higher Public Prosecutor’s Office, the Social Welfare Center, the Red Cross, various health institutions, the local branch of the National Employment Agency, schools, civil society organizations, and other local authorities. In 2014, the project expanded to 10 additional cities, bringing the total number of teams to 17.(12, 13)
Strengthening the Identification and Protection of Victims of Trafficking†	IOM, Center for Human Trafficking Victims’ Protection and Ministry of Internal Affairs project that contributes to implementation of the National Anti-Trafficking Strategy by improving mechanisms for the prevention and identification of victims of human trafficking. Establishes general and specific monitoring indicators.(13)
Anti-Trafficking Efforts‡	Government programs that provide support to victims of human trafficking, including through maintaining a national anti-trafficking web site and hotline; providing foreign and domestic trafficking victims with access to social services and medical care, as well as witness and victim protection services; and providing accommodation for child trafficking victims in two Centers for Children Without Parental Care.(3, 12, 47)
Protection for Street Children†‡	Government programs that establish teams within local centers for social services to provide protection for children living and working on the streets.(15) Teams include representatives from the Ministry of Interior, health care professionals, educators, and social workers. In 2014, provided social services to 60 children.(15) A total of 32 local governments established 92 teams; preparations for an additional 35 teams were ongoing.(15)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Serbia.

In 2014, representatives from the Government of Serbia, the ILO, the U.S. Embassy in Belgrade, USDOL, trade unions, international organizations, and NGOs participated in a roundtable discussion named “The Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Serbia: International Experiences and Recommendations.” The panel identified existing gaps in laws, policy, and social programs aimed at addressing the worst forms of child labor in Serbia; it also discussed strategies for addressing these issues. (12, 18)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Serbia (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Seychelles

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Seychelles made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons Act, which criminalizes all forms of human trafficking and contains provisions to prevent child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. The Government also adopted the Strategic Framework and National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons, which provides legal protection and social assistance to victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. However, children in Seychelles are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. The Government has not established a minimum age for hazardous work nor has it determined hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for all children. In addition, the Government has not taken sufficient action to protect children from commercial sexual exploitation through social programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Seychelles are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Seychelles. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(7)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2015.(8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (3-6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Seychelles, predominantly girls, are induced into commercial sexual exploitation by peers, family members, and pimps. (4-6) Migrant workers and foreign tourists contribute to the demand for commercial sex, particularly on the main island of Mahe. (4-6, 9) Seychellois children engage in commercial sexual exploitation in nightclubs, bars, guest houses, hotels, brothels, and on the street. (4, 6) According to NGOs, drug addicts under age 18 are among those at risk of commercial sexual exploitation. (5, 6, 9)

Limited evidence suggests that the lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers impede access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Seychelles has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 31 of the Constitution (11)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Article 251 of the Penal Code (11, 12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 4 of the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons Act (13)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 245 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons Act (12, 13)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 73 of the Children Act of 1982 (14)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	18		Article 23 of the Defense Act of 1981 (15)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 33 of the Constitution (11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 33 of the Constitution (11)

* No conscription.(16)

Article 31(b) of the Constitution stipulates that the minimum age for dangerous, harmful, and unhealthy work should be higher than the minimum age for work of 15 years, though it does not specify an age.(11) Article 22(4) of Seychelles' Conditions of Employment Regulations allows children ages 15 to 17 to work in the restaurant, tourism, or entertainment industries and at night with the written approval of a "competent officer," though a definition for "competent officer" is not provided in the legislation. (5, 17)

The Attorney General's office has established a committee to bring Seychelles' national laws into harmony with ILO Convention 182 on the worst forms of child labor. (18, 19) A more specific list of hazardous child labor activities that includes a provision that sets a minimum age for hazardous work at 18 has been developed but was not approved during the reporting period.(19, 20)

In April 2014, the Government adopted the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons Act, which criminalizes all forms of human trafficking, including the trafficking of children.(4, 6, 13) The law prescribes penalties for those convicted of children trafficking up to 25 years' imprisonment and a fine up to $55,000, a punishment sufficiently stringent and commensurate with penalties prescribed for other serious crimes, such as rape.(4, 6, 13, 21) The law also provides legal protection and social assistance to victims of human trafficking. Children identified as victims of human trafficking receive specialized assistance that address the needs of minors, including education support and family reintegration services.(6, 13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Human Resources Development's Labor Monitoring and Compliance Unit	Enforce child protection and child labor laws, investigate complaints and conciliate disputes between employers and workers.(22, 23)
Police Department' Family Squad	Investigate criminal cases involving minors, including issues of commercial sexual exploitation.(5, 22, 24, 25)
Department of Social Affairs' Child Protection Unit	Develop and implement programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor.(5, 22, 24, 25)

Law enforcement agencies in Seychelles took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Human Resources Development employed six labor inspectors.(4) Labor inspectors did not receive training on the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.(26) Reports indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to conduct effective inspections and legal proceedings.(4, 27) Labor inspectors conduct regular checks to monitor school attendance and manage truancy.(28) Labor inspectors are authorized to conduct unannounced or announced inspections. The Inspectorate can initiate routine or targeted inspections based on analysis of compliance data or patterns of complaints.(29) Research could not identify the number of inspections, complaints, citations issued, violations, and penalties assessed related to child labor, commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children.

Criminal Law Enforcement

No information was found regarding the total number of Police Department' Family Squad agents, although agents received training on child trafficking.(30) Reports indicate that investigators handled commercial sexual exploitation cases during 2014; however, reports indicate that no legal action was taken against those who exploited children for commercial sex.(4, 22) Research also did not find information about the number and quality of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, or whether appropriate penalties were applied related to the criminal enforcement of crimes related the worst forms of child labor. Reports indicate there is a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to effectively conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.(4)

A formal referral mechanism is in place between law enforcement agencies and the Department of Social Affairs' Child Protection Unit.(24, 25) During 2014, the Department of Social Affairs conducted community outreach and awareness programs on human trafficking.(4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordinating Committee on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate actions against trafficking in persons and guarantee the protection of victims at the national level. Committee members are appointed by presidential order.(4, 5) The Committee is chaired by the Ministry of Social Affairs and includes representatives from the Police force, Immigration and Civil Status Department; the Attorney General's Office; and the Ministries of Labor and Human Resource, Foreign Affairs, and Customs. Also includes nongovernmental stakeholders.(13)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council of Children (NCC)	Monitor the implementation of government policies to protect the rights of children and coordinate social programs for victims of child abuse.(18, 22) The Council is a semi-autonomous body established by the NCC Act of 1981.(28, 31) Board members are appointed by the President and includes representatives from government ministries and civil society organizations.(25)
National Commission for Child Protection	Implement, coordinate, and monitor government efforts on child protection.(25) The Commission is chaired by the Ministry of Social Affairs and includes representatives from the Attorney General's Office, Health Department, Police Force, Family Tribunal and Ministry of Education and Youth. Also includes nongovernmental stakeholders.(3, 32)

The National Coordinating Committee on Trafficking in Persons met multiple times during the reporting period to develop the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons Act and drafted the Strategic Framework and National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons; both were approved.(4, 21) The National Council of Children met during the year to implement awareness-raising campaigns on child abuse and commercial sexual exploitation.(22) The National Commission for Child Protection was active during the reporting period.(26)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Seychelles has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Social Renaissance Plan of Action (2012-2016)	Establishes a 5-year roadmap in the areas of education, health, employment, human resource development, social affairs, community development, and security.(2) Includes provisions to decrease violations of children's rights, bolster child protection, and enhance services to victims of commercial sexual exploitation, including child victims.(2) Implemented and monitored by Ministries of Home Affairs; Health; Community Development; and Education, Employment and Human Resources Development, among other agencies.(33)
Strategic Framework and National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons†	Includes goals of enhancing the legal framework to prevent human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, effectively implementing laws, providing effective protection and care for victims and strengthening social and educational initiatives for vulnerable children.(4, 6, 34)
National Employment Policy and Strategies†	Incorporates policies to increase employment opportunities for youth and expand programs to assist women, children, and vulnerable groups.(22, 35) Also aims to develop a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children. Implemented and monitored by the Ministry of Labor and Human Resource Development.(35)
Social Security Benefits*	Increased funding in 2014 budget for social security benefits to better support vulnerable groups. Enhanced benefits to orphans and other at-risk children and youth.(6){U.S. Embassy- Port Louis, #149;U.S. Embassy- Port Louis, #151;U.S. Embassy- Port Louis, #180}
National Action Plan on Early Childhood Care and Education (2013-2014)*	Lays out steps to provide a comprehensive, integrated system for early childhood services.(36)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In November 2014, the Government, in partnership with international organizations, launched a two-month media campaign to raise awareness on trafficking in persons, entitled "Open your eyes," as part of the Strategic Framework and National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons.(6, 37)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Seychelles funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children awareness raising‡	Government program that implements awareness-raising activities aimed at youth. Focuses on the dangers of commercial sexual exploitation.(4)
Juvenile Project of Child Rehabilitation‡	Joint effort by the Ministry of Education and the Department of Social Development to serve vulnerable children, including school dropouts. Provides a package of services, including education and psychological care.(18)
Transportation subsidy*‡	Government-funded program that subsidizes bus fares for students in need who live more than three kilometers from school buildings.(6, 25)
National Early Childhood Care and Education Trust Fund *‡	Government-administered trust fund to promote the healthy development of children.(33) Funded several projects during the reporting period, including the purchase of educational materials and playground equipment and the training of early childcare providers.(33)
Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET) Program*‡	Government-implemented training program for secondary school students 16 years of age and older who have difficulty with traditional school curricula. Aims to deter students from dropping out of school.(18) Program enrollment increased in 2014.(19)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Seychelles.

Although the Government has a program to address commercial sexual exploitation, the scope of this program is insufficient to address the full extent of the problem, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children associated with tourism.(18)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Sierra Leone made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government ratified the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons, and funded and designated some members for the National Commission for Children. The Government also increased the number of labor officers and factory inspectors, and participated in social programs to address child labor and child trafficking. However, children in Sierra Leone continue to engage in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining. Sierra Leone's laws do not adequately protect children from involvement in hazardous work and the country does not have an approved national action plan on child labor. During the last half of 2014, the Government had to re-direct most of its resources to address an outbreak of Ebola Virus Disease (EVD). Thousands of children became ill or lost parents during the outbreak and schools were closed from June through December.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sierra Leone are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture.<sup>(1)</sup> Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining. Children working in the mining sector load, carry, and wash and sieve gravel.<sup>(1)</sup> Other children in this sector hawk or deliver goods, perform errands, or are exploited in commercial sexual exploitation.<sup>(1)</sup>

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sierra Leone.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	51.3 (897,142)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	67.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	43.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		72.4

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from the Demographic and Health Survey, 2013.<sup>(3)</sup>

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of coffee, cocoa, and palm oil (4-6)
	Fishing,* including deep-sea fishing,*† mending nets, and working on boats in the open seat† (1, 7-9)
	Farming, including planting, weeding and harvesting (1)
	Forestry, activities unknown (10)
Industry	Mining† for alluvial diamonds, sand,* gold,* including loading gravel in sacks or basins, carrying sacks on their heads, washing, and sieving (1, 7, 11, 12)
	Quarrying† and crushing stone, including granite, breaking rock, shoveling, and transporting gravel* (9, 11, 13, 14)
	Construction, activities unknown (10)
	Manufacturing,† activities unknown (10)
Services	Scavenging scrap metals and recyclable materials from dumpsites (1, 7, 11, 15)
	Domestic work (1, 7)
	Street work, including begging, trading and selling goods (1, 9, 12, 16)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Portering,† including carrying heavy loads (1, 11)
	Working as apprentices,* including in auto-repair shops and on transportation vehicles ( poda poda ) (1)
	Begging as a result of human trafficking (1, 7, 17)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work sometimes as a result of human trafficking (18)
	Forced stealing (1, 11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1, 11, 12, 17)
	Forced labor at granite and alluvial diamond mines, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1, 11, 12, 17)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Sierra Leone is a source, transit and destination country for children trafficked for the purposes of forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.(9) Children are mostly trafficked to urban areas for sexual exploitation, domestic work and petty trading.(9) Children are also trafficked internally for forced labor in agriculture, fishing, diamond mines, and begging. Reports suggest that children from Sierra Leone may also be trafficked to Nigeria, The Gambia, Côte d’Ivoire, Liberia, Guinea Bissau and Guinea for forced labor and forced prostitution.(9) Children from Nigeria, Liberia and Guinea are trafficked to Sierra Leone for begging, mining, portering, and commercial sexual exploitation.(9)

According to the Education Act, the Government has established the right to free primary education.(19) However, in practice, families pay for their children’s uniforms, supplies, transportation and other school costs.(1, 11, 20) Some children work part-time in order to help cover these costs.(21) Other factors limit children’s access to education, including a lack of schools, early marriage and pregnancy, sexual abuse from teachers, and poor school conditions.(1, 11, 21-23) Although the Person with Disability Act prohibits discrimination in education, children with disabilities in Sierra Leone are less likely to attend school than other children due to discrimination and inadequate school facilities.(11, 23, 24)

According to a Government report, there were over 2,800 deaths due to Ebola Virus Disease (EVD) in Sierra Leone from May to December 2014.(25) More than 16,000 children were negatively impacted by EVD, including approximately 8,000 who lost parents to the disease.(18) Reports indicate that many children also began working during this time to help their families.(26, 27) The Government of Sierra Leone closed schools from June to December to prevent the spread of Ebola and redirected most of its resources to address the outbreak.(9, 28, 29) The Government also established interim centers to provide care to children orphaned by Ebola and took steps to prevent child trafficking as a result of the crisis.(18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Sierra Leone's laws contain conflicting provisions regarding children's work and are not in line with ILO C. 138, which requires children to be at least 13 years of age to engage in light work, at least 14 years of age to work as apprentices, and to receive specific instruction or vocational training in order to engage in hazardous labor prior to the age of 18.(39) For example, Section 127 of the Child Right Act sets the minimum age for light work at 13 years; however, Section 51 of the Employers and Employed Act provides an exception for children under the age of 12 to be engaged in agricultural, horticultural or domestic light work for their parents, with government approval.(31, 32, 39) Section 135 of the Child Right Act sets the minimum age for apprenticeships at 15, but Section 57 of the Employers and Employed Act permits children age 13 and older to work as apprentices, with their consent and the permission of a parent or guardian.(31, 32, 39) Furthermore, Section 54 (2) of the Employers and Employed Act allows male children to participate in mining beginning at the age of 16, without receiving instruction or vocational training.(32, 39) In addition, Sierra Leone's labor laws prescribe fines that may neither reflect the present value of Sierra Leone's currency nor be commensurate with the severity of the crimes. For example, penalties for all violations of the Employers and Employed Act are liable to a fine of only 50 pounds or to imprisonment of six months.(1, 32) In 2014, the Government began reviewing its labor laws to address these issues and is considering whether to adopt a list of hazardous work prohibited to children under the age of 18.(14) The Government also began considering potential revisions to its Anti-Trafficking Law of 2005.(18)

Research did not find a law protecting children from involvement in illicit activities other than drug-related crimes.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender and Children's Affairs (MSWGCA)	Enforce child labor law and monitor compliance with child labor regulations.(1, 7) Head National TIP Secretariat; develop and implement digitized database to track all TIP cases in Sierra Leone.(40)
Ministry of Labor and Social Security—Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Supervise implementation of ILO C. 138 and 182; and formulate, implement, and monitor compliance with child labor regulations.(7, 39)
District Councils	Enforce child labor laws in the informal sector.(1)
Village Child Welfare Committees	Promote awareness on child rights. Report child welfare concerns to village and government officials who are responsible for children's issues. Provide recommendations and instructions on the maintenance and support of specific village children. Address complaints and concerns of adults or children in the village.(15, 31)
Ministry of Mines and Mineral Resources	Enforce regulations against the use of child labor in mining and monitor the field. Has the authority to suspend licenses of mining operators who engage in child labor.(7)
Sierra Leone Police—Family Support Unit (FSU)	Investigate, prosecute and track statistics on various crimes, including child trafficking and child labor.(7, 15)
Transnational Organized Crime Unit (TOCU)	Provide statistics and information on cases of trafficking in persons (TIP). Responsible for enforcing human trafficking cases.(40)

Law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor employed 3 Senior Labor Officers, 20 Labor Officers, 11 Factory Inspectors and four Labor Inspectors, an increase of 16 Labor officers and 4 Factory Inspectors from 2013. Three labor inspectors received training in 2014. (14) The Ministry of Mineral Resources had an estimated 350 Mines Monitors in 2014 to enforce regulations against the use of child labor in mining activities.(9) According to the Mines and Minerals Act, the Minister, after consultation with the Minerals Advisory Board, can revoke licenses from license holders who are found to be using child labor.(33) Research did not find information indicating any licenses were revoked in 2014.(14)

The Ministry of Labor is responsible for conducting both routine and complaint-based inspections. Inspections can be announced or unannounced.(14) The Government conducted only occupational safety and health (OSH) inspections in formal sector workplaces in 2014 and no child labor violations were found during these visits.(14) Research did not find information about the total number of OSH inspections conducted or whether the inspectorate has the authority to determine penalties for child labor violations. Despite an increase in personnel dedicated to labor inspection, the Government lacks a sufficient dedicated budget and other resources to effectively enforce labor laws.(41)

The Government has a mechanism to refer cases to police and other government agencies.(7) The Child Right Act requires the establishment of a child welfare committee (CWC) in every village, chiefdom and district. About 70 child welfare committees were in existence in Sierra Leone in 2014; however more need to be established to meet the requirements of the Act.(7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Government raided brothels to enforce laws against commercial sexual exploitation and took steps to assist nine Sierra Leonean women and girls who reported working in Kuwait as domestic workers in conditions similar to slavery.(9, 18) The Family Support Unit of the Sierra Leone Police conducted two operations to withdraw children from street work and forced child labor. The first operation, was conducted nationwide, while the second, was a pilot project focusing on the East End of the capital. (9) However, adult perpetrators identified through the two operations were only provided with warnings.(9) Due to a lack of 'safe homes' and shelters, police officers in Sierra Leone who handle these types of operations will sometimes provide temporary housing to the victims in their own homes.(9)

During the reporting period, members of the Republic of Sierra Leone Armed Forces, the Sierra Leone Police, the Immigration Department, the Office of National Security and other personnel involved in trans-border operations, as well as union leaders, law enforcement officers, personnel of the Ministry of Labor, and the TIP National Task Force and its stakeholders participated in TIP training.(18) Awareness campaigns were also held for youth, border guards, police, immigration officials, and other stakeholders on human trafficking and migrant smuggling.(18)

In 2013, police had investigated 24 cases of child trafficking nationwide and 163 cases of “child cruelty,” which included child labor-related offenses.(7, 40) In 2014, the majority of these cases were concluded; however, there were no trafficking convictions and research was unable to find information indicating how many of the 163 cases of “child cruelty” included child labor-related offenses.

The Government has a complaint line for issues related to child protection, but it is not targeted toward child labor.(7) In 2014, the Government upgraded its database to identify areas and sectors affected by human trafficking, as well as the related number of victims, prosecutions, and convictions. The database is expected to be operational in early 2015.(18) The TIP Task Force also began developing a National Referral Mechanism to better serve trafficking victims.(18)

Research did not find information regarding the number of criminal investigators in Sierra Leone. The Sierra Leone Police had no funding for investigating child labor issues, and reports indicate a lack of sufficient funding for office facilities, transportation, and fuel.(7, 11) Human trafficking cases are handled inefficiently by the courts and cases are often dropped before completion because of pressures and other difficult circumstances faced by victims.(18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National TIP Task Force	Coordinate the needs and requirements of agencies involved in providing shelter and services for victims, gather data on reported trafficking cases, and meet regularly to develop policy and address the issue of child trafficking.(7, 42) Task Force is headed by the MSWGCA and members include government ministries, NGOs, international organizations, and diplomatic missions.(15, 17) In 2014, the Anti-TIP Plan was being updated by the Government, but formal meetings of the task force were halted in November due to the Ebola crisis.(18)
National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor	Meet on an ad-hoc basis to discuss major issues related to child labor as they arise.(7, 39)
National Commission for Children	Coordinate and exchange information in accordance with Child Right Act. Advise the government on ways to improve the condition and welfare of children in Sierra Leone.(31) In 2014, the Government allocated $250,000 to the Commission and two Monitoring and Evaluation officers and two Child Protection officers were hired to help carry out its functions. However, the government has yet to name all its members.(14)

The National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor did not meet during the reporting period.(14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Sierra Leone has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Human Trafficking	Includes strategies for coordination and monitoring by government agencies, prevention, victim identification, protection and referral, and training.(43) The Government updated this plan in 2014. (18)
Agenda for Prosperity (2013-2018)	Addresses child labor, including its worst forms, through expanded social welfare programs and strategies to improve education quality and access.(44)
Transitional Joint Vision For Sierra Leone of the United Nations Family (2013-2014)*	Includes strategies to increase school enrollment for vulnerable children and provide youth employment.(45)
Education Sector Plan (2014-2018)*†	Implements education law and includes provisions to increase access, equity, completion, quality, and relevance of basic education.(46)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Government drafted a National Action Plan against the Worst Forms of Child Labor, but the plan has yet to be approved.(47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Sierra Leone participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government participates in other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to combat the recruitment of child soldiers and child soldier prevention programs in local schools	Child Soldier Initiative funded a 5-year program that provides child protection training for the police and army. Implements an education program, run by former child soldiers, in 45 schools across five districts of Sierra Leone to teach children about their legal rights, child soldiering and tactics used to recruit children.(48) The program aims to make child rights training mandatory for the local police and armed forces and outlines standards on how troops must engage with children in combat.(48)
Program to combat child trafficking and forced child labor in Sierra Leone	U.S. Department of State-funded two-year project implemented by World Hope International. Rescues and restores trafficking victims in a Trafficking in Persons Recovery Center and combats trafficking through awareness and education at the community level.(49)
Shelters	Government program that refers child trafficking victims to private shelters that house child victims of forced labor and trafficking.(18) In 2014, one shelter, operated by Don Bosco, provided services to 200 victims. However, an IOM shelter created in 2013 ceased operations and now only facilitates the repatriation of victims.(9)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project (2011-2015)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010.(39, 50) Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to eliminate child labor. Planned activities for Sierra Leone were completed in 2014.(50)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(51, 52)
Tackling Child Labor through Education (TACKLE) project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states (ACP). Aims to strengthen institutional capacity to formulate and implement child labor strategies, and to conduct research and increase the knowledge base on child labor.(12)
Youth-to-Youth Fund*	German Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development-funded program implemented in partnership with ILO, United Nations Industrial Development Organization, and Youth Employment Network. Provides youth with financing for small-scale projects aimed at creating employment for young people through entrepreneurship.(53)
Revitalizing Education Development in Sierra Leone (2014-2017)*	$23.4 million World Bank-funded project that aims to improve education access, equity, completion, quality, and learning outcomes; and to strengthen educational systems in Sierra Leone. Due to the Ebola crisis, project activities did not begin in 2014.(54)
Youth Empowerment and Employment Program (2011-2014)*	$600,000 UNDP-funded, 4-year program that strengthens national policy, strategy, and coordination for youth employment and seeks to provide basic support services for youth in Sierra Leone, including business development and career advice and guidance. The program provided assistance to 200 youth-led businesses and 400 youth through training and by providing them with inputs and services to establish their own agri-businesses.(55)
UNICEF Country Program*	Works to increase access to basic education, health care and other children's needs. In 2014, worked with the Government to draft a new education sector plan, develop a new national strategy for reducing teen pregnancy, a child welfare strategy, and a strategy for child justice.(23) Provided cash transfers and uniform support to increase access to basic education.(23)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Sierra Leone has insufficient shelters and safe houses for children who have been withdrawn from working on the streets or in forced labor.(9)

Solomon Islands

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Solomon Islands made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government enacted the Immigration Act, which prohibits transnational human trafficking and establishes specific penalties for the trafficking of children. Multiagency inspection teams also made site visits to logging camps and fishing areas throughout the country to inspect for human trafficking violations. With technical assistance from the ILO, the Government participated in a Child Labor and Trafficking Forum and a rapid assessment workshop to identify and develop strategies to address the worst forms of child labor in the country. However, children in Solomon Islands are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Education is not compulsory, and laws do not adequately protect all children from hazardous work and commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the Government has not established a body to coordinate efforts to combat child labor, and resources for enforcement are lacking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Solomon Islands are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Solomon Islands. Data on some of these key indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2015.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting and collecting palm oil fruits on plantations* and sea cucumbers* (1, 6)
Industry	Alluvial mining* (1)
	Construction on roads and buildings, including making bricks* (1)
Services	Domestic work,* including in logging camps and on fishing boats (1, 3)
	Scavenging for cans and metal in garbage dumpsites, streets, and streams* (1)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of trafficking (1-3, 7, 8)
	Used in the production of pornography* (3)
	Used in illicit activities, including in the trafficking of drugs* (1, 8)
	Forced domestic work,* including in logging camps and on fishing boats (1-3, 9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2014, the Government requested that the ILO conduct a 2-day rapid assessment and strategies workshop to identify the worst forms of child labor in Solomon Islands.(1) Despite this effort to improve data collection on the types of work carried out by children, the Government continues to lack comprehensive data on the prevalence and nature of child labor in the country.

Research indicates that both boys and girls are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation associated with the logging; tourism; and fishing industries in areas near logging camps, near or aboard commercial fishing vessels, and in the capital city of Honiara.(1-3, 7) There are reports that some family members put their minor children up for “informal adoption” in order to pay off debts or offer them in marriage to loggers and miners; subsequently, the children may be forced into domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation.(1, 2)

The Government’s Free Fee Basic Education (FFBE) Policy provides free education for children in grades one through nine, but it may not be sufficient to cover the true cost of attendance for all children. The Policy permits school administrators to request additional contributions from families such as cash, labor, and fundraising on behalf of the school.(1, 10) Additional school fees, uniform costs, book fees, and transportation needs may still prevent some children, particularly girls, from attending school.(1, 11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Solomon Islands has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Solomon Islands

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

namely the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.

The Labor Act permits children as young as age 12 to work.(12) This is not consistent with international standards, which require a minimum age no lower than 15 for admission to employment. In addition, legislation governing the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children does not fully comply with international standards. According to the Labor Act, children under age 15 are prohibited from working in the industrial sector or on ships, and children under age 16 are prohibited from working in underground mines.(12) Male children between the ages of 16 and 18 may be permitted to work in mines, on ships, or during the night in industrial undertakings with a medical certificate or with specific written permission from the Commissioner of Labor.(12) Despite these provisions, Solomon Islands does not have a comprehensive law protecting all children under age 18 from involvement in hazardous work. While the law defines the hazardous activities prohibited for children in the industrial sector, it does not define the hazardous activities in the agricultural or service sectors in a manner that is specific enough to facilitate the enforcement of child labor laws and the removal of children from these hazardous activities.(17) In addition, according to the Commissioner of Labor, the existing penalties and fines for employing children in hazardous conditions are too insignificant to serve as deterrents.(17) While forced labor is prohibited, the law does not establish specific penalties for a forced labor conviction.(14)

On August 1, 2014, the Immigration Act and its implementing regulations came into force. The law contains provisions to prohibit and punish transnational trafficking in persons, with heightened penalties for the trafficking of children. However, it does not sufficiently address domestic human trafficking issues.(15, 18) Recognizing this deficiency, the Ministry of Justice and Legal Affairs reported that the Solomon Islands Cabinet has approved a draft Penal Code amendment that would complement the Immigration Act so it more comprehensively prohibits all forms of trafficking in persons.(18)

Gaps in legislation also leave some children vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. The Penal Code does not protect boys ages 15 to 18 from use in commercial sexual exploitation.(9, 14) While the law criminalizes the production, distribution, and possession of pornography, it does not specifically prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of a child for the production of pornography. Laws do not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, such as drug trafficking.(14, 17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor, and Immigration (MOCILI)	Enforce child labor laws. The Department of Immigration within MOCILI is the lead agency on issues of human trafficking.(17, 19)
Royal Solomon Islands Police (RSIP)	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities.(9) Work in partnership with the Australian-led Regional Assistance Mission to Solomon Islands on human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation cases.(17)

Law enforcement agencies in Solomon Islands took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on the number of inspectors responsible for child labor law enforcement, nor on the specific level of funding allocated for this purpose. Sources, including the Government, noted that inadequate resources and lack of technical capacity among enforcement agencies have prevented meaningful enforcement of labor laws.(9, 19) According to the Labor Act, labor inspectors have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections in any workplace.(12) However, the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor, and Immigration (MOCILI) did not provide data on the number of inspections conducted, violations discovered, or penalties assessed with regard to child labor.(1) There is no evidence that a referral mechanism exists to ensure that children found in exploitative labor situations receive appropriate social services.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, research did not find information on the specific number of investigators responsible for the enforcement of criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. According to the Immigration Division's Chief Immigration Officer for Enforcement, multiagency inspection teams, including the Royal Solomon Islands Police, conducted site visits in logging and fishing companies throughout the country to monitor for evidence of human trafficking. These investigations did not uncover any cases of trafficking in persons, and there were no prosecutions, convictions, or penalties issued for human trafficking offenses.<sup>(1)</sup> The Government lacks procedures to systematically identify and refer victims of the worst forms of child labor to social service providers.<sup>(18)</sup>

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established a coordination mechanism on trafficking in persons, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee	Coordinate efforts to address human trafficking across the government. <sup>(19)</sup> Comprises representatives from the Royal Solomon Islands Police Force, the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions, and the Ministries of Labor, Foreign Affairs and Trade, Justice, Customs, Social Welfare, and Immigration, as well as various NGOs. Convened several times during the reporting period and was working to finalize Terms of Reference to formalize the Committee. <sup>(19, 20)</sup>

The Government of Solomon Islands has established the National Advisory Committee on Children to advise the Cabinet on general issues affecting children, coordinate the implementation of the UN CRC, and develop advocacy materials to promote the rights of children. Members of the Committee include the Social Welfare Division (SWD); the Ministry of Health and Medical Services (MHMS); the Ministry of Women, Youth and Children Affairs (MWYCA); and the Ministry of Education and Human Resource Development (MEHRD).<sup>(21)</sup> Research found that the Committee does not function as a coordinating mechanism to specifically address child labor issues.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Solomon Islands has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Policy with National Action Plan (2010–2015)*	Commits the Government to substantially improving services and the legal framework for child protection over a 5-year period. <sup>(21)</sup> Objectives of the policy include ratifying the UN CRC Optional Protocols, raising the minimum age for employment to 18, achieving universal primary education, registering all births by 2015, and creating a mechanism for the coordination and enforcement of child protection laws and policies. <sup>(21)</sup>
Free Fee Basic Education (FFBE) Policy*	Aims to increase educational access by subsidizing school fees for grades one through nine. <sup>(10)</sup>
National Youth Policy (2010–2015)*	Develops a strategic action plan to address six key issues related to the well-being of youth in Solomon Islands, including (1) career development, (2) participation in governance, (3) youth and well-being, (4) youth and peace building, (5) youth and sustainable development, and (6) youth mainstreaming. <sup>(1)</sup>
UNDAF for the Pacific Region (2013–2017)*	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island Countries and Territories: Cook Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Fiji, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu. <sup>(22)</sup> In Solomon Islands, aims to strengthen policy, legislation, and programs to protect children from exploitation and to improve access to education for children in remote areas. <sup>(23)</sup>

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, research found no evidence that the Government made efforts to address the objectives related to child labor outlined in the National Children’s Policy with National Action Plan. Although the Free Fee Basic Education (FFBE) Policy provides 9 years of free basic education, the Policy does not make education compulsory.(1, 10) The lack of standards in this area may increase the risk of children’s involvement in child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. In 2014, the Government participated in a Child Labor and Trafficking Forum aimed at identifying the types of work carried out by children and developing strategies to address the worst forms of child labor in Solomon Islands. The ILO reported that, based on the results of the workshop, key stakeholders discussed the need to develop social programs targeting child labor.(1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Solomon Islands (Table 8).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Somalia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Federal Government of Somalia ratified ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, participated in the “Children, Not Soldiers” campaign to prevent the recruitment and use of children by national armed forces, and participated in a program to strengthen the national criminal justice response to trafficking in persons. However, children in Somalia are engaged in child labor, including in street work and in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. The terrorist organization al-Shabaab remained the main perpetrator of the abduction and use of child soldiers in Somalia. The Somalia National Army also continued to use child soldiers. There are reports that the Ahlu Sunnah Wal Jama’a militia, which has not yet integrated into the Somalia National Security Forces, also used child soldiers. Somalia continued to lack many necessary mechanisms to effectively address the worst forms of child labor, including established labor and criminal law enforcement systems.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Somalia are engaged in child labor, including in street work. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. (1-11) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Somalia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic service, agriculture,* livestock herding,* breaking rock for gravel,* selling or transporting khat ,* and construction work,* each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5-8, 15-18)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5-7, 15, 19, 20)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Due to high poverty levels of poverty and the inability to provide care for all family members, some Somalis willingly surrender custody of their children to people with whom they share familial ties and clan linkages. Some of these children become victims of forced labor or commercial sexual exploitation.(8) Research also found that children were trafficked into Europe and North America, including as child brides.(7, 8)

The terrorist organization al-Shabaab engages in the widespread and systematic conscription and recruitment of children and is the main perpetrator of using child soldiers in Somalia.(11) Boys as young as age 8 were bribed or forcibly taken from their homes, schools, and the streets to serve as soldiers. Girls were recruited through bribery or by force for sexual servitude and domestic labor. (6, 7)

Research found that the Ahlu Sunnah Wal Jama’a militia, which to date has not yet integrated into the Somali National Army (SNA), has recruited children. Research also found that Somalia’s numerous clan militias use child soldiers.(11) The Federal Government of Somalia (FGS) condemns the use of child soldiers; however, there were reports of children associated with the SNA and its allied militia during the reporting period.(1, 7, 11)

In Somalia, protracted violence has led to the breakdown of all basic services, including public education.(21, 22) In addition, the volatile security situation has led to the displacement of more than 80,000 people.(11) These constraints, as well as the forced recruitment of children from schools by non-state terrorist and militia groups, have limited children’s access to education, as schools are either unavailable or unsafe.(11, 21-23) Additionally, the lack of educational infrastructure hinders children’s access to school.(7, 22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Somalia has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

In March 2014, Somalia ratified ILO C.182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.(24)

Somalia lacks a coherent central legal system.(21, 25, 26) The FGS does not have effective control over some parts of the country, and most essential governance functions were provided by regional administrations, including the self-declared Republic of Somaliland in the northwest and the semi-autonomous region of Puntland in the northeast.(1, 6, 23, 25, 27) Only the laws of the internationally recognized FGS are discussed in this section. The FGS has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict; the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; or the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 29 of the Provisional Constitution (29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 29 of the Provisional Constitution (29)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 30 of the Provisional Constitution (29)

In April 2014, Parliament issued a public statement on a commercial contract in which it cited pre-1991 laws, suggesting that the FGS continued to recognize relevant historic laws; however, no official determination has been issued.(31)

The Provisional Constitution states that a child under age 18 may not perform work or provide services that are not suitable for the child's age or create a risk to the child's health or development.(29) The Labour Code, however, prescribes a range of minimum ages for certain hazardous activities. For example, the minimum age for construction is 16, and the minimum age for work underground is 18.(28) These prohibitions, however, are not specific enough to facilitate enforcement.

Prohibition of the commercial sexual exploitation of children is included in the 1962 Penal Code; however, the Penal Code requires extensive updating. Many fines in the Code equal less than $1 today.(5, 32) Furthermore, it appears that under article 405 of the Penal Code, children involved in prostitution would not be protected from criminal charges for prostitution under Somali law.(30)

While the Provisional Constitution states that a person may not be subjected to trafficking, there are no prohibitions against recruitment, harboring, transportation, transfer, or receipt of a person for domestic or international human trafficking. During the reporting period, the FGS drafted a Sexual Offences Bill that would criminalize human trafficking; the bill has not yet been submitted to the Parliament for approval.(8)

The law does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The FGS has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministries of Labor and Social Affairs, Gender, and Family Affairs	Enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(1)
Somali National Police	Investigate and enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor, human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities.(5)

Law enforcement agencies in Somalia did not take actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the FGS did not employ any labor inspectors and conducted no inspections related to child labor.(7, 33)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Somali National Police Force, which remained understaffed and undertrained, lacked the capacity to investigate or enforce laws on the worst forms of child labor.(5, 7) No child labor related investigations, prosecutions, or convictions were made.(7, 33)

The Federal Government of Somalia, in partnership with UNICEF, has a referral procedure for the reception and handover of children identified to have been associated with al-Shabaab.(6) However, the SNA continues to detain children for alleged association with armed groups. Many of the children arrested by government security forces were released a few days after the arrest.(11) Research did not find referral mechanisms for children found in other worst forms of child labor such as forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the FGS has established Child Protection Units, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Protection Units under the Ministry of Defense*	Raise awareness on the issues of child soldiers, work with UNICEF to implement the Standard Operating Procedures of protecting children associated with armed conflict, and work closely with Somali National Army (SNA) military focal points to monitor troops for cases of child soldiers. Between June and December 2014, the six Child Protection Units conducted three site assessments of the Jazeera Training Camp in Mogadishu to monitor for child soldiers.(7, 8, 33)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2014, the FGS also had two SNA military focal points who communicated claims of children being present in military barracks. The FGS plans to add four more similar positions in more remote regions.(1, 33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The FGS has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Children, Not Soldiers Campaign†	Aims to end and prevent the recruitment and use of children by national security forces by 2016. Launched jointly by the Special Representative for the Secretary General for Children and Armed Conflict and UNICEF. Supports eight countries through negotiating and implementing action plans.(34) During the reporting period, more than 8,000 national army soldiers were trained on child protection issues.(11)
Child Soldier Action Plan	Addresses the recruitment and use of child soldiers by armed groups and the Somali security forces.(1, 35) In February 2014, the FGS signed the Standard Operating Procedures for the reception and handover of children separated from armed groups in Somalia.(6, 11)
Action Plan to End the Killing and Maiming of Children in Contravention of International Law	Addresses the killing and maiming of children as a result of conflict in Somalia.(35)
General Order Number One	Prohibits commanders from employing child soldiers, requires training on the protection of children's rights in armed conflict, and authorizes UNICEF to inspect all military camps to verify that child soldiers are not present. Issued by the Chief of Defense Forces.(5)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Children Associated with Armed Conflict Working Group coordinates implementation of the Child Soldier Action Plan and the Action Plan to End the Killing and Maiming of Children in Contravention of International Law. During the reporting year, the group met bimonthly in conjunction with the United Nations Assistance Mission to Somalia, UNICEF, and Child Protection Units.(8, 33)

Despite the Provisional Constitution calling for free education to the secondary level, a universal free education system in Somalia is not in place.(6, 32) Furthermore, there is no compulsory age for education. The lack of standards in this area may increase the risk of children's involvement in child labor.

Although the FGS has adopted policies on children in armed conflict, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the FGS participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The FGS has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Children in Armed Conflict Program	$388, 890 European Commission-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to prevent child recruitment and reintegrate children associated with armed forces and groups in south central Somalia.(36) Collaborated with UNICEF to focus on economic reintegration of former child soldiers through vocational and entrepreneurship training and assistance with starting a business or accessing wage employment.(37) Two hundred children associated with armed forces and groups gained adequate life and technical skills that have helped them become productive and integrated community members.(36)
UNICEF Country Program (2011–2015)	In cooperation with the Federal Government of Somalia, aims to equitably increase school enrollment, construct schools, develop curriculum, and train teachers. Also works to prevent the recruitment of children into armed groups and to place former child soldiers into rehabilitation programs.(1, 23) As of August 2014, 500 children have benefitted from the reintegration programs for children associated with armed groups.(38)
Go-2-School Initiative*	$117 million European Union, USAID, and UK Department for International Development (DFID)-funded, 3-year project implemented by UNICEF, WFP, UNESCO, and International NGOs in partnership with the Federal Government of Somalia.(39) Seeks to enroll 1 million children who are not currently in school. (39, 40) Launched in September 2013, nearly 40,000 children in Central South Somalia have started formal primary education.(39) In 2014, the Federal Government of Somalia opened two public schools in Mogadishu, and the regional governments of Puntland and Somaliland operated other public schools.(7)
SNA Soldiers Pay Screening Plan†	Program funded by the Governments of the United States and Italy that establishes a screening process whereby soldiers' identity and age are verified before they receive their pay. Screening teams comprising African Union officers, local Somali tribal elders, and high-ranking SNA officers verify the identity and age of each soldier before they receive payment.(5, 33)
Serendi Rehabilitation Center	Norwegian and Danish-operated center in partnership with the Federal Government of Somalia that rehabilitates children formerly associated with armed groups before reintegrating them into society.(17, 33) By August 2014, approximately 55 children had been directed to the center by the National Intelligence Security Agency.(17)
Strengthening the National Criminal Justice Response to Trafficking in Persons through Legislative Assistance and Capacity Building in Somalia†	$750,000 USDOS-funded, 3-year project implemented by UNODC to enhance the criminal justice response to trafficking in persons within the territories of Somaliland and the Federal Government of Somalia. Aims to strengthen legal frameworks to meet international requirements. Develops and delivers multidisciplinary training programs on victim identification, victim-centered investigations, and prosecution of trafficking cases.(41)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Federal Government of Somalia has implemented programs to address child soldiers, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children in other forms of child labor, including other worst forms of child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Somalia (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

In 2014, South Africa made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed amendments to the Basic Conditions of Employment Act, which extended protection to children working in the informal sector and increased the penalty for child labor violations from 3 to 6 years imprisonment. The Government also drafted regulations to implement the 2013 Prevention and Combatting of Trafficking in Persons Act. The Government's Department of Home Affairs published new regulations for the 2002 Immigration Act that includes new documentation requirements intended to prevent the illegal movement of children. The Government's Department of Social Development also implemented a food relief program for households with vulnerable and orphaned children, as well as child-headed households. Studies also indicate that the Government's Child Support Grant and the Old Age Pension may help reduce child labor. However, children in South Africa are engaged in child labor, including agriculture and domestic work. Government social programs to address child labor do not match the scope of the problem and barriers to education access remain. The Government also does not make enforcement data publicly available.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in South Africa are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and domestic work.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in South Africa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2004, UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(6)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (2, 5, 9-12)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, food service, street vending, and begging each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 5, 9-12)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in South Africa are trafficked from rural to urban areas, including to Bloemfontein, Cape Town, Durban, and Johannesburg. Girls are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work and boys are trafficked for work in agriculture, food service, begging, and street vending.(9, 10) Reports indicate that orphaned children in South Africa are especially vulnerable to human trafficking.(5) The Government reports that girls are more likely than boys to be involved in child labor.(13) However, the Government does not collect comprehensive data on the number of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(2, 5, 14) Although birth certificates are required to qualify for services, including education, more than 20 percent of babies are not registered by their first birthday.(2, 15). The Department of Home Affairs adopted regulations to ensure compliance with the 2010 amendments to the Births and Deaths Registration Act which went into effect in March 2014; the amendments require that children are registered within 30 days of birth.(8, 16) Although access to free education is mandated by law, school fees vary depending on the municipality and region.(1) The Government implements a no-fee school program that covers the poorest primary schools.(1, 17, 18) According to the Government, 81 percent of schools are “no fee.”(1, 17) The Government also provides some fee waivers to children receiving government grants.(15, 19, 20) The Government provides books and stationery, but all families must pay for uniforms and other school-related expenses, which may affect children’s access to education.(2, 8, 10, 19, 21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government passed amendments to the Basic Conditions of Employment Act (BCEA), increasing the penalty for child labor violations from 3 years to 6 years of imprisonment. These amendments now provide protection for children working in the informal sector.<sup>(16)</sup> In 2013, the Government approved the 2013 Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act (PCTPA), a comprehensive national anti-trafficking law that includes specific provisions for child trafficking, but the Act has yet to be promulgated and take effect.<sup>(1, 5, 32)</sup> During the year, the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development drafted regulations to implement the PCTPA for when it takes effect. Likewise, the Department of Home Affairs drafted regulations to implement the PCTPA, but these regulations have yet to be submitted to Parliament for approval.<sup>(8)</sup>

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
South African Department of Labor (SADOL)	Enforce child labor laws. <sup>(1, 33)</sup> Inspectors identify suspected cases of child labor and human trafficking and forward evidence to South African Police Service (SAPS) officials, who investigate and forward cases to the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development for prosecution. <sup>(10, 12)</sup> Coordinate a report entitled "State of Child Labor in South Africa." <sup>(21)</sup>
Department of Social Development (DSD)	Provide child protection and social services to vulnerable children, including victims of trafficking. <sup>(2, 16, 34)</sup>
South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development	Enforce criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. <sup>(1, 33)</sup>
National Prosecuting Authority (NPA)	Prosecute criminal cases, including human trafficking cases. <sup>(1)</sup>
South African Police Service's Human Trafficking Desk	Monitor and evaluate efforts to investigate human trafficking crimes, train investigators, and refer human trafficking cases to provincial SAPS units. <sup>(1)</sup>
Labor Centers	Serve as field offices for inspectors to investigate child labor violations. Operated by Child Labor Intersectoral Support Groups. <sup>(1, 21)</sup>

Law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the South African Department of Labor (SADOL) employed 1,324 labor inspectors and conducted more than 129,259 routine inspections, including unannounced site visits, to protect vulnerable workers, including child laborers. The compliance level for these inspections was 75 percent.(16) The Government allocated more than $36 million to SADOL for inspection and enforcement service during the year. A limited number of sources indicate that labor inspectors do not inspect farms without an invitation due to concerns of entering private property and safety, which may leave children working in agriculture unprotected.(1, 16, 21) In addition, SADOL does not have the legal authority to assess penalties for labor law violations, but inspectors may make recommendations to the court.(16) SADOL lacks a central unit to administer training programs to labor inspectors.(1) The Government supported the IOM training of labor inspectors during the year.(16) However, the Government did not make complete statistics publicly available on the number of child labor investigations opened, closed, or resolved, or the number of citations made and convictions achieved.(16) Depending on the type of offense, child labor violations are tried in either a criminal or a labor court.(12)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Inspectors send cases that involve foreign nationals to the Department of Home Affairs before they are transferred to the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development. Inspectors also refer cases that may involve a child labor to social workers who provide welfare needs such as child protection and care.(1, 35) However, the current shortage of social workers may delay this practice. The Department of Social Development (DSD) has acknowledged the shortage of social workers and is working to address this need by offering scholarships to students interested in pursuing that field of study.(21, 35)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Government supported the IOM's training sessions for officers on human trafficking issues, including on legal frameworks, agency roles, and identification criteria.(5, 16) During the year, there was one conviction under BCEA's child labor provisions, and there were three cases of suspected child labor that had not been prosecuted.(16) The South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development, South African Police Service (SAPS), National Prosecuting Authority (NPA), and Department of Home Affairs collaboratively trained their staff on the new regulations for the 2013 PCTPA(36). The Government's Department of Home Affairs published new regulations for the 2002 Immigration Act that includes new documentation requirements intended to prevent the illegal movement of children.(36) However, the Government does not publish comprehensive data on human trafficking cases, including the number of prosecutions or convictions. In addition, investigators lack sufficient training on how to identify victims of human trafficking.(11) The Government funded an NGO-operated hotline that refers child labor complaints to government protection agencies or the South African Police Service (SAPS).(1) However, it is unknown how many complaints related to child labor were made to government-funded hotlines.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Implementation Committee on Child Labor	Monitor and support advocacy and awareness raising; mainstreaming of child labor into government policies; and the implementation of child labor programs, legislation, and enforcement.(1, 33) Chaired by SADOL; members include representatives from commercial agriculture, trade unions, and government agencies, including SAPS.(1) Includes provincial level child labor coordinating structures.(4).
Child Labor Intersectoral Support Groups	Facilitate the prevention of all types of child labor, including children scavenging and as a result of human trafficking. Established by SADOL and managed by child labor coordinators in each province; members include multiple government agencies.(1, 21)
Trafficking in Persons Task Team	Coordinate the Government's anti-trafficking efforts. Led by the NPA's Sexual Offenses and Community Affairs Unit and SADOJ's Victim Support Directorate, members include SADOL, DSD, and DHA, as well as other representatives of national law enforcement.(1, 5)

* Mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor were created during the reporting period.

In 2014, the Implementation Committee on Child Labor met on a quarterly basis, but members did not submit progress reports on efforts to implement the country's national strategy to eliminate child labor to the executive branch.(8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of South Africa has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Program of Action for South Africa, Phase III (CLPA) (2013–2017)	Serves as the primary policy instrument to prevent and eliminate child labor in South Africa.(12, 16, 31) Promotes government activities and calls for the promotion of new laws against the worst forms of child labor.(1, 12, 31) Also includes a list of indicators to monitor the Government’s efforts against child labor.(31)
South African Education Action Plan to 2014*	Serves as the first phase of a comprehensive national education plan through 2025. Focuses on addressing 27 education goals, including ensuring that all students stay enrolled in school through age 15.(37)
National Development Plan 2030*	Provides a comprehensive development plan for South Africa, including economic development, education, and social protection.(38)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Government drafted a new anti-trafficking national action plan in 2013, it has yet to be approved.(5, 8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of South Africa funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Support Grant‡	Government program, led by the Department of Social Development (DSD) and the South African Social Security Agency (SASSA) that provides monthly direct cash transfer to primary caregivers with vulnerable children.(1, 2, 15, 21, 39-41) Helps alleviate economic pressures and lower the cost of raising a child.(1, 2, 12, 15, 39-41) Reaches more than 10 million children.(21) Sources have indicated that as a result of the Child Support Grant, recipients may be less likely to send their children away for child labor and are more likely to have positive educational outcomes.(1, 2, 21, 42)
Old Age Pension‡	SASSA government led program that provides cash transfers to eligible adults over age 60. Several assessments of the program’s impact indicate that children’s school attendance and completion increase and child labor decreases in rural households with male pension recipients, especially for boys in households with male recipients.(1, 41) Studies also indicate a decrease in the total hours worked by children, especially among girls.(1, 41)
Care Dependency Grants and Foster Care Grants‡	SASSA government led program that encourages children to remain in school and not enter the labor market as a means of preventing child labor, including the worst forms of child labor, by.(1)
Social Service Program‡	DSD program that administers social services to vulnerable individuals, including child laborers, based on referrals from social workers.(1, 14, 15)
National School Nutrition Program*‡	Government program funded through a conditional grant that provides school meals to vulnerable children. The program targets primary and secondary school learners.(19, 21, 43)
Food Relief Program†‡	DSD and SASSA food relief program to assist vulnerable and orphaned children, and child-headed households with insufficient income.(16)
Shelters and Care Centers‡	DSD program that funds 13 shelters and oversees 17 NGO-operated centers for victims of abuse and human trafficking, including children.(5, 11, 34)
Awareness Raising Campaigns‡	Government program that conducts training on anti-human-trafficking.(5)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research.(44)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of South Africa.

South Africa

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The Government has identified constraints on its capacity to offer social protection for children. For example, the child protection system still lacks a sufficient number of skilled staff to assist the majority of children who need care.(15, 35) Although South Africa has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient, including in agriculture and domestic work.(1, 2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in South Africa (Table 9).

NO ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT

In 2014, South Sudan made efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, but was also complicit in the forced recruitment of children for armed conflict. While the Government made efforts by launching the Children, Not Soldiers campaign to raise awareness about child protection and to penalize perpetrators that recruit child soldiers, South Sudan is receiving this assessment of no advancement because the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) recruited, sometimes forcibly, children to fight the opposition group led by former Vice President Riek Machar. In addition, gaps in legislation continue to put children at risk and child labor laws are not effectively enforced.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in South Sudan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10-14 yrs.	45.6 (463,624)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	31.5
Combining Work and School (%)	10-14 yrs.	10.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		37.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(8)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Fifth Housing and Population Census, 2008.(9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming activities,* including planting* and harvesting* (10-12)
	Cattle herding† (10, 11, 13, 14)
	Breaking rocks to make gravel*† (15, 16)
Industry	Construction,†including building and transporting materials* (12, 17)
	Brick making* (4)
	Mining,*† activities unknown (4)
	Domestic work (5, 13, 14, 18)
Services	Street work, including vending, washing cars, polishing shoes, collecting empty bottles, and pushing delivery carts (4, 5, 19-21)
	Scrap metal collection* (22)
	Cow dung collection* (13)
	Work in slaughterhouses,including transporting livestock and meat* (12, 23)
	Forced labor in cattle herding, domestic work,* construction,* brick making,* rock breaking,* begging,* and market vending* (4, 17, 24)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation,* sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (2-7)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Used in illicit activities, such as selling drugs* (17)
	Used as border patrols,* community police officers,* and bodyguards to military commanders*(25)
	Used in armed conflict,* sometimes as a result of forced recruitment* (3, 4, 26, 27)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2014, children were recruited for armed conflict, including by the Sudan People’s Liberation Army (SPLA).(4, 10, 25, 28) The Government stationed child soldiers in Bentiu and Rubokona, and sometimes used them as bodyguards.(29) In addition, the Government recruited child soldiers, sometimes forcibly or with the aid of community leaders, to fight against the opposition group, Sudan People’s Liberation Army- In Opposition (SPLA-IO), led by former Vice President Riek Machar during the reporting period.(25, 30-35) Riek Machar’s SPLA-IO also recruited and used many child soldiers during the reporting period.(7, 25, 36, 37) In February 2014, there were reports that children were abducted by SPLA-IO in Malakal in Upper Nile.(28)

During the year, an inter-ethnic conflict in Bentiu resulted in the deaths of hundreds of Nuer and non-Nuer South Sudanese nationals, and caused the displacement of more than 22,000 persons in South Sudan.(38) Many of these displaced families found refuge in the civilian protection sites of the United Nations Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS). Some families in the internally displaced camps placed their daughters in commercial sexual exploitation for money, particularly in Bentiu in Unity State, and Malakal in Upper Nile State.(7) The ongoing conflict may have diminished the Government’s ability to deliver aid, provide education, and address the worst forms of child labor.(38)

Although the Constitution and the Child Act provide for free primary education, in practice, parents must often pay teachers’ salaries—a cost that is prohibitive for many families.(14, 39, 40) The cost of uniforms also prevents some children from attending school.(5) Food insecurity and the high cost of living may also impede access to education in South Sudan, as many families may not be able to afford to send their children to school.(41-44) Many children (especially in rural areas) do not have access to schools, often due to the lack of infrastructure.(14, 39, 40, 45, 46) During the reporting period, there were several incidents of attacks on schools that resulted in lootings and military occupancy.(28) The lack of access to education may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor.(28, 47) In addition, there has not been a comprehensive child labor survey in South Sudan and during the year the National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (NDDRC) continued monitoring the government’s efforts to ban the use of child soldiers.(35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

South Sudan has ratified a few key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

South Sudan’s national legislative assembly passed a bill in 2013 to allow the ratification of the UN CRC; the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict; the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; and the two optional protocols. The bill now awaits the President’s signature.(23, 48) South Sudan has not ratified the Palermo Protocol.

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 5, 22.3 and 25.1 of the Child Act (49)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article 25.2 of the Child Act (49)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 277 of the Penal Code; Article 13 of the Constitution (50, 51)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 22.3(b) of the Child Act; Articles 269, 270, 278, 279, 281, and 282 of the Penal Code; Article 17.1(h) of the Constitution (49-51)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 22.3(c) and (d) of the Child Act; Articles 258 and 276 of the Penal Code (49, 50)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 24.1 of the Child Act (49)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 31.1 of the Child Act (49)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 31.1 of the Child Act; Section 22.2 of the Sudan People's Liberation Army Act (49, 52)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	13	Article 9.1(b) of the General Education Act (23, 53)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6(a) of the General Education Act; Article 14.1 of the Child Act; Article 29.2 of the Constitution (11, 14, 49, 51)

In South Sudan, the minimum age provision for work in the Child Act does not apply to children outside of a formal employment relationship, such as children working in domestic work.(49) Children are only required to attend school until age 13, as the General Education Act requires that a child enrolls in school between ages 5 to 6, and primary education in South Sudan lasts 8 years.(23, 53) This standard makes children between the ages of 13 and 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school, but they are not legally permitted to work either.(23) Although Articles 31.2 of the Child Act already prohibits the use of children in any military or paramilitary activities and Article 32 punishes violators with imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or with a fine or both, the Government in 2014 amended the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) Act of 2009 to provide additional protections and established punitive measures for SPLA officials who recruit children or use schools for military purposes. In September 2014, the Ministry of Defense issued a Punitive Order against commanders who had children in their military unit.(49, 54) Although in 2013 the Government drafted an updated list of hazardous work for children, the list has not been finalized.(55)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development (MoLPS & HRD)	Develop labor policies, enforce child labor laws, conduct workplace inspections, and oversee the operation of vocational training centers.(14, 49, 56) Through the Ministry's Child Labor Unit, investigate cases of child labor.(10)
Ministry of Gender, Child, and Social Welfare (MoGC & SW)	Coordinate activities on children's rights and act as the focal ministry for child protection.(57)
SPLA's Child Protection Unit	Identify child soldiers and provide training on children's rights to child protection officers and members of the SPLA.(58)
Ministry of Interior	Enforce criminal laws to combat human trafficking and maintain a database on crime statistics.(59)
Ministry of Justice	Protect citizens' rights and enforce the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and the Constitution, including child protection provisions in those laws.(11, 60)
South Sudan Police Services	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(14, 23)

Organization/Agency	Role
Human Rights Commission	Raise awareness of human rights, monitor the application of human rights in the Constitution, and investigate complaints regarding human rights violations, such as human trafficking.(61, 62)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in South Sudan took some action to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Child Labor Unit of the Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development (MoLPS & HRD) was comprised of an estimated 10 labor inspectors and 2 investigators, which appears to be insufficient for the size of the population.(35, 54) MoLPS & HRD officials reported that they lacked sufficient resources, such as vehicles for transport, to conduct labor investigations.(12, 35) It is unclear whether labor inspectors conducted unannounced inspections or whether the inspectorate has the authority to issue penalties.(35) Research did not find information on the quality of inspections, whether labor inspectors received training, how many child labor citations were issued, or whether penalties were applied for the citations issued during the reporting period.(35) The National Steering Committee on Child Labor, led by the Ministry of Labor, was charged with coordinating efforts across government ministries to combat child labor; but evidence indicates that the Committee was inactive during the year, and no referral mechanisms were established to report and address child labor violations.(35)

Research did not find information on the Government's efforts to collect, maintain, or make child labor data publicly available.(6, 35)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the IOM, in coordination with INTERPOL, provided training to immigration and customs officials that included presentations on how to combat human trafficking.(54) In October 2014, the IOM and UNDP provided a second training seminar to 20 law enforcement officials on issues related to sexual and gender-based violence that also included a session on human trafficking.(12, 54) However, research found no information on how many investigators were responsible for enforcing the laws on the worst forms of child labor; how many investigations, prosecutions, convictions had occurred; or whether appropriate penalties were applied.(35) Research also found no information on whether a referral mechanism exists between law enforcement and social service entities.(35)

During the reporting period, the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) recruited children for armed conflict, even though the Child Act sets the minimum age for voluntary military recruitment at 18.(23, 49) Although the Joint Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers commits the SPLA to holding its military officers accountable for the recruitment or use of children, research found no information that the Government had investigated or prosecuted officers who had allegedly committed such crimes.(35) However, in September 2014, following the implementation of the Children, Not Soldiers awareness campaign targeting military officials, the SPLA released from military service 32 children in Wau and 43 children in Jonglei.(54) Prosecutors and law enforcement officials are not familiar with the Child Act's prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor, as it has not been adequately disseminated.(23, 57, 63)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinate efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor across government ministries. Led by the MoLPS & HRD.(10)
National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (NDDRC)	Oversee and coordinate the implementation of the Joint Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers and reintegrate children formerly engaged in armed conflict.(3, 4, 14, 64) In 2014, the Government recommitted itself to the Joint Action Plan. The NDDRC and UNICEF partnered with each other to release child soldiers from armed forces.(12, 65) Despite this, neither the Government nor the SPLA-IO has made significant progress in honoring commitments to release child soldiers from armed conflict.(28)

NO ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT

Research could not confirm whether the National Steering Committee on Child Labor had coordinated activities to combat child labor in 2014.(6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of South Sudan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Joint Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers	Requires the SPLA to demobilize children within its ranks.(66) Aims to improve efforts to verify the age of new recruits and provide reintegration services, such as vocational training, to demobilized children.(4, 67, 68) In June 2014, the Government recommitted itself to the implementation of the Joint Action Plan by signing an agreement with the UN.(65) In August 2014, the Government signed a work plan detailing the implementation steps for the agreement, which aims to end the recruitment and use of children by armed forces, the killing and maiming of children, sexual violence against children, and the use of schools for military purposes by July 2015.(54, 65) Throughout the demobilization efforts, girls from the Greater Pibor region were released. Reintegration and rehabilitation services, such as interim care centers, were available for the demobilized children.(12)
MoLPS & HRD's Policy Framework and Strategic Plan (2012–2016)	Aims to eliminate child labor, and support workplace best practices in occupational safety and health.(69, 70)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2012–2016)	Seeks to improve access to and quality of education; includes provisions for social protection and the reintegration of ex-combatants.(12, 71)
War-Disabled, Widows, and Orphans Commission Policy (2010–2014)*	Aims to provide orphans with services such as education, special education, and employment training.(72)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

It is unclear whether an implementation timeline and budget exist for the War-Disabled, Widows, and Orphans Commission Policy.(72)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of South Sudan participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project (2011–2015)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010, by year 2016. Aims to build the capacity of the Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor in South Sudan.(73)
Tackling Child Labor Through Education Project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states.(74) Aims to improve the child labor and education legal framework, strengthen the Government's capacity to develop and implement child labor strategies, carry out activities to combat child labor, and collect data on child labor and education in South Sudan.(74)
World Bank Grant*	World Bank-funded, $9 million program that aims to improve employment and financing opportunities for youth and women, including by supporting 50,000 small business entrepreneurs and generating 250 jobs.(75)
UNICEF Country Program (2012–2015)	UNICEF-funded program implemented by the Government that aims to develop child protection systems, with an emphasis on birth registration, child-sensitive justice system, and reintegration services for children affected by armed conflict.(76, 77)
UNICEF Child Protection Working Group Situation and Response Trainings†	In August 2014, UNICEF-funded training implemented by the Government officials on identifying needs, gaps, and trends in order to effectively respond to child protection risks, hazards, and threats.(78, 79)

Program	Description
Children, Not Soldiers Campaign†	Ministry of Defense program to raise awareness of child protection principles publicly and within the SPLA, and hold perpetrators accountable for recruiting child soldiers. Also aims to end the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict by the end of 2016.(80) Under the Children, Not Soldiers campaign, the month of November was declared the month for the NDDRC to screen the military, and to demobilize and reintegrate child soldiers.(81)
Refugee assistance programs*	Government programs to assist refugees and allow the return of South Sudanese (including families and children) from North Sudan. Receive support from the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, the IOM, USAID, USDOS, and other organizations; also include the provision of food, shelter, emergency reintegration, and livelihood assistance.(3, 82-84)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although South Sudan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in agriculture. Reports also suggest that the level and amount of rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers are not sufficient to meet the total need.(85)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Sri Lanka made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government expanded the Child Labor Free District by 2016 program to two new districts. The Government also implemented the fully automated Labor Inspection System Application (LISA) that supports onsite inspection processes in five of nine provinces. However, children in Sri Lanka are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in domestic work. The Government's enforcement efforts continued to be weak, particularly with regards to hazardous child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sri Lanka are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in domestic work. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sri Lanka.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	9.2 (302,865)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	97.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	10.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		96.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Child Activity Survey, 2008–2009.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children, particularly from former conflict zones and from the northern and southeastern plantations and tea estates, are employed as domestic workers in third-party households in Colombo and in other urban areas.(1, 13) There are reports of children being employed as domestic workers due to debt bondage, and of children from tea estates being trafficked internally to perform domestic work in Colombo, for which their payments are withheld and movements are restricted.(2, 3, 11) Some child domestic workers are subject to physical, sexual, and emotional abuse.(3)

There are reports that children are subjected to bonded and forced labor in farming.(11) Children, predominantly boys, are trafficked internally for commercial sexual exploitation in coastal areas as part of the sex tourism industry.(2, 3, 11) Sri Lankan children who move abroad for employment, primarily to Middle Eastern countries, are vulnerable to forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.(11)

There is a lack of current data on child labor, particularly in the agricultural sector and in manufacturing; there is also a lack of data on child labor in the Northern Province, which was excluded from the Government's 2008/2009 Child Activity Survey because of civil conflict in the region.(14)

Most children in Sri Lanka have access to basic education.(5) However, barriers to accessing education include difficulties traveling to school in some regions, lack of sanitation and clean water, and an inadequate supply of teachers. This is particularly true in the Northern and Eastern Provinces, which have been affected by the civil conflict that ended in 2009.(15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Sri Lanka has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Sections 13 and 34 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (16)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Section 43 of the Education Ordinance; Compulsory Attendance of Children at Schools Regulation (21-23)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 47 of the Education Ordinance (22)

* No conscription (24)

There are no laws regulating employment in third-party households; thereby children ages 14 to 18 who are employed as domestic workers are vulnerable to exploitation.(13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor (DOL), Ministry of Labor and Labor Relations (MOLLR)	Enforce child labor laws and receive public complaints of child labor filed in national and district-level offices. Refer cases involving the worst forms of child labor to the police and National Child Protection Authority (NCPA).(25)
Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police (CWBSLP)	Enforce laws on child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities.(10)
NCPA Police Unit	Inspect any premises, interrogate any person, and seize any property suspected to be involved with child abuse, including unlawful child labor.(10, 26)
Department of Probation and Child Care Services (DPCCS)	Coordinate services for child victims of forced labor, trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation who have been referred to DPCCS by the police and the court. Refer children to centers that provide shelter, medical and legal services, psychological counseling, and life and vocational skills training.(27-29)

Law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Department of Labor (DOL)'s inspectorate employed 428 officers to enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor. DOL provided training on legal procedures applying to child labor and hazardous child labor to government officials in districts; it also conducted awareness-raising programs for stakeholders helping to eradicate child labor.(30) More than 400 labor officers received training on the collection of evidence during labor inspections, and training manuals for labor inspectors were translated into the local languages of Sinhala and Tamil.(31)

In 2014, DOL conducted 8,300 labor inspections, which included 200 child labor inspections. No child labor law violations were found during these inspections.(32) During the reporting period, DOL received 133 complaints of child labor, leading to the prosecution of 9 cases. Eight of these cases are pending in court, while one case was finalized with a fine of $750.(32)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Labor Relations (MOLLR) implemented the Labor Inspection System Application (LISA) in five of nine provinces. LISA is an automated system in which trained labor inspectors use handheld tablets to input data and record findings during onsite inspections.(31) In thirty district offices, 140 DOL staff members have been trained in operationalizing LISA.(31) Inspectors can use the application to monitor and track specific children and to ensure that they do not return to child labor once they have been identified and removed.(33, 34)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police (CWBSLP) is staffed by 45 officers in 36 of the country's 460 police stations. In police stations without CWBSLP representation, the officer in charge oversees all the functions of the bureau.(10) The National Child Protection Authority Police Unit (NCPA) has approximately 40 police officers who investigate complaints involving children, including child labor. The agency also has approximately 250 child protection officers based in the districts who are tasked with preventing child exploitation and victim protection.(10, 34) In 2014, the Government conducted training programs on combatting trafficking in persons. The Government also approved standard operating procedures for identifying, protecting, and referring human trafficking victims.(12)

In 2014, there were six reported cases and five settled cases involving forced child labor as a result of human trafficking.(32) Information on the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions of crimes involving the worst forms of child labor is not available for the reporting period. Both the CWBSLP and the NCPA face a shortage of funds that affects their ability to carry out their mandate.(10)

The Government of Sri Lanka has committed to investigating allegations of previous recruitment and use of children in armed conflict by non-state armed forces. While some recruiters of child soldiers were killed during the conflict, research has found no evidence of prosecutions and convictions of living survivors who had violated the law on children and armed conflict.(35-37)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinate the implementation of the Roadmap to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor, the Government's key policy document for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(1, 25, 38) Chaired by the Secretary of MOLLR and includes representatives from key government agencies, employer and workers' organizations, ILO, UNICEF, and NGOs.(25)
NCPA	Coordinate and monitor activities related to the protection of children, including activities to combat the worst forms of child labor.(39) Consult with the relevant Government ministries, local governments, employers, and NGOs, and recommend policies and actions to prevent and protect children from abuse and exploitation.(40)
National Anti-Trafficking Task Force (NTF)	Coordinate government anti-trafficking interventions among ministries, departments, law enforcement agencies, and civil society groups. Led by the Ministry of Justice and includes representatives from NCPA, the Sri Lanka Police, Immigration, Foreign Employment Bureau, and civil society groups.(10, 41)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Sri Lanka has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Sri Lanka's Roadmap 2016 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2011–2016)	Specifies timebound goals, including developing and/or strengthening the management, coordination, implementation, resource mobilization, and reporting of programs that will lead to the elimination of the worst forms of child labor by 2016.(1) Provides district-level mainstreaming strategies to address specific sectors of child labor, including armed conflict, plantations, fisheries, and tourism. Outlines strategies to include child labor issues within social protection and education goals.(1)
The National Human Resources and Employment Policy for Sri Lanka	Provides an overarching umbrella framework to several existing national policies related to employment and human resources formulated by different ministries. Sets eliminating child labor in hazardous activities as a priority and a goal of zero tolerance for the worst forms of child labor by 2016.(42)
National Education Sector Development Framework and Program II (ESDFP-II) (2012–2016)*	Aims to increase the equitable access, quality, and delivery of education. Supports accelerated learning and nonformal education for dropouts from the formal education system.(43)
National Plan of Action on Anti-Human Trafficking	Plans the implementation of anti-trafficking activities for each member of NTF on an annual basis.(41)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

The Government has not yet approved the draft National Child Protection Policy. The Policy is intended to ensure effective coordination among all organizations and actors working for the protection and development of children in Sri Lanka; it also outlines key policy recommendations including strengthening and expanding nonformal education opportunities for vulnerable children (including child laborers) in geographic locations with the highest concentrations of vulnerable households. It recommends measures to prevent and eliminate the trafficking of children including through improved detection and identification of traffickers and victims, and to provide greater protections to child victims.(44)

The Government anticipates that the new national child labor policy, drafted by the National Steering Committee on Child Labor with technical assistance from the ILO, will be finalized in 2015.(32) The draft policy aims to end the worst forms of child labor by 2016 through a variety of activities, including effective enforcement of relevant laws and mainstreaming child labor into key development policies and programs.(10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Sri Lanka funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Free Zone by 2016†‡	Local government initiatives that seek to eliminate child labor through the identification of children engaged in child labor, a rehabilitation program, assistance to families of children at risk of engaging in child labor, and an awareness-raising campaign. Operated by the District Secretariats with assistance from the MOLLR and with technical and financial support from the ILO.(45) The program was piloted in Ratnapura in 2013, and expanded to Kegalle and Ampara districts in 2014.(45-47)
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking	IOM-funded Ministry of Child Development and Women's Affairs (MOCDWA) shelter that provides victims, including children, with safe shelter and access to medical, psychological, and legal assistance. In 2014, MOCDWA and IOM provided training to shelter staff on victim identification, first aid, counseling skills, and security.(12, 48)
Decent Work Country Program (2013–2017)	ILO technical assistance project detailing the policies, strategies, and results required to make progress toward the goal of decent work for all. Includes four strategies to reduce the worst forms of child labor: (1) capacity building for mainstreaming worst forms of child labor into sectorial plans and programs, (2) area-based integrated approach within districts, (3) strengthening institutional mechanisms for improved coordination and monitoring, and (4) development of a knowledge base for tracking progress.(49)
UN Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) (2013–2017)	Agreement pegging UN assistance to Sri Lanka's long-term development priorities with the goal of sustainable and inclusive economic growth with equitable access to quality social services, strengthened human capabilities, and reconciliation for lasting peace. Stipulates that UN agencies will support national efforts to strengthen justice for children and achieve the goal of zero tolerance of the worst forms of child labor, including the trafficking of children for exploitative employment.(50)
Transforming School Education*	A $100 million WB-financed, 5-year education project to support the ESDFP. Objectives include promoting access to primary and secondary education, improving the quality of education, and strengthening governance and delivery of education services.(51) Appoints school attendance committees to promote school enrollment and attendance; runs school nutrition and health programs.(25)
New Beginnings for Children Affected by Conflict and Violence*	USAID-funded project implemented by Save the Children and DPCCS. Objectives include improving care and protection for children, and strengthening child protection mechanisms.(52)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Sri Lanka.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Suriname

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Suriname made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government approved the Roadmap to Combat Human Trafficking in Suriname and investigated and prosecuted human trafficking cases. However, children in Suriname continue to engage in child labor in mining and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Additionally, Suriname has not raised the compulsory education age to be equal the minimum age for employment and does not collect or publish data on child labor inspections and violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Suriname are engaged in child labor, including in mining. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking.(1-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Suriname.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	6.4 (6,671)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	95.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	6.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		87.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(9)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010.(10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting crops,* applying pesticides,† carrying heavy loads† (1, 3)
Industry	Mining, particularly gold mining (1-6)
Services	Street work,* including vending* (1, 3, 5, 6, 11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1-3, 5-8)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, predominantly boys, work in Suriname’s gold mines.(1, 3-5) In gold mining, children carry heavy loads and are exposed to mercury, excessive noise, and extreme heat. Child miners are vulnerable to being crushed by collapsing sand walls.(4) While recent reports suggest that children’s involvement in street vending may be declining, the commercial sexual exploitation of children, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, continues to be a problem, including in mining camps in the country’s interior.(1, 3, 5, 6, 8, 11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Suriname has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 17 of the Labor Code (1, 3-6, 12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 20–21 of the Labor Code (1, 3-5, 12)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Articles 2–3 of the Decree on Hazardous Labor (13, 14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 15 of the Constitution (5, 15)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 307 of the Penal Code (5, 6, 12, 16)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 298 of the Penal Code (1, 3, 5, 6, 12)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 253 and 306–307 of the Penal Code; Articles 3-4 and 12 of the Narcotics Act (1, 3, 5, 6, 12)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 9 of the Legal Status of Military Personnel Act (17, 18)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	12	Article 39 of the Constitution; Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education (4, 6, 13, 15)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 38–39 of the Constitution (15)

* No conscription (17)

Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education requires children to attend school until they are at least age 12.(13) This leaves children between ages 12 and 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are no longer required to attend school and are not legally permitted to work.(1, 4) The Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Labor, Technology, and Employment (MLTE) began collaborating to draft legislation that would raise the compulsory education age to 16, pending parliamentary approval.(19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Suriname

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Technology, and Environment (MLTE)/ Department of Labor Inspections	Enforce laws related to child labor in the formal sector.(4, 5)
Ministry of Justice and Police	Enforce criminal laws related to child labor. Monitor and enforce child labor laws in the informal sector, including on the streets.(3, 5, 6) The Youth Affairs Police covers law enforcement involving children under age 18 and is jointly responsible for child labor-related crimes.(3, 5) The Trafficking in Persons Unit of Police investigates reports and allegations of trafficking in persons and forced sexual exploitation nationwide, including cases involving children.(5, 6)

Law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the MLTE employed 66 labor inspectors, a decrease of 14 since 2013.(6, 19) There are no child labor-specific inspections; however, standard training for all labor inspectors includes identification of child labor violations.(6, 19) Labor inspections involve site visits and desk reviews; inspectors have the authority to assess penalties, which vary from fines to suspension of licenses. The MLTE collected data on the number of labor inspections conducted in 2014, but it has not made this information publicly available. There were no reports of child labor violations or of children who were removed by labor inspectors, nor were any penalties issued or fines collected that were related to child labor violations.(19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Unit of Police has 13 full-time officers and has insufficient staff and resources. TIP officers and regular police officers both need additional training to refresh their knowledge from the basic course and learn updated techniques.(19)

In 2014, the TIP Unit of Police investigated 15 potential cases of sex trafficking and 4 potential cases of forced labor; three underage girls were removed from forced prostitution and were provided with basic necessities as a result of investigations in 2014. According to the Prosecutors' Office, investigations are initiated only as a result of complaints filed and are limited by a lack of resources, especially for travel to the interior of the country.(19, 20) When the Youth Affairs Police finds children working on the street, these children are sometimes registered and sent home without being referred to any relevant services.(5, 6) Child trafficking victims are referred to shelters operated by NGOs; however, in 2014, some were placed in juvenile detention facilities due to lack of space in the shelters.(1, 3, 16)

In 2014, three new cases were presented for prosecution for forced child prostitution.(19) During the reporting period, 10 persons were convicted on charges of sex trafficking of minors. Sentences varied from 1 to 9 years of imprisonment.(19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinate efforts to combat child labor, including by researching different forms of child labor, advising on policy related to combating child labor, and formulating an action plan.(6) Comprises 11 members, with representation from the Presidential Commission on Child and Adolescent Policy; labor unions; private sector entities; academic institutions; NGOs; the MLTE; and the Ministries of Social Affairs, Education, Regional Development, Justice and Police.(1, 3, 6)
Anti-Trafficking Working Group	Coordinate the Government's anti-trafficking efforts.(1, 3, 5, 6) Provide care to victims of trafficking through government-supported NGOs.(6, 21) Has seven members, six from government agencies and one representing the NGO community. Initiatives include those that target the worst forms of child labor, such as the commercial sexual exploitation of children.(3, 5, 6)

During the reporting period, the National Commission for the Elimination of Child Labor (NCECL) continued to lead government efforts to eliminate child labor; the NCECL's mandate expired at the end of 2014 and is pending renewal. In December, the Government announced plans to disband the Anti-Trafficking Working Group and create a new interagency coordinating mechanism to oversee anti-trafficking efforts; the Anti-Trafficking Working Group's current operational status is unclear.(19)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Suriname has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Action Plan (2011–2014)	Establishes intergovernmental strategies to address children's rights and child labor. Implemented by the Ministry of Social Affairs.(19)
Roadmap to Combat Human Trafficking in Suriname (2014–2018)†	Outlines policy to combat trafficking in persons through 2018. Approved by the Council of Ministries in April 2014 and is still in the initial stages.(19)
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014–2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation to eradicate child labor by 2020 through signatories' efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Suriname at the ILO's 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru (October 2014).(22, 23)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2013, the NCECL began drafting a National Action Plan on Combatting Child Labor, but the draft has not yet been completed. (6)

In September 2014, Suriname participated in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. Held in Bridgetown, Barbados, these discussions promoted the exchange of information on policies and programs that seek to formalize the informal sector, uphold workers' rights, and prevent and eliminate child labor.(24, 25)

The Government of Suriname also participates in several regional initiatives to address child labor in the tourism industry. Suriname's Ministry of Transport, Communication, and Tourism participates in the Joint Group for the Elimination of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children in Tourism, which comprises members from the Ministries of Tourism of 10 Latin American countries and implements awareness-raising campaigns throughout the region.(3, 5, 6) Suriname is also a member of the Joint Regional Group for the Americas, which conducts child labor prevention and awareness-raising campaigns in tourism; the Group's members include Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(26)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Suriname funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Country-Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor Project (2013–2017)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in at least 10 countries to build the local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. Aims to improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor in Suriname; will implement a National Action Plan on the elimination of child labor and support a national child labor survey.(27)
Child and Youth Hotline‡	Government-run hotline that provides confidential advice to children in need, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. Receives approximately 80 calls per day.(19)
Anti-Trafficking Hotline‡	Government-sponsored hotline through which citizens can provide information to the police about trafficking cases; received no calls in 2014.(8, 19)
Human Trafficking Awareness Programs‡	Government-funded anti-trafficking activities.(6, 13, 21)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Basic Education Program (2004–2014)*	IDB, $14 million project to improve basic education. Implemented through the Ministry of Education. Aims to enhance education quality and reduce student dropout rates.(3, 5) Five major project components are enacting institutional reform, updating school curricula, improving educational materials, enhancing teacher capacity, and providing technical assistance.(3, 6)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Suriname.

In 2013, the Ministry of Social Affairs began the process of establishing a shelter for child trafficking victims. However, the shelter was not yet open at the end of the reporting period.(6)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Suriname (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Increase the compulsory education age to at least 14, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2014
Enforcement	Make publicly available information on the number of annual labor inspections and violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2014
	Allocate sufficient funding to ensure that all criminal enforcement officers receive adequate training in human trafficking and have the resources necessary to conduct investigations, particularly in the interior of the country.	2014
	Create a mechanism to refer children discovered working on the streets to the appropriate services, thus helping to prevent their return to work.	2010 – 2014
Social Programs	Ensure that child trafficking victims receive appropriate social services and shelter.	2014
	Assess the impact that existing educational programs may have on child labor.	2009 – 2014

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Swaziland made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government paid some school fees for orphans and vulnerable children and also announced plans to cover the fees for the final year of primary school in 2014. However, children in Swaziland are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation and livestock herding as a result of human trafficking. The Government was delinquent in paying school fees in half of the country's schools and significant gaps in laws remain, including the lack of a compulsory education age. Additionally, Government officials cited a lack of clarity on the definition of child labor, which hinders their ability to effectively combat the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Swaziland are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and livestock herding. (1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Swaziland.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	11.7 (35,368)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	13.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		76.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(3)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from MICS 4 Survey, 2010.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Growing maize,* picking cotton,* and harvesting sugarcane* (1, 5)
	Herding cattle* and other livestock* (1, 5)
Services	Domestic work* (1, 5)
	Serving alcohol in alcohol selling establishments*† (5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Street work, including as vendors,* bus attendants,* taxi conductors,* and haggling* (5, 6)
	Herding livestock,* domestic work,* farming,* and market vending,* as a result of human trafficking (2, 6, 7)
	Commercial sexual exploitation* (1, 2, 7)
	Used in illicit activities, including growing, manufacturing, and selling drugs* (5)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Swaziland is a destination and transit country for trafficking of children, specifically for commercial sexual exploitation, forced domestic work, and forced labor in agriculture. Some Mozambican boys migrate to Swaziland to conduct street work or to work in herding livestock and subsequently become victims of trafficking.(7) Swaziland has one of the world's highest HIV/AIDS prevalence rates, affecting more than a quarter of the population. According to UNICEF's 2010 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey, 23.6 percent of children under age 18 have lost at least one parent, mostly as a result of HIV/AIDS.(8-10) Furthermore, a source indicates that orphans face unfair and unequal treatment in schools.(1) These factors may increase the risk of children being involved in the worst forms of child labor. Although the Government has conducted surveys on the general labor force, the surveys did not cover child labor; the Government also has not made it a policy to collect data on the worst forms of child labor.(11-13) Children's vulnerability to exploitative labor is further increased by illegal and substantial school fees required by school officials, which create a barrier to education.(1) However, the Government paid some school fees for orphans and vulnerable children. Although the Government had announced plans to cover the fees for the final year of primary school during the year, it was delinquent in paying school fees in half of the country's schools.(14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Swaziland has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 234 of the Children Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 236 of the Children Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Articles 233, 236 and 237 of the Children Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution (16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 75 of the Children Protection and Welfare Act; Article 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (15, 17)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Crimes Act; Obscene Publications Act (6)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 16 and 49 of Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Section 17(3) of the Umutfo Swaziland Defense Force Order (1977) (18)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 29 (6) of the Constitution; section 3 of the Free Primary Education Act (2010) (16, 19)

*No conscription (18)

Swaziland has no law that mandates compulsory education for children. This may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school.(6, 19) Section 97 of the Employment Act prohibits the employment of children in industrial undertakings but does not prohibit the employment of children in domestic and agricultural work.(20) Likewise, Articles 233, 236, and 237 of the Children Protection and Welfare Act prohibit hazardous work for children in industrial undertakings including mining, manufacturing, and electrical work but these prohibitions do not extend to children working in the agricultural sector.(15) In previous years, the Government indicated its intention to adopt more comprehensive

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

hazardous work prohibitions for children through a regulation issued by the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS). (19) Article 16 of the Children Protection and Welfare Act prohibits using children in illicit activities, such as producing and distributing drugs, alcohol, and tobacco but it does not prohibit other illicit activities, including the use of children in gang-related activities. (15) The Government drafted a Sexual Offenses and Domestic Violence Bill, but it has yet to enact the Bill. (1) Act No. 6 of the 1998 Administrative Order grants local chiefs the power to require any resident, including children, to perform agricultural and other work, or to face penalties. There are reports that local chiefs continue to implement this Order, despite the High Court's declaration that it is null and void. (2, 5, 21, 22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforce child labor laws and promote relations between labor, government, and business through tripartite dialogue. (1, 23)
Department of Social Welfare	Enforce child labor laws by looking out for the interests of vulnerable populations, including orphans, children, and elderly people. (1, 23)
Royal Swaziland Police	Enforce child labor laws, including those related to children's rights. (1, 23)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Swaziland took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions. (24, 25)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the MLSS employed 30 labor inspectors during the reporting period. (24) Three of the labor inspectors were designated to address the worst forms of child labor. (25) During the year, the MLSS was allocated $3 million for its budget. (24) Two alleged violations of child labor laws occurred during the reporting period and were reported to the police and the MLSS; these cases remain under investigation. (25) Research did not find information on the total number of inspections carried out during the year, the number of unannounced inspections, and whether the labor inspectorate has authority to issue penalties. (24, 25) The Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) has indicated that it does not have sufficient resources, including transportation, to conduct inspections. (1) There also does not appear to be a system to record child labor complaints.

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research was unable to find information on the number of criminal law enforcement officials and the overall number of investigations performed. During the year, the Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Secretariat conducted a series of trainings for police and the Ministry of Labor and Social Security's (MLSS) labor inspectors on coordination mechanisms, victim identification, and processing to enable them to better address trafficking cases. (7) During the reporting period two alleged violations of child labor laws were reported to the police and the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS); these cases remain under investigation. (25) In 2014, a child was trafficked domestically and sexually exploited; the case is pending. The second case involved a child who was trafficked to Mozambique, which resulted in the child's repatriation to Swaziland. (7) There were no convictions for trafficking of children during the year. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Trafficking in Persons Secretariat	Coordinate, monitor, and implement programs to combat trafficking of persons, with the assistance of the Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force. (26)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force	Exchange information on cases of trafficking between relevant stakeholders, including the police, social services, and prosecutors. Comprises a conglomerate of NGOs and government entities, including The Royal Swaziland Police; Director of Public Prosecutions; Attorney General's office; Department of Social Welfare; Department of Health; Ministry of Foreign Affairs; and Ministry of Labor and Social Security.(1, 25)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Swaziland has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan (NAP) for Children	Government plan that implements the Children's Protection and Welfare Act and covers children engaged in harmful, hazardous, and exploitative work.(19)
National Plan of Action for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (2011–2015)*	Includes nine strategic objectives, including providing education, psychosocial support, child protection, research and monitoring, and support to help orphans and vulnerable children (OVCs) enroll in school. Does not explicitly address child labor, but includes child laborers among the most vulnerable children.(27)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2011–2015)*	Seeks to improve access to quality basic social services, especially for women, children, and disadvantaged groups.(28)
National Children's Policy*	Represents the policy framework of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act.(19)
National Social Development Policy*	Provides protections for children including OVCs, street children, children with disabilities, and others.(19)
Education Sector Policy*	Seeks to provide equitable access to education.(19)
National Strategic Framework and Action Plan to Combat People Trafficking	Assigns responsibilities to relevant Government agencies on trafficking in persons.(26)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

The Government has not progressed to implement the Action Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC).(25) The National Task Team drafted an Action Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC), in 2008, which includes legal protections outlined in the Children's Protection and Welfare Act. However, the APEC was not adopted during the reporting period.(1, 6, 19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Swaziland participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2010–2014)*	ILO program seeking to raise awareness of and provide training programs on international labor standards, with the aim of domesticating the ratified ILO conventions. ILO has been assisting the Government with the adoption of the APEC.(29)
Free Primary Education Program (FPE) (2009–2015)*‡	Government program to provide free primary education to children through grade six; was extended from grade five to grade six in 2014.(1)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (2011–2015)	USDOL-funded project, implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries, to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Swaziland.(30)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Swaziland.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Government resources allocated to education, the fight against HIV/AIDS, and other social protection programs that may impact the worst forms of child labor are still limited, and existing social programs lack components on child labor.(1, 31) Although the Government expanded the Free Primary Education Program to extend coverage to children up to grade six, it was delinquent in paying school fees throughout the year, resulting in the children being susceptible to child labor for not attending school.(14) The Government, in collaboration with NGOs, provided trafficking victims with basic necessities, such as food, clothing, shelter, toiletries, counseling, and medical care.(7) Research found no evidence of social protection programs for the withdrawal from or prevention of children working in agriculture and livestock herding.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Swaziland (Table 9).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, the United Republic of Tanzania made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government, in coordination with the ILO, conducted a National Child Labor Survey and continued to support programs on the elimination of child labor. However, children in Tanzania are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining. In addition, gaps remain in the laws regulating children's engagement in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tanzania are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children also are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tanzania.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Tanzania is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking.(39, 40) Trafficking of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation is a problem in Tanzania, which particularly affects children trafficked internally.(37, 39, 40) Trafficking often involves family members, friends, or brokers, who promise rural families jobs or assistance with the education of their children in the urban areas of Arusha, Dar es Salaam, and Mwanza.(39) Children are trafficked for domestic work; girls are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, including along the Kenya-Tanzania border and in touristic areas in the country. (5, 35, 37, 38, 40) Children from Burundi and Kenya are trafficked to Tanzania for mining, domestic work, and agricultural labor.(40)

While the Primary Education Development Plan makes primary school education free, students or their parents are required to contribute money to pay for books, school feeding programs, the construction of classrooms, and the provision of teachers' houses. (5, 41) In addition, corporal punishment in schools is lawful in Tanzania and, while information is limited, data have shown that the use of corporal punishment by teachers might increase dropout rates.(17, 42-45) Furthermore, some children may lack birth registration, which makes it difficult for them to access education, health care, and other social services.(23, 29, 46) As a result of HIV/AIDS, some children must work for survival; thus, they become heads of household and are unable to attend school. (29, 47)

* No conscription (56)

Tanzania's Constitution stipulates which laws apply across the entire United Republic, but labor laws are not included.(53, 58) Therefore, mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar have separate legislation governing child labor.(1) In addition to the legal frameworks of mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar on child labor, some districts have incorporated restrictions against child labor into their local bylaws.(11)

Because mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar have different labor laws, each has different laws for the minimum age for work and governing hazardous labor.(48, 49, 51-53, 56) Zanzibar has two different laws that provide a minimum age for work. Article 98 of the Zanzibar Children's Act prohibits children under age 15 from working, while Zanzibar Employment Act No. 11 of 2005 stipulates 17 as the minimum age for work.(50-52) As a result, the minimum age for work in Zanzibar is unclear. In contrast, the minimum age for work on mainland Tanzania is 14.(48, 49)

While the Constitution and mainland Tanzania's Employment and Labor Relations Act, the Law of the Child Act, Zanzibar Children's Act, and Zanzibar Employment Act No. 11 of 2005 prohibit forced labor, the National Defense Act and the Constitution include exceptions for forced labor through compulsory national service.(48, 50-53, 56) The Zanzibar Employment Act permits children in Zanzibar under the minimum working age to engage in domestic work, while the Children's Act does not specify whether its protections cover children engaged in domestic work. Mainland Tanzania's law does not explicitly prohibit child domestic work.(48, 51)

While Zanzibar clearly prohibits the use of children for illicit activities, mainland Tanzania does not clearly provide penalties for using children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.(52)

Although Tanzania's age for voluntary military recruitment is 18, children younger than age 18 may volunteer with the consent of parents, guardians, or (if orphaned) that of the local district commission.(56, 59)

Tanzania has an education policy that provides for free education, but it is not required by law.(60) The National Education Act of 1978 requires that children enroll in primary education at age 7, with primary education lasting for 7 years; thus, the compulsory education age is 14.(57)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) (mainland)—Child Labor Unit	Enforce child labor laws at the national level.(1, 5)
MOLE (mainland)—Labor Administration and Inspection Section	Coordinate labor inspections carried out by the area offices and prepare, review, and recommend guidelines on labor inspection services and compliance with labor legislation. Provide legal guidance upon request, disseminate information to employers and employees on their rights and obligations, and assist area offices in conducting labor inspections.(61)
MOLE (mainland)—Labor Officers	Inspect locales for suspected violations of child labor laws.(1) Assigned to each region of Tanzania. Respond to reports of child labor violations, issue noncompliance orders, and report incidents to local police authorities and other responsible ministries.(1) Accept complaints about violations of child labor law.(1)
Ministry of Community Development, Gender, and Children	Enforce child protection laws and regulations, employ community development officers to monitor child labor at the district and village levels, and report findings to the Regional Administration and Local Government (PMORALG).(2, 16) Coordinate all children's issues as a result of the Child Development Policy of 2008. Key advocate for the primary education agenda at the community level.(60)
Ministry of Health and Social Welfare	Implement, monitor, and evaluate health and social welfare policies, including those pertaining to children.(62) Support vulnerable groups of children through the National Costed Plan of Action for Most Vulnerable Children.(60, 62) Employ Social Welfare Officers at the district level to monitor child labor at the district and village levels, and report findings to the PMORALG.(63)
Ministry of Labor, Economic Empowerment and Cooperatives—Labor Commission (Zanzibar)	Enforce Zanzibar's child labor laws and administer the provisions of the Zanzibar Labor Act, including inspections.(1, 11, 27) Investigate reports of child labor reported by the police and refer cases to social welfare officers for support.(1, 11, 50, 61)
Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth Development (Zanzibar)—Child Protection Unit	Ensure compliance with child protection laws, including those pertaining to child labor.(62)
Tanzania Police Force(mainland)	Investigate cases of child labor reported to police stations, and in some cases, refer them to labor officers or solicit the assistance of social welfare officers; includes a Trafficking desk and Gender and Children's desks to handle cases pertaining to children.(11, 37, 64)
Zanzibar Police Force (Zanzibar)	Investigate and compile reports of incidents of child abuse, child labor, human trafficking, rape, and other forms of child endangerment.(11, 37)
INTERPOL Criminal Investigation Department—INTERPOL National Central Bureau for Tanzania	Investigate various priority crimes, including trafficking in persons and illegal immigration. Headed by a Commissioner of Police, is staffed by 23 police officers, and includes focal points responsible for trafficking.(11, 65)
Ministry of Home Affairs (mainland)	Enforce anti-trafficking laws, including those pertaining to child trafficking, laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities.(11)
Ministry of Health and Social Welfare (Zanzibar)	Enforce anti-trafficking laws, including those pertaining to child trafficking.(11)

Law enforcement agencies in Tanzania took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) regulations dictate that one or more labor officers be assigned to each region; however, research was unable to determine whether each region had a dedicated labor officer during the reporting period.(1) In 2014, the mainland MOLE released a report stating that it had employed 77 labor inspectors the previous year; however, this number is inadequate based on the size of the workforce. The number of labor inspectors for Zanzibar was unavailable.(14) No training sessions on child labor were conducted for labor inspectors, either on the mainland or in Zanzibar, in 2014.(14) The mainland MOLE did not report its level of funding for inspections, but it did report that the level of funding was inadequate. (66) Zanzibar had $8,500 for activities, including child labor inspections; the Ministry of Labor, Economic Empowerment, and Cooperatives reported that this amount of funding was inadequate.(14) On the mainland, 1,843 labor inspections were conducted during the reporting year. Zanzibar conducted 111 inspections between June and December 2014.(14) Inspections on the mainland have previously been carried out in establishments covering the agriculture, mining, domestic work, hotels, trade, industry and commerce, construction, and fishing sectors.(6) While inspectors on the mainland are able to conduct unannounced and proactive inspections, they rarely do so; inspections often are the result of specific requests. Reporting and referral mechanisms are also reported to be lacking.(14) Comprehensive information was not found on the number of violations found or penalties issued. The MOLE did not submit any cases related to child labor to the courts in 2014.(66)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, comprehensive information was not available on the number of criminal law enforcement investigators; the number, type, and quality of investigations; and the number of prosecutions, convictions, and penalties. During the reporting period, new police officers received training on human trafficking.(39)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Inter-Sectoral Coordination Committee (NISCC)	Oversee interagency child labor policy coordination, provide guidance on the overall implementation of child labor activities, and strengthen local structural capacity to address child labor.(6, 67) Chaired by the Prime Minister's Office—PMORALG; members include the Ministries of Labor, Community Development, Gender and Children, and Health and Social Welfare, as well as NGOs.(1, 6, 28)
Anti-Trafficking Secretariat and Anti-Trafficking Committee	Promote, define, and coordinate policy to prevent trafficking.(3, 37, 54)
Regional Task Force on Human Trafficking and Illegal Immigration	Maintain a list of service providers to which trafficking victims can be referred.(36, 68)
District Child Labor Committees	Coordinate and oversee the implementation of efforts to eliminate child labor at the district level. Members include the District Executive Director, Commanding District Officer, District Community Development Officer, District Education Officer, District Medical Officer, Social Welfare Officer, District Trade Officer, Legal Officer, Cooperative Officer, Planning Officer, representatives from regional affiliations, and representatives from NGOs and community-based organizations that deal with child labor.(2, 6) There are 14 District Child Labor Committees.(7)
Village Child Labor Committees	Coordinate and oversee efforts related to child labor at the village level.(6)
Zanzibar Child Labor Steering Committee	Coordinate various implementing agencies responsible for child labor. Provide policy guidance on the Zanzibar National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. Exchange information with the mainland Tanzania NISCC.(11)
Most Vulnerable Children Committees	Identify children involved in or at risk of becoming involved in child labor at the ward and village levels, and refer children to social services.(2, 62)
Multi-Sector Task Force on Violence Against Children	Implement the 3-year National Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children and enforce the Law of the Child Act.(44, 69)

The National Inter-Sectoral Committee on Child Labor did not meet during the reporting period. This is insufficient to deal with the scope of the child labor problem in Tanzania.(14)

In 2014, the Anti-Trafficking Secretariat (ATS) and Anti-Trafficking Committee met six times to draft and approve the regulations and standard operating procedures required to implement the 2008 Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act and to draft a new Anti-Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan. The ATS received a budget allocation of approximately $45,000.(39)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Tanzania.

In 2014, Thailand made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite political unrest during the year and a military coup in May 2014, the Government took actions to address child labor. Thailand made changes to its legal framework to raise the minimum age for agricultural work from 13 to 15 years, and for work on sea fishing vessels from 16 to 18 years. It also created a national policy committee, including several subcommittees and task forces, to improve policy formulation, interagency coordination, and implementation regarding migrant workers and human trafficking problems. In addition, the Government funded and participated in multiple programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. However, children in Thailand continue to engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the shrimp and seafood processing sector, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Thailand remains weak in its enforcement efforts, particularly in the fishing, agriculture, manufacturing, and home-based business sectors, as well as in the informal sector. The Government also lacks nationwide data on child labor, which impedes the effectiveness of policies and programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Thailand are engaged in child labor in agriculture, including in the shrimp and seafood processing sector.(1) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Thailand. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

	Vending, begging, and domestic service each as a result of human trafficking (2, 22)
	Forced labor in the production of garments, in shrimp and seafood processing, in domestic service, and in begging (7, 15, 22, 25, 26)
	Use of children in armed violence, such as serving as scouts, informants, and committing acts of arson (13, 27)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Shrimp and seafood processing occurs in the central, eastern, and southern coastal regions of Thailand.(1) Children perform activities such as preparing shrimp or fish ponds, feeding and maintaining the stock, sorting fish, removing the heads of shrimp and fish, peeling shrimp in factory lines where blood vessels and bones are removed from fish, and freezing and weighing processed fish or shrimp.(1, 5, 6, 28) The majority of child laborers in this sector are between the ages of 15 and 17, and both boys and girls are equally engaged in labor, with slightly more girls working than boys.(1) Child labor in the shrimp and seafood processing sector is predominant among migrant children, but it is also found among Thai children in the southern provinces.(1)

Children as young as age 7 are paid to fight in a form of boxing called Muay Thai, in which they use knees, elbows, hands, and feet to fight with no protective equipment.(17-20) Work in a gambling place is deemed hazardous by Thai law; however, gamblers place bets on the children who are fighting.(19, 20)

Children are also trafficked to and within Thailand for commercial sexual exploitation and labor exploitation. They are trafficked to Thailand primarily from Burma, Cambodia, and Laos, and from within Thailand, for commercial sexual exploitation.(2) Some children who are trafficked are forced to sell flowers and candy and beg on the streets.(22) Children are also trafficked to and within Thailand into Bangkok and other urban areas to work as domestic servants.(2, 15) Migrant children may be subjected to forced labor in the production of garments, in shrimp and seafood processing, in domestic service, and in begging. (7, 15, 22, 25, 26)

Access to education, particularly for migrant and ethnic minority children, is limited by a variety of factors. These factors include a lack of awareness among local government officials and migrant families of migrant children’s right to an education; language barriers, including class instruction and school applications only available in the Thai language; the long distances children must travel to attend school; and family pressure to work rather than attend school.(29)

Thailand continues to experience ethno-nationalist separatist insurgency activity in its four southernmost provinces. Children, teachers, and other education personnel have been killed or wounded in the conflict, which has forced the intermittent closure of schools in the region.(27, 30) There is some evidence that separatist groups recruited children to commit acts of arson, serve as scouts or informants, and sometimes as combatants.(13, 27, 31) There are also reports of children’s involvement as village defense volunteers.(13, 27)

The Government lacks current nationwide data on the worst forms of child labor.(29) In addition, current reporting and statistics on child labor often omit street children and migrant children.(13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Thailand has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In 2014, the Government made several changes to strengthen the legal framework to combat child labor. The Labor Protection Act's (LPA) Ministerial Regulation on Agricultural Work, signed by the Minister of Labor on December 12, 2014, increases the minimum age for agricultural work from age 13 to 15 in order to comply with ILO C. 138.(21) The LPA Ministerial Regulation on Sea Fishing Vessels, signed by the Minister of Labor on December 22, 2014, includes an increase in the minimum age of workers from age 16 to 18. The regulation applies protections for fishers on all fishing boats regardless of the number of workers, and mandates employment contracts and payroll records.(21) On December 16, 2014, the Government announced the Marine Department Regulation on Boat Registration, which took effect on January 15, 2015. The new regulation requires all fishing boats 30 tons or larger to be registered with the Marine Department, and for employers to present documents for each worker to the Marine Department for verification.(21)

Neither the new Ministerial Regulation on Agricultural Work nor the Ministerial Regulation on Labor and Welfare Protection for Domestic Workers specifies the maximum number of hours children ages 15 to 17 may work.(21) Additionally, Thailand does not have legislation specifically to protect children and punish offenders in all aspects of child pornography, although draft legislation is pending.(39) These gaps hinder the prosecution of child pornography offenders and protection for child pornography victims. (29, 40)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor, Protection, and Welfare (DLPW) of the Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce labor laws, including the Labor Protection Act and Occupational Safety, Health, and Environment Act, through workplace inspections.(21) Operate a DLPW telephone hotline, Hotline 1546, to answer questions involving working conditions and receive complaints from the public about child labor.(41, 42)
Fishing Coordination Centers (operated jointly by the Department of Employment, DLPW, and the Marine Police)	Monitor and inspect working conditions of fishing vessels. Aim to increase protection for workers, and allow migrants to become legalized through a registration process.(29, 40)
Anti-Human Trafficking Division (AHTD) of the Royal Thai Police (RTP)	Enforce laws specifically related to forced labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of women and children.(29) Operate AHTD Hotline 1191 to receive complaints regarding human trafficking and violence against children and women.(21)
Department of Special Investigations (DSI) in the Ministry of Justice	Investigate complicated human trafficking crimes, including those related to government officials' complicity and transnational or organized crime. MOU between the RTP and DSI states that a NGO or social worker can choose which entity will investigate and that such entity must work on the case from start to finish.(29, 40, 43)
RTP and Attorney General	Enforce the Transnational Organized Crime Act.(40)

Law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Department of Labor, Protection, and Welfare (DLPW) employed 594 inspectors, which the DLPW recognized as insufficient to adequately monitor all workplaces covered by Thai labor laws.(21) The DLPW reported that 221 labor inspectors were trained on child labor, hazardous child labor, and the worst forms of child labor.(21) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) hired interpreters in eight provinces with large populations of migrant workers. In other provinces, labor inspectors must rely on interpreters provided by the employer or on the assistance of other migrant workers inside the factory. (21) The DLPW has authorized the Marine Police, Thai Navy, and Department of Fisheries to conduct labor inspections on sea-fishing vessels; approximately 160 officers from the Marine Police and Navy are trained and registered as labor inspectors.(21) The DLPW received a budget of $798,093 for fiscal year 2014 labor inspections, a small decrease from the previous year's budget of $812,496. (21)

During the reporting period, labor inspectors conducted 39,185 workplace inspections. Inspectors conduct both unannounced inspections in targeted industries that they believe are more at risk for violations or when complaints are received, and pre-announced inspections to advise employers and employees of their rights, duties, and appropriate labor practices.(21) In 2014, Thailand created multidisciplinary inspection teams consisting of labor inspectors, police, and NGO representatives to conduct inspections in targeted geographic areas and sectors such as shrimp and seafood processing and fishing. These inspections have been reported as more cost-effective, reducing opportunities for bribery, increasing the ability to enforce the laws under the authority of different agencies, and beneficial, particularly in hard-to-reach workplaces such as on fishing boats.(21) Observers commented that inspections were focused on medium-size workplaces and export-oriented industries, and neglected other sectors and workplaces where child labor may also exist. The lack of nationwide data on child labor hampers the ability to conduct targeted inspections. (21)

Labor inspectors found violations in eight workplaces, involving 20 children. Violations included under-age child labor, working without payment, working during the night, and failure to notify the DLPW of having employed children ages 15 to 18.(21) The DLPW confirmed that in cases where fines were applied, they were collected; however, penalties are infrequently applied in accordance with the parameters prescribed by law.(21, 29, 44)

Enforcement of the list of hazardous work prohibited for children is concentrated in the formal sector, such as the industrial and service sectors.(29) Under the Home Workers Protection Act, the DLPW now includes home-based workplaces under its purview.(29) However, labor inspectors have limited access to the entities covered by the Act, including home-based businesses and employment sites, which require a warrant to access an individual's property. This makes it very challenging to inspect private homes in order to monitor the welfare of child domestic workers or children working in home-based employment.(13, 29) Additionally, at times, labor inspectors are afraid of being sued by employers, as neither the law nor the institutional policies provide adequate protection or financial assistance to labor inspectors who are sued.(21)

The complaint mechanisms remain weak for migrant workers who cannot speak and read Thai, and for those in the informal sector and in remote areas, including on fishing vessels.(21, 29)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Anti-Human Trafficking Division (AHTD) of the Royal Thai Police (RTP) and the Department of Special Investigations in the Ministry of Justice comprised approximately 300 and 25 officials, respectively, who were responsible for enforcing laws specifically related to forced child labor, trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(21) During the reporting period, approximately 10,271 government officials, including police and labor inspectors, received training on combating human trafficking.(26)

From October 2013 to September 2014, the RTP conducted criminal investigations of 27 child forced labor cases involving 46 children, and of 139 child commercial sexual exploitation and pornography cases involving 186 children.(21) In 2014, the RTP initiated investigations into 280 trafficking cases involving 595 victims, including 380 victims under 18 years old. These cases included 222 sex-trafficking cases, 11 forced begging cases, and 47 forced labor cases.(26) Also in 2014, the RTP conducted criminal investigations of 2,217 illicit activities cases, primarily drug-related, involving 2,191 children.(21)

Criminal law enforcement is hampered by systematic bribery and corruption, with law enforcement officials involved in brothels or karaoke bars, including those purchasing sex with underage girls; these officials are also believed to be involved with human smuggling networks.(21)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Committee to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinate the implementation of child labor policies and plans, facilitate cooperation among various coordinating ministries, and report annually to the Thai Cabinet on child labor issues.(45) Chaired by the MOL, with representation from other government agencies, employer and worker associations, and civil society groups.(46) Oversee three subcommittees that monitor the National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2009-2014); update the list of hazardous activities prohibited for children under age 18; and work on key performance indicators to measure and eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Thailand.(45, 47)
National Policy Committee on Anti-Trafficking in Persons and Illegal, Unreported, and Unregulated Fishing*	Coordinate anti-trafficking in persons policies and activities and is chaired by the Prime Minister. Includes five subcommittees to drive policy, including the Subcommittee on Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Migrants Workers chaired by the Minister of Labor.(39) Also includes the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee and the Policy Committee on the Resolution of Migrant Labor and Human Trafficking Problems.(39)
National Operation Center for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking	Coordinate anti-human trafficking activities, including those involving child forced labor, trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation and is located under the Ministry of Social Development and Human Security (MSDHS). Monitor the work of 76 Provincial Operation Centers for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking, which serve as the frontline implementers of anti-human trafficking activities.(29)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In December 2014, the Government created a National Policy Committee on Anti-Trafficking in Persons and Illegal, Unreported, and Unregulated Fishing. In addition to five new subcommittees, this committee now oversees the National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee created in 2008, the new Policy Committee on the Resolution of Migrant Labor and Human Trafficking Problems—which replaced the former National Committee on the Management of Illegal Migrant Workers set up in 2001, and the new Subcommittee on the Coordination of the Action to Resolve Migrant Labor and Human Trafficking Problems.(39)

Thailand has MOUs on operational procedures for concerned agencies in combating human trafficking with Burma, Cambodia, Japan, Laos, and Vietnam. During the reporting period, the MOU between Thailand and Cambodia was updated in order to comply with 2008 Thai Anti-Trafficking in Persons laws.(21)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Thailand has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
The National Plan of Action (NPA) to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2009–2014)	Aims to prevent, protect, and withdraw children from the worst forms of child labor, improve legislation and law enforcement related to the worst forms of child labor, and build the capacity of officials who administer policies and programs on the worst forms of child labor.(45, 48, 49) Key performance indicators include reduced number of children engaging in the worst forms of child labor; increased efforts to remove children from the worst forms of child labor; increased criminal prosecutions against employers who exploit children; increased capacity and knowledge of practitioners working in this field; and increased national- and provincial-level administrative and management efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.(50) In October 2014, an evaluation of the 5-year plan was started, which will provide input for the second phase of the NPA (2015 – 2020).(21)
The National Policy, Strategy, and Measures for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons (2011–2016)	Contains five strategies that are operationalized in annual action plans.(51) Strategies include prevention, prosecution, protection and assistance, development of policy and promotion mechanisms, and development and management of information.(52)
National Child and Youth Development Plan (2012–2016)*	Seeks to advance principles that include (1) the enforcement and implementation of the National Child and Youth Development Promotion Act of 2007 and relevant laws; (2) the idea that every child and young person has the right to basic education of the highest quality; (3) the notion that children and youth have the right to basic health care services of the highest standard; and (4) the idea that children and youth have the right to play, rest, and participate in recreational activities. (53, 54)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Thailand funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National and Provincial Operation Centers for Providing Assistance to Women and Child Laborers‡	DLPW program that provides assistance to women and child laborers, collects and disseminates information on the worst forms of child labor; reports their activities to the National Committee to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor.(50)
Government Shelters for Trafficking Victims‡	MSDHS' Bureau of Anti-Trafficking in Women and Children operates 76 Provincial Operation Centers to provide emergency assistance and protection to human trafficking victims. Nine long-term shelters offer medical care, psychosocial services, education, and life skills education for human trafficking victims. (10, 55, 56) In 2014, government shelters provided services to 303 trafficked victims, including 138 children under the age of 18.(26)
Migrant Learning Centers‡*	Government and nonprofit organizations program to provide basic education to children in migrant communities. Government District Education Offices provide guidance and technical support to ensure that children receive a learning assessment and meet the qualifications to earn a certificate of completion issued by the Ministry of Education.(10)

Program	Description
Asia-Australia Program to Combat Trafficking in Person (AAPTIP) (2013 – 2018)	$45 million Australian-Aid-funded, 5-year ASEAN regional project to build capacity and strengthen access to criminal justice for trafficking victims.(21) In 2014, the Government of Thailand agreed to participate in projects that will focus on creating specialized investigative units; increasing interagency cooperation among public prosecutors, police, and DSI on joint investigations; creating a specialized unit on TIP in the Attorney General's office; and developing training curriculum for law enforcement, prosecutors, and judges.(21)
Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Shrimp and Seafood Processing Areas in Thailand (2010 – 2015)	$9 million USDOL-funded, 4.5-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to eliminate child labor in the shrimp and seafood processing industry. Aims to strengthen policy frameworks to protect the rights of Thai and migrant children; assist the shrimp and seafood processing industry to comply with labor laws; and provide education and other services to at-risk children and families in the targeted areas.(49) Targets 7,500 children for the prevention and withdrawal from the worst forms of child labor, and 3,000 households for livelihood services.(49)
Project Childhood (2010 – 2014)	$3.67 million UNODC-operated, 4-year project to build the capacity of law enforcement officials in Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam to identify and prosecute child sex offenders.(57, 58)
GMS TRIANGLE Project (2010 – 2015)	Government of Australia-funded, 5-year project implemented by the ILO to reduce the exploitation of labor migrants through increased legal and safe migration and improved labor protection. Includes six participating countries in the Greater Mekong Subregion.(59)
One-Stop Service Centers‡	Government-run centers to register undocumented migrant workers from Burma, Laos, and Cambodia and their dependents through a streamlined process. Granted temporary stays and temporary work permits to registered migrants, gave them health checks, helped them purchase health insurance for themselves and their children, and recorded them in the MOI's nationwide online citizen database system, along with Thai nationals.(21)
One-Stop Crisis Centers (OSCC) 1300 Hotline‡	MSDHS program that focuses on teenage pregnancy, human trafficking, child labor, and violence against children, women, the elderly, and persons with disabilities. Interpreters available for callers speaking English, Burmese, Khmer, Vietnamese, Chinese, and Thai Yai (Shan).(21) In 2014, the hotline received 3,485 calls regarding incidents of violence against children, women, the elderly, and disabled (2,404); teenage pregnancy (948); human trafficking (123); and child labor(10).(26)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Thailand.

The One-Stop Service Centers do not have a registration process for migrant children ages 16 to 18. Only children younger than 16 years old can be registered as dependents; and children ages 15 to 18 may claim to be over 18 through falsified documents from their country of origin in order to work in Thailand legally.(21)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Timor-Leste

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Timor-Leste made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed a resolution to formally establish the National Commission against Child Labor (NCCL/CNTI) that will coordinate the Government's efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms. In addition, the General Labor Inspectorate Directorate created a new department to deal specifically with child labor issues and hired two additional inspectors. Government officials responsible for the enforcement of child labor laws, including labor inspectors and police officers, participated in numerous trainings on child labor investigation and victim identification procedures. However, children in Timor-Leste are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Although the NCCL/CNTI approved a list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children, the list has not yet been legally adopted, leaving children vulnerable to engagement in hazardous work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Timor-Leste are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Timor-Leste.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10-14 yrs.	19.9 (26,268)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	69.7
Combining Work and School (%)	10-14 yrs.	12.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		71.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Timor-Leste Survey of Living Standards, 2007.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating and processing coffee* (1-3)
	Fishing,* including work on boats* and repairing nets* (1-3)
Industry	Construction,* including brickmaking* (1, 2)
	Domestic work* (1, 2)
Services	Street work, including vending,* begging,* and scavenging* (1-3, 6)
	Commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic and agricultural work each sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1, 3, 7, 8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In a few cases, Timorese families place their children in bonded domestic and agricultural labor in order to settle outstanding debts. (8, 9) There is limited evidence that girls are trafficked transnationally to Indonesia for labor exploitation. (9, 10) According to data collected by the Secretary of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFOPE) and released in 2014, during the previous reporting period there were 233 cases of child labor recorded in the capital city of Dili. Of these children, 179 were male and 54 were female. (11) More comprehensive national data on child and forced labor from the Integrated Labor Force Survey is expected to be released in 2015. (11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Timor-Leste has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 68 of the Labor Code (12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	17	Article 67 of the Labor Code (12)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Articles 67-69 of the Labor Code (12)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 8 and 67 of the Labor Code (12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 81 of the Immigration and Asylum Act; Articles 162-166 of the Penal Code of Timor-Leste; Article 67 of the Labor Code (12-14)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 174- 176 of the Penal Code of Timor-Leste; Article 67 of the Labor Code (12, 14)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 67 of the Labor Code (12)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 14 of the Law on Military Service (15)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Law on Military Service (15, 16)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16/17	Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 59 of the Constitution of the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste; Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (17, 18)

The legal framework in Timor-Leste is not completely consistent with international standards regarding hazardous child labor. While the Timorese Labor Code does contain provisions that prohibit children from involvement in work likely to jeopardize their health, safety, and morals, it is neither comprehensive nor specific enough to facilitate effective enforcement.<sup>(12)</sup> Additionally, a minor is defined as a person whose age is less than 17 years.<sup>(12, 14)</sup> This standard leaves 17-year-old children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.<sup>(19)</sup> In 2014, Timor-Leste's National Commission against Child Labor (NCCL/CNTI) unanimously approved a list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children that had been under review since 2012.<sup>(11, 20, 21)</sup> To formalize the list, the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFPOE) is now working with the ILO to draft a law, which must be approved by the Council of Ministers. At the conclusion of the reporting period, the Council had not yet given final approval of the list.<sup>(11)</sup>

Similarly, approval is still pending for draft legislation against human trafficking originally submitted in 2012. In 2014, the Ministry of Justice revised and resubmitted an improved version.<sup>(9, 22)</sup> The proposed law seeks to strengthen efforts to combat trafficking in persons by rationalizing the country's disparate legal provisions regarding the definition of human trafficking and the penalties prescribed for this crime. It would also clarify Government roles and responsibilities to ensure more effective anti-trafficking coordination among agencies.(9, 11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFOPE)	Enforce laws related to child labor. Administer the General Labor Inspectorate Directorate, which is responsible for investigating incidents of forced labor.(1)
National Police of Timor-Leste (PNTL)	Enforce criminal laws against forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. Includes the Vulnerable Persons Unit, the Immigration Police, and the Border Police.(1)
The Ministry of Social Solidarity (MSS)	Enforce laws related to child labor.(1) Receive referrals from agencies responsible for conducting child labor investigations and provide child victims with appropriate support services.(1) Maintain a directory of service providers for which trafficking victim referrals can be made.(7)

Law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFOPE) employed 22 labor inspectors. Within the General Labor Inspectorate Directorate, SEPFOPE created a specialized department to manage child labor issues and assigned 4 inspectors to focus on investigating child labor cases and enforcing relevant laws.(11) The ILO noted that the number of inspectors is insufficient, especially for conducting child labor inspections outside of the capital.(11) In April and May of 2014, 38 labor inspectors and law enforcement officials received technical training on how to effectively identify and investigate cases of child labor and forced labor.(11, 23)

During the reporting period, SEPFOPE carried out 10 random, unannounced site visits to inspect for child labor violations in street work, construction, transportation, commerce, industry, and on coffee plantations. This is a significant decrease from the 45 inspections conducted in 2013.(11) Although SEPFOPE established local offices in 5 of 13 districts during the reporting period, the majority of inspectors are still posted in the capital of Dili and encounter transportation challenges in accessing outlying areas. The lack of adequate transportation may limit the ability of the Labor Inspectorate Directorate to conduct inspections.(11) SEPFOPE confirmed that labor inspectors are legally authorized to conduct both routine and complaint-driven inspections in all workplaces, apart from private homes.(11) Police officers may be called upon to investigate suspected cases of child domestic labor in these instances.(11) The Labor Inspectorate Directorate found no violations of child labor laws in 2014, and therefore no penalties or citations for child labor law violations were issued, and no children were withdrawn from exploitative work.(11) If children are identified in child labor situations, inspectors may refer them to the Ministry of Social Solidarity (MSS) for support services.(1, 7, 11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Criminal Investigation Unit of the National Police of Timor-Leste (PNTL) had a staff of 38 officers, two of whom were charged specifically with the enforcement of criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(10) The PNTL had an operating budget of $27.8 million, but continues to face significant human resource and budget execution challenges.(11, 24) The Vulnerable Persons Unit, which is directly responsible for assisting human trafficking victims, did not have a separate budget to support its activities.(11) Limited funding resulted in logistical and transportation obstacles in conducting investigations.(1, 9) Throughout the reporting period, law enforcement officials participated in extensive training on combatting human trafficking. In January 2014, the UNODC organized a U.S. Embassy-funded training course for 25 PNTL Border Patrol Unit officers.(9) Additionally, the PNTL collaborated with USAID to train 217 officers in general investigative skills that will support Government anti-trafficking efforts.(22) The local NGO, Psychosocial Recovery and Development in East Timor (PRADET), also provided trainings for law enforcement officials and prosecutors on the worst forms of child labor and trained 170 individuals on how to identify and report suspected cases of child and forced labor.(11)

The Ministry of Social Solidarity (MSS) reported that the PNTL investigated one case of forced child labor involving a 7-year-old child. Police officers removed the child in question from the exploitative situation and provided accommodation in a Government-funded safe house.(11) In 2014, the MSS established at least one technical officer in each of the country's 13 districts to receive complaints and provide basic services to victims of human trafficking. In addition, there were two child protection officers stationed in each of the 65 sub-districts.(9) These officials are trained to follow the Government's standard operating procedures for referrals. (7, 9) At the close of the reporting period, the only reported investigation was ongoing, and there were no additional prosecutions, convictions, or penalties issued for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.(11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission against Child Labor (NCCL/CNTI)*	Facilitate information sharing on child labor issues among Government agencies and serve as the overall coordinating mechanism for filing and responding to child labor complaints.(11) Develop child labor policies, raise awareness, and contribute to efforts to ratify and implement international conventions related to child protection.(1) The Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFPOPE) will serve as the Technical Secretariat of NCCL/CNTI for a 3-year term. Composed of representatives from 23 additional members, including the Ministries of Education, Agriculture, Finance, Justice, Health, Social Solidarity, Public Works and Commerce, Industry, and the Environment; Trade Unions Confederation; the Chamber of Commerce and Industry; and Eyes on Human Rights Forum ( Tau Matan ). (11)
The Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group	Coordinate the Government's efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation and includes the MSS, Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Defense and Security, the Secretary of State for the Promotion of Equality, SEPFPOPE, and the PNTL.(7) In 2014, the working group convened three times.(10)

*Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

On January 15, 2014, Timor-Leste passed Government Resolution 1/2014, which formalized the preexisting Child Labor Commission (CLC) Working Group to establish the National Commission against Child Labor (NCCL/CNTI). The Government provided funding and office space to enable staff of SEPFPOPE to carry out the work of the NCCL/CNTI.(11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Timor-Leste has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Timor-Leste Project for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Aims to strengthen implementation of ILO C. 182. Specific activities include establishing the Child Labor Commission Working Group; developing a national list of work deemed hazardous and prohibited for children; and developing a national action plan against child labor.(11) Launched in 2009 in partnership with the ILO and the Government of Brazil.(11)
The Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan (2011-2030)	Provides short-term and long-term plans for the nation's development, including the eradication of the worst forms of child labor, poverty alleviation, and implementation of social transfer programs. (1, 25) Specifies commitments to improve the educational system over the next 20 years, including addressing gender parity in primary schools and preventing school dropouts.(21, 25)
National Education Strategic Plan (2011-2030)*	Identifies three strategic priority areas for national education reform: access, including enrolment and retention; quality; and management. Includes specific strategies and activities to promote equal access to nine years of basic education for all children, including building and renovating schools and instituting social inclusion tools to promote girls' education.(26)
Child and Family Welfare System Policy*†	Develops a framework to strengthen the social protection system for children and their families in Timor-Leste. Focuses on providing support services to children in vulnerable situations, including those living in poverty and those at risk of abuse, violence, neglect, or exploitation.(10, 27)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Timor-Leste

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The newly established National Commission against Child Labor (NCCL/CNTI) assumed responsibility for finalizing the draft National Action Plan Against Child Labor, a process which has been ongoing since 2011.(28, 29) At the close of the reporting period, the Action Plan was not yet complete. In addition, the Council of Ministers did not take action to approve the draft National Plan of Action on Trafficking in Persons submitted by the Inter-Agency Anti-Trafficking Working Group in 2012.(7, 29) The draft National Plan of Action could be superseded by passage of the draft anti-trafficking legislation, which creates an anti-trafficking commission and charges it with developing and implementing a national plan of action.(10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Timor-Leste funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor in Timor-Leste.(30) In 2014, provided training for 38 law enforcement officials on child and forced labor investigation procedures and supported the formal establishment of the NCCL/CNTI.(11, 23, 30)
Child Labor Education and Outreach Program†	The Secretariat of State for Professional Training (SEPFOPE) and the National Commission against Child Labor (NCCL/CNTI) education and awareness-raising program targeted at children in five primary schools in Dili who have been identified as at risk for involvement in child labor. In 2014, the campaign reached an estimated 500 students.(11)
As-needed shelter for victims of human trafficking‡	Ministry of Social Solidarity (MSS)-funded shelter operated by the Psychosocial Recovery and Development in East Timor (PRADET). Offers services for victims of human trafficking.(7, 29, 31)
Anti-Trafficking Awareness Raising and Training†	MSS and Alola Foundation partnership program to raise awareness and conduct trainings to combat human trafficking in Timor-Leste.(11) In 2014, awareness raising and education campaigns reached more than 2,500 students in seven districts.(9)
The Mother's Purse ( Bolsa da Mae )*‡	MSS program that provides an annual cash subsidy of $60 to $180 maximum to poor families with a female head of household. Aims to improve the well-being of children by conditioning the subsidy on children's school attendance and their regular medical visits.(11, 20) The number of families served increased from 15,000 in 2013 to 55,000 in 2014. Technical assistance provided by the UNDP.(11)
School Feeding Program*‡	Government program to provide one hot meal per day to children in school, reaching about 325,000 students.(1)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Timor-Leste.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Togo

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Togo made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Togo launched a microfinance project that granted loans to 324,000 individuals and implemented a conditional cash transfer project benefitting 214 villages. In addition, 265 primary schools were constructed as part of a World Bank-funded project. However, children in Togo are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The Government has not devoted sufficient resources to effectively enforce its child labor laws. Togo's social programs to combat the worst forms of child labor do not match the scope of the problem, and rely largely on NGOs and international organizations for implementation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Togo are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-13) More than 70 percent of all working children in Togo, who are ages 5 to 14, are engaged in agriculture. The majority of children employed as domestic workers are girls ages 5 to 14. (1, 4-6, 9) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Togo.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	35.7 (616,132)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	85.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	35.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		77.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015. (14)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting cotton,* cocoa,* and coffee* (2, 4, 7, 11)
	Exposure to pesticides* while producing beans* and corn* (9, 11)
	Raising and herding cattle† (3, 4)
Industry	Excavating, crushing rocks, sifting gravel, and carrying heavy loads in quarries* and sand mining*† (1, 4, 10, 11, 15, 16)
	Work in carpentry* and tailoring* (4, 13, 17)
	Construction,* activities unknown (1, 7)
	Domestic work† (1, 5-13, 18)
Services	Carrying heavy loads and small-scale trading in markets (1-4, 7, 9-11, 13, 18)
	Begging*† (2-4)
	Operating motorcycle taxis,* auto and motorcycle repair* (1, 7, 17)
	Garbage scavenging* (1, 7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging* (2, 4, 11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4, 11, 13, 15)
	Farming,* domestic work, livestock raising,* and work in quarries* and markets, including carrying heavy loads each, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-4, 11, 15, 19)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some boys, known as talibés, are sent to Koranic schools for education and subsequently forced to beg in the streets by their teachers.(2, 4, 20) Children were also victims of human trafficking to neighboring countries, although the majority of child trafficking victims were exploited within the country.(2, 3, 13) The customary practice of confiage, which involves sending a child to a relative or friend to attend school in a larger town or city, may place children at risk of exploitation by internal human trafficking.(2, 4, 9, 13, 18, 19) Parents are often complicit in child trafficking as a result of confiage, and many traditional chiefs and leaders do not discourage the practice.(18)

Research found that many children lack access to education and birth registration. Many children in Togo are unable to access education due to a lack of schools and teachers, particularly in rural areas.(9, 12) Although education is free and compulsory by law, parents are responsible for paying associated fees and buying uniforms and school supplies, which makes education prohibitive to many families.(11, 21, 22) Approximately half of all children in Togo are not registered at birth due to the high cost, inaccessibility of registration centers, and the lack of awareness of its importance.(9, 11, 18) Unable to prove their citizenship, nonregistered children are vulnerable to human trafficking and may have difficulty obtaining education.(6, 9, 23) Research also found that children face widespread physical and sexual abuse in school.(9, 12) In addition, a source indicates that some boys perform farm work and some girls perform domestic duties, such as fetching water and laundry, for their schoolteachers.(12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Togo has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 150 of the Labor Code (24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 151 the Labor Code; Articles 6-12 of Order N° 1464 MTEFP/DGTLs Determining the Work Prohibited to Children (24, 25)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations and/or Activities for Children	Yes		Articles 6-12 of Order N° 1464 MTEFP/DGTLs Determining the Work Prohibited to Children (25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 4 and 151 of the Labor Code; Article 264 of the Children's Code (24, 26)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 151 of the Labor Code; Articles 2-6 of Law N° 2005-009 Suppressing Child Trafficking in Togo; Articles 264 and 411-414 of the Children's Code (24, 26, 27)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 151 of the Labor Code; Articles 264, and 387-390 of the Children's Code; Articles 91-94 of the Penal Code (24, 26, 28)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 151 of the Labor Code; Articles 264 and 405 of the Children's Code (24, 26)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*		Article 426 of the Children's Code; Article 42 of Law N° 2007-010 Regarding the General Statute of the Togolese Armed Forces (26, 29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 426 of the Children's Code; Article 42 of Law N° 2007-010 Regarding the General Statute of the Togolese Armed Forces (26, 29)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Constitution; Decree 2008-129/PR (21, 30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution of 1992; Decree 2008-129/PR (21, 30)

* No conscription (29)

Although Order N° 1464 MTEFP/DGTLS Determining the Work Prohibited to Children and the Labor Code prohibit hazardous child labor, these laws do not establish penalties for violations.(24, 25) Additionally, Order N° 1464 MTEFP/DGTLS Determining the Work Prohibited to Children sets the minimum age for employment in most hazardous activities at age 18, with two exceptions. Children ages 16 to 17 may operate pulleys and winches, and girls ages 16 to 17 may be employed in stores' external displays, both of which may make children vulnerable to exploitative child labor.(25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security (MOL)	Enforce all labor laws, including child labor laws.(13) The Unit to Combat Child Labor (CELTE) within the MOL is responsible for withdrawing children from child labor situations, raising awareness, and collecting data.(4)
Ministry of Justice and Government Relations	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(20)
Ministry of Social Action, Women's Empowerment and Literacy (MASPFA)	Raise awareness and enforce laws against the worst forms of child labor.(11, 15, 31) Provide technical assistance to regional and prefectural offices. The Directorate General for Child Protection within the MASPFA designs, coordinates, and evaluates the Government's child protection efforts.(13) Operates Allo 1011 hotline for reporting child abuse, including child trafficking.(2, 9, 13, 15, 32)
Child Protection Brigades	Investigate crimes with child victims, including child trafficking. Present in all five regions of Togo and operates as part of the National Police.(15, 33)

Law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security (MOL) employed 86 labor inspectors, which was an increase from the 81 inspectors employed the previous year. However, this number is insufficient to adequately enforce child labor laws throughout the country given current resource constraints.(7, 15) The MOL acknowledges that its funding is insufficient, as there is no budget for travel, vehicles, fuel, or equipment.(11, 15, 21, 34) Moreover, inspectors primarily focus on the formal sector in urban areas, which excludes the majority of working children.(7, 11) Article 188 of the Labor Code permits inspectors to conduct unannounced visits, but research did not find information on whether unannounced visits were conducted during the reporting period. Additionally, labor inspectors do not have the authority to determine or assess penalties, and there is no referral mechanism between labor inspectors and social service providers.(7, 24)

Although inspections were carried out in 2014, information is not available on the number, type, or quality of inspections conducted, child labor violations found, or the number of citations and penalties issued. Additionally, it is not known how many child labor-related calls the Allo 1011 hotline received.(7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the French embassy sponsored two trainings to help national police, law enforcement officials, and prosecutors better identify victims of child labor and prosecute cases.(18) However, inspectors and law enforcement officials still lack the necessary resources and skills to effectively enforce the law; research also indicates that some law enforcement officials in regional offices do not have copies of existing child labor laws.(4, 11, 15, 17) The number of investigators, investigations, prosecutions, convictions, or penalties issued was not publicly available.

Research indicates it is rare for police to make arrests in cases involving child labor infractions, and perpetrators of child trafficking usually receive light sentences or are occasionally released.(7, 9, 18, 28) Additionally, Article 89 of the Penal Code proscribes imprisonment of 6 months to 2 years or a fine of $40 to $400 for the commercial sexual exploitation of children; however, those penalties might not be severe enough to deter offenders.(28) When victims of exploitative child labor are identified, the MOL's CELTE is responsible for transferring children to an appropriate shelter.(18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for the Reception and Social Reinsertion of Trafficked Children (CNARSEVT)	Serve as the primary focal coordinating agency for child trafficking issues, maintaining a presence in all regions, prefectures, and villages.(13, 15, 18, 21, 35) Compile information and statistics on trafficking, raise awareness of child trafficking issues, and coordinate actions against the worst forms of child labor.(18) Respond to tips from the Allo 1011 hotline in conjunction with law enforcement officials and refer victims to NGOs for social services.(4, 11, 18) CELTE within the MOL functions as the CNARSEVT's secretariat.(13)
National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CDN)	Led by the CELTE, the CDN includes 13 ministries, NGOs, and private-sector organizations combatting child labor. Coordinate and oversee all government efforts to combat child labor, including the approval of all action plans for the abolition of child labor.(13, 36) Raise awareness, promote child labor legislation, and collect data.(4) MOL's CELTE acts as its secretariat.(15, 36)
Local Committees	Child Protection Committees and Local Committees Against Child Trafficking located throughout Togo to raise awareness at the community level. Committees identify child victims or children at risk, and they share information on human trafficking trends and prevention efforts with the MASPFA, which enforces laws regarding child labor.(7, 13, 18, 35, 36)

In 2014, the National Committee for the Reception and Social Reinsertion of Trafficked Children (CNARSEVT) continued to coordinate with other agencies and refer child victims to shelters for assistance, including victims who were returned from abroad. (2, 7, 15) However, an overall lack of funds hindered efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor.(18) The National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor has limited its actions to evaluating and approving NGO action programs to eliminate child labor, which it attributes to a lack of financial resources.(36) Additionally, the CELTE has been unable to fulfill its coordination role or collect data on child labor due to a lack of resources.(17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Togo has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Child Labor (2012-2015)	Serves as the primary government policy instrument to prevent and eliminate child labor in Togo. (15, 37)
National Strategy on Elimination of Child Labor through Education, Training, and Apprenticeship	Aims to reduce child labor through education, training, and apprenticeship.(38)
National Labor Policy	Aims to eliminate child labor, promote education, and provide vocational training beyond the compulsory education age.(39) Seeks to raise awareness among parents, employers, and community leaders on child labor and provides labor inspectors with training on child labor issues. (40)
National Plan of Action on Child Trafficking	Improves services for victims of child trafficking and conducts awareness-raising activities for local communities and border officials.(4) Promotes the education of children and improvement of livelihoods for families, and calls for the establishment of structures to monitor the trafficking of children.(41)
ECOWAS Regional Action Plan on Child Labor (2012-2015)	With 14 other ECOWAS countries, implements a regional action plan on child labor, especially its worst forms. Aims to eliminate worst forms of child labor in West Africa by 2015 and to continue progress toward the total elimination of child labor.(42, 43) In 2014, met to discuss actions taken since Ghana's 2013 Peer Review, progress of the Regional Action Plan's implementation, and the ILO's Study on Child Labor and Marginalization.(44)

Policy	Description
Strategy to Increase Growth and Promote Employment (SCAPE) (2013-2017)	Serves as the primary national anti-poverty plan, which includes components on child labor and education.(13, 15, 45)
Bilateral and Multilateral Agreements to Combat Child Trafficking	Quadripartite Agreement between the Governments of Benin, Ghana, Niger, and Togo works to prevent child trafficking along the countries' shared borders and facilitate the repatriation of trafficked children and the extradition of traffickers.(13, 18, 35) Multilateral Accords for West and Central Africa promote cooperation among regional states to combat child trafficking.(13, 18)
Education Sector Plan (2010-2020)*	Aims to achieve universal quality primary education by 2020 through the elimination of school fees, improving educational quality, providing school meals, providing school kits to impoverished families, and offering alternative educational opportunities.(13)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Togo funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (2011-2016)	$15 million USDOL-funded 6-year project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to eliminate child labor, improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research, and strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers. (46) In 2014, held two workshops in Togo that resulted in an agreement to create a framework for a public-private partnership between the MOL and employment agencies, and the creation of a standard contract for domestic workers to contribute to the elimination of child labor in the domestic sector.(34, 47)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that support ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa subregion by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states. (48, 49)
Decent Work Program (2010-2015)	Promotes decent work conditions with a focus on creating job opportunities for youth and extending social protection for all.(50)
Shelters for Vulnerable Children‡	MASPFA-funded centers that provide shelter and services for victims referred by the Allo 1011 hotline.(2, 18, 31) Tokoin Community Center temporarily shelters children until they are transferred to NGO-managed centers, while the Oasis Center provides legal, medical, and social services for children up to age 14.(11, 18)
National Fund for Inclusive Finance†‡	Government program that provides loans of up to approximately $60 to small groups of men and women for income-generating activities.(51) Loans target villages in rural Northern Togo, with a secondary effect of reducing child labor. In 2014, granted loans to 324,000 individuals.(7)
Cash Transfer Program for Vulnerable Children in Northern Togo (2013-2017)*‡	$2.55 million World Bank-funded, 5-year program that aims to prevent child labor and child trafficking by providing conditional cash transfers to high-risk families with young children.(7, 52, 53) World Bank disbursed $2 million in the first wave of transfers in 121 villages in 2014 and the Government funded transfers in another 93 villages. Families will receive monthly payments of approximately $10 for the next 24 months.(7, 53)
Togo Community Development and Safety Nets Project (2012-2016)*	$14 million World Bank-funded, 5-year program that aims to improve access to socioeconomic infrastructure and provide social safety nets for vulnerable populations.(54) In 2014, constructed 265 primary schools and completed 149 income-generating activities.(55)
Free School Lunch Program*‡	World Bank and government-funded program that provides free school lunches. Benefited 73,185 students in 2014.(55)
National Plan for Registering Births in Togo (2013-2017)*	Aims to increase documentation of births by simplifying the process, educating families on the importance of birth registration, and increasing accessibility to birth registration in rural areas.(35, 56)
Forum of Traditional and Religious Chiefs of Togo on the Harmful Social and Cultural Practices that Affect Children*‡	MASPFA-funded program that educates local leaders on child labor issues and the importance of education through training workshops at the community level.(7, 18)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Togo.

Although Togo has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(9, 21) Many programs rely largely on NGOs and international organizations for implementation. As a result, many of these interventions may not be sustainable over the long term.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Togo (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Tonga made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government reported training prosecutors, police, and victim service providers on human trafficking issues. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children are engaged in child labor in domestic work. Gaps in the legal framework remain; the country has no laws specifying a minimum age for work or defining hazardous forms of work for children under age 18, leaving children unprotected from labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children are engaged in child labor in Tonga in domestic work.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Tonga. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(3)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2015.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic service* (1, 5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking* (1, 2)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Tonga has ratified a few key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 70 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (6)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 69 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (6)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 115A of the Criminal Offenses Act; Sections 125 and 126 of the Criminal Offenses Act (7, 8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 16 and 23 of the Criminal Offenses Act (8)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	16	Section 25 of His Majesty's Armed Forces Act (8, 9)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Section 52a Education Act (Revised) (10)
Free Public Education	Yes	12	Section 33.3 Education Act (Revised) (10)

* No conscription (9)

Tonga has not established a minimum age for work or for hazardous work, nor has it prohibited hazardous occupations and/or activities for children. While the legal framework prohibits transnational human trafficking of children, the law does not extend to children who are victims of domestic trafficking.(1) The laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation of children do not extend to boys ages 12 to 17.(8) While a child can be deemed an “involuntary agent” if used to conduct illegal activities, the law does not specifically prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.(11)

The Government has drafted an Employment Relations Bill that would establish a minimum age for non-hazardous work and hazardous work.(12, 13) The proposed bill would also prohibit slavery; trafficking of children; recruitment of children for use in armed conflict; and the use of children in prostitution, pornography, illicit activities, and trafficking of illegal drugs.(11, 12) The bill has yet to be passed.

There is no military conscription in Tonga. The minimum age for voluntary service is 18; however, with parental approval, children can enlist in the military at age 16.(9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Tourism, and Labor (MCTL)	Enforce labor laws relating to child labor. Business license inspectors look for children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in the course of their regular inspection duties.(11) Refers reports of child labor to the Chief Labor Inspector, who visits the site, conducts an investigation, and requests police involvement if necessary.(11)
Tongan Police, Transnational Crime Unit and Domestic Violence Unit	Enforce criminal laws relating to the worst forms of child labor.(11)
Ministry of Internal Affairs, Immigration Department	Collaborate with Tongan police and MCTL on enforcement of criminal laws in cases in which foreign nationals are involved in the worst forms of child labor.(11)

Law enforcement agencies in Tonga took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Tonga

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, there were no reports of child labor complaints.(11) Information was not available on the number and training of labor inspectors, the number of labor inspections conducted, the number of child labor law violations, and the number of citations or penalties issued. A referral mechanism for filing and responding to complaints of child labor has not been established.(11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, prosecutors, police, and victim service providers received practice-based human trafficking training at a national workshop.(14) During the reporting period, no known cases of child labor were reported, investigated, or prosecuted.(11) The Tonga police refer children in need of safe housing and counseling to one of two NGOs, the Women and Children’s Crisis Center or the Tonga National Women’s Center.(14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of any policies to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Tonga Strategic Development Framework (2011-2014)*	Establishes economic development objectives, including the expansion of vocational training institutions and the Government provision of universal primary education.(15)
Tonga Education Policy Framework*	Aims to build the capacity of the Ministry of Education, improve school quality, and achieve universal primary education.(5)
UNDAF for the Pacific Region (2013-2017)*	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island Countries and Territories: Cook Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Fiji, Kiribati, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Marshall Islands, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.(16) Includes initiatives to prevent and respond to exploitation and abuse of children exploitation in Tonga.(17)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Although limited evidence suggests that there may be problems in some sectors, research found no evidence of programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. In 2012-2013, the Ministry of Internal Affairs conducted a “spot survey” of sectors that have limited evidence of child labor; however, these data have yet to be released.(11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Tonga (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Trinidad and Tobago

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Trinidad and Tobago made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government signed the Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor, which includes Trinidad and Tobago's participation in the regional coordination of child labor elimination strategies. The Government also participated in a regional dialogue on child labor in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor. Labor inspectors and rural labor advocates participated in specialized workshops on child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The Children's Authority of Trinidad and Tobago, which is mandated to protect children's rights by the Children's Authority Act of 2000 and the Children's Authority (Amendment) Act of 2008, is still not fully operational. The Government also has yet to ratify a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture, in Trinidad and Tobago. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Trinidad and Tobago.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	3.0 (5,975)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	97.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	3.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2010, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (1, 6, 7)
Services	Domestic work* (6)
	Garbage scavenging* (8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1-3)
	Used in illicit activities, including in drug and arms trafficking* (2, 9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

A lack of data on the nature and prevalence of the worst forms of child labor precludes the development of policies and programs that address child labor issues, including in agriculture, garbage scavenging, and commercial sexual exploitation. While the Government has previously expressed interest in conducting a National Youth Activity Survey that would inform such policies and programs, it has yet to produce do so.(10)

There is limited evidence that girls from the Dominican Republic, Guyana, Venezuela, and Colombia are subject to commercial sexual exploitation in brothels and clubs in Trinidad and Tobago as a result of human trafficking.(2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Trinidad and Tobago has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Trinidad and Tobago has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 2 of the Miscellaneous Provisions (Minimum Age for Admission to Employment) Act (11)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 16–19 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 16–19 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (12)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 17 and 21 of the Sexual Offences Act; Part V, Articles 11–16 and 24 of the Children Act; Articles 16–19 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (12-14)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Part VII, Article 37 of the Children Act (15)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Part IV, Article 19 of the Defence Act (16)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	12	Chapter 39.1 of the Education Act (17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Chapter 39.1, Part I, 11.1 of the Education Act (17)

* No conscription (16)

Trinidad and Tobago's Miscellaneous Provisions (Minimum Age for Admission to Employment) Act sets the minimum age for employment at 16.(11) However, current legislation does not establish a clear minimum age for hazardous work. The Government has not developed legislation on the prohibition of hazardous occupations and activities for children, even though it has reportedly been developing a hazardous occupations and activities list since 2004.(7, 18)

Trinidad and Tobago

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Children Act, which was passed in 2012 to replace the Children Act of 1925 and to strengthen legislative frameworks that protect children's rights, still requires "proclamation" by the President to take effect.(1)

Trinidad and Tobago has no compulsory military service and the minimum age for recruitment into the armed forces is 18. However, those between the ages of 16 and 18 who are willing to join may do so with written approval from a parent or guardian.(19)

The Education Act provides for free and compulsory schooling for children ages 6 to 12.(17, 18, 20) Children in Trinidad and Tobago are required to attend school only up to age 12. This standard makes children ages 13 through 15 vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work.(7, 18) The Children Act seeks to amend the Education Act by raising the minimum age of compulsory education to 16, making it commensurate with the minimum age for work.(1, 18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Small and Micro Enterprise Development (MOLSMED)	Monitor and enforce child labor laws, in part through the Labor Inspectorate Unit.(1) Enforce hazardous labor laws through the Occupational Safety and Health Authority; coordinate the enforcement of laws related to forced child labor in conjunction with the Ministry of the People and Social Development and the Ministry of National Security.(1)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Oversee the enforcement of criminal laws in Trinidad and Tobago and lead the Criminal Law Department, which falls under the Ministry of the Attorney General.(21)
Trinidad and Tobago Police Service	Enforce criminal laws, including those against the commercial sexual exploitation of children and the involvement of children in illicit activities, in conjunction with the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions.(1)
Counter-Trafficking Unit	Investigate trafficking cases since its establishment in January 2013 as part of the Ministry of National Security.(1) Partner with the police and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions to prosecute traffickers, as well as coordinate with government agencies and NGOs to ensure victim protection.(22)

Law enforcement agencies in Trinidad and Tobago took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, MOLSMED employed 14 labor inspectors in its Labor Inspectorate Unit. The number of labor inspectors per worker is adequate as there is not a widespread child labor problem in the country. These inspectors carried out 704 inspections in 2014, and they found no cases of child labor.(1) Inspectors can carry out unannounced inspections in all sectors, including on private farms. Inspectors can also enter private homes in response to a complaint.(8) MOLSMED reports that inspectors received ongoing training on child labor issues in 2014; the ILO has reported that this training, as well as the number of inspections conducted, is adequate.(1) In 2014, labor inspectors also attended special workshops on forced labor and human trafficking, with a special focus on child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. The Labor Inspectorate Unit also provided training with a special focus on child labor to 71 labor advocates from rural communities.(1) Ministerial funding and resources are also believed to be sufficient for the scope of the child labor problem.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Counter-Trafficking Unit (CTU) employed seven police officers and three immigration officers. During October 2013 to September 2014, the Government allocated an annual budget of $950,000 for the operation of the CTU; the IOM reported that this budget was sufficient. The IOM also reported that the number of investigators was adequate; however, there is a cited lack of sufficient training and resources for CTU staff.(1) In 2014, the National Library and Information System of Trinidad and Tobago conducted a 1-day training on sex-trafficking prevention for representatives from libraries in the country. There are reports that the CTU needs improved resources for child victims.(1, 9)

While the CTU did not report any criminal child labor violations during the reporting period, the number of investigations related to the worst forms of child labor is unknown. There was one suspected case of child trafficking during the reporting period; however, the investigation was terminated for lack of evidence.(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinate government efforts to combat child labor and oversee the development of national policies on child labor.(1, 18, 23)
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate government efforts to combat trafficking in persons and prosecute traffickers. Coordinate the provision of assistance to trafficked victims and develop national policies on trafficking.(1) Established by the Trafficking in Persons Act.(12)
Child Protection Task Force	Review policies and legislation on child protection issues and make recommendations on how public and private stakeholders can reduce risks to children's well-being. Tasked with making recommendations on how the Children's Authority of Trinidad and Tobago can be made fully functional.(20)

The Child Protection Task Force ended on July 31, 2014, in accordance with its amended Terms of Reference; it had met 16 times before ending. No information is available on whether this task force or a new task force will reconvene in the future.(8)

Reports indicate that coordination among the agencies that are responsible for combatting child labor is ad hoc and needs improvement. The National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons met once in 2014.(1)

The Children's Authority (Amendment) Act of 2008 contains provisions to empower the Children's Authority of Trinidad and Tobago. This body was conceived through legislative efforts in 2000 and was designed to enforce the laws on children's welfare, promote the rights of children, and provide services for child protection.(24-26) However, the Children's Authority of Trinidad and Tobago has yet to become fully operational.(1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Trinidad and Tobago has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategic Plan for Child Development (2012–2016)	Aims to develop comprehensive initiatives across governmental ministries to promote and protect children's rights, including the elimination of all forms of child labor. Participating ministries include the MOLSMED and the Ministry for Gender, Youth, and Child Development.(1)
National Strategy for Child Rights	Seeks to strengthen mechanisms and structures for protecting children's rights.(1)
National Youth Policy	Seeks to incorporate youth as partners in national development and prioritize youth issues in national policies.(1)
Trinidad and Tobago—UNICEF Strategic Plan (2014–2018)†	Aims to improve the lives of children through five focus areas, including evidence-based policy making, the promotion of children's rights, child protection programming, education, and early childhood development. Ministry of Planning and Sustainable Development will coordinate the planning and implementation of initiatives in concert with the UN's 2012–2016 efforts in the Eastern Caribbean.(27)
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014–2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through signatories' efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Trinidad and Tobago at the ILO's 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru (October 2014).(28-30)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Ministry of Gender, Youth, and Child Development is currently drafting a National Child Protection Policy, which will include child labor and trafficking. This policy will address obtaining data and implementing policies related to child labor in Trinidad and

Tobago.(1) However, the Government has yet to produce an action plan to implement policies that call for the prevention and elimination of child labor.(18)

In September 2014, Trinidad and Tobago participated in the First Meeting of the Working Groups of the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. Held in Bridgetown, Barbados, these discussions promoted the exchange of information on policies and programs that seek to formalize the informal sector, uphold workers' rights, and prevent and eliminate child labor.(31)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Trinidad and Tobago funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MLSME Programming‡	Aims to raise awareness about child labor and disseminate information on its negative effects through MLSME outreach programs and participation in awareness-raising activities organized by other agencies, including government ministries and trade unions.(8)
Educational Programming*‡	Ministry of Education programs that encourage children to remain in school, including a school meal program that provides breakfast and lunch to children from low-income families; a book grant program; and a School Support Services program that helps high-risk students with homework, counseling, and other services. In 2014, provided more than 43,000 free breakfasts and 98,000 lunches to students based on the family's socioeconomic level.(1)
Empowerment Social Strategies (PRESS ON) Initiative*‡	Ministry of the People and Social Development poverty-reduction initiative that targets at-risk populations, including children, and that focuses on providing food security, youth training and skills development, and educational support.(1)
National Child Registry‡	Government program to help provide an effective method for monitoring child welfare and development.(1)
National Youth Services Directory†‡	Ministry for Gender, Youth, and Child Development and National Youth Policy directory. Serves as a hub for locating psychological, educational, and recreational activities; programs; and services for the public and especially for youth.(1, 32)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Trinidad and Tobago.

Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address child labor in agriculture or the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Tunisia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government approved a new Constitution, which includes children's rights; began implementing the National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking; and launched a new program to improve access to education. However, children in Tunisia are engaged in child labor, including work on the street and in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work as a result of human trafficking. A lack of current national-level data on child labor makes it difficult to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in Tunisia.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tunisia are engaged in child labor, including in street work.(1-4) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work as a result of human trafficking.(4, 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tunisia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	3.0 (50,364)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	94.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	2.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.7

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Services	Work in markets* and cafes* (2, 3, 9, 10)
	Street work, including shining shoes,* begging,* vending,* and scavenging garbage*† (1-4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking* (4, 5)
	Used in illicit activities, including drug trafficking* (4, 5)
	Domestic work* and begging,* each as a result of human trafficking (4, 5)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The Government lacks current nationwide data on child labor, including its worst forms. NGOs report that child labor has become more pervasive and visible in Tunisia since the January 2011 revolution.(2, 9)

Child migrants from sub-Saharan countries and those fleeing conflict in Libya and Syria, as well as young girls from Tunisia's northwest region, are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking.(4, 5)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Tunisia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 53 of the Labor Code (13)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 58 of the Labor Code (13)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article 1 of Decree No. 2000-98 (14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 250 of the Penal Code (15, 16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 226 bis and 232 of the Penal Code; Article 25 of the Child Protection Code (15, 17)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 171 and 224 of the Penal Code (15)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	20	Article 2 of the National Service Law (18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 2 of the National Service Law (18)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 1 of the Law on Education (19)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 38 of the Constitution (20)

In January 2014, the Government approved a new Constitution, which includes children's rights including the right to free public education.(20)

Tunisia lacks a law that prohibits human trafficking. In 2013, the Ministry of Justice drafted an anti-trafficking bill in collaboration with international organizations. In 2014, the technical committee modified the draft law based on comments received in September.(21) The Ministries of National Defense, Transportation, Economy and Finance, Social Affairs, and Education, among others, also provided comments.(22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA)	Monitor compliance with the minimum-age law by examining the records of employees and collaborate with the General Union of Tunisian Labor to ensure that the Labor Code is enforced.(16) Carry out labor inspections.(13)
Ministry of Education	Collaborate with MSA to identify children vulnerable to child labor.(16)
Ministry of Justice's Anti-Trafficking Office	Help enact law to prohibit trafficking in persons.(4)
National Police's Child Protection Service	Address the commercial sexual exploitation of children through prevention and investigation.(22)
Ministry of Interior's Crisis Unit	Aim to prevent terrorist groups from recruiting children.(5)

Law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Government of Tunisia employed 364 inspectors to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor. They did not receive sufficient training on child labor.(23) A source indicates that labor inspectors did not have sufficient funding, vehicles, and fuel to support their work. In 2014, 12,000 inspections were conducted across the formal sector covered in the Labor Code.(23) These inspections identified 1,941 children and youth engaged in child labor.(23) Under Article 174 of the Labor Code, inspectors have the right to make unannounced inspections in all regulated sectors.(13) Labor inspectors carry out worksite inspections based on a weekly schedule that includes routine inspections but gives precedence to complaints.(23) Inspectors are allowed to impose penalties for violations of the law. In 2014, 53 formal warnings were issued to employers regarding cases of child labor.(23) In all cases of these formal warning, the employer rectified the situation.(23)

Although social workers are allowed to access private homes and intervene in cases of child domestic workers, limited evidence suggests that, in practice, inspections are not conducted in private homes.(5, 22) There is currently no coordination mechanism to refer children to social services during labor inspections.(23)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA) employed 2,117 social workers who worked in the field, which the MSA described as adequate for criminal enforcement of the formal economy but not the informal economy. Seventy social workers received child labor training.(23) Military judges and customs officials received training on how to identify and protect victims of human trafficking.(24) The Ministry of Justice organized and hosted a regional conference on human trafficking, in partnership with the Council of Europe and the IOM to exchange experience and best practices and become familiar with international norms.(21) However, adequate training was not available to all agents due to the lack of sufficient resources.(23)

In 2014, the MSA issued directives to its personnel in 24 social service centers on how to assist trafficking victims. The MSA also maintains a database of human trafficking victims and works with the Ministry of Justice to ensure that victims of human trafficking are not prosecuted for trafficking crimes.(24) Enforcement agencies do not effectively distinguish between human smuggling and human trafficking, which has hampered the Government's ability to investigate human trafficking offenses, convict offenders, and identify victims.(4) Research did not find information on the number of investigations and the implementation of penalties related to criminal worst forms of child labor.

While the adoption of the draft anti-human trafficking law was pending, courts used existing legal provisions of the Penal Code to prosecute 50 cases of commercial sexual exploitation in the first 7 months of 2014. The penalties in these cases ranged from 3 months to 6 years of imprisonment.(21) It is unknown how many of these cases involved children.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Coordinate efforts to combat child labor. Members include the Ministries of Interior; Social Affairs; Justice; Women, Family, and Childhood; Education; and Vocational Training and Employment; as well as the General Union of Tunisian Labor, the Tunisian Employers Union of Industry Trade and Handicrafts, and the Tunisian Union of Farmers and Fishermen. Supported by the ILO.(23, 25, 26)
Interagency Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee	Coordinate efforts to combat human trafficking and raise awareness and follow up on the enactment of the draft law to prohibit trafficking in persons. Led by the Ministry of Justice.(4, 9) In 2014, the Committee steered the draft bill between Ministries and to the Council of Ministers.(22)
Inter-Ministerial Working Group To Combat Human Trafficking*	Coordinate anti-trafficking policy and to share information and best practices. Chaired by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, while members include representatives from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Interior, Justice, Social Affairs, Vocational Training and Employment, Defense, Health, and Religious Affairs.(27) The group meets monthly. In 2014, the participating ministries drafted anti-trafficking action plans that the working group utilized to develop a draft national plan.(27)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

There has been a strengthening of data exchange between the members of the National Steering Committee since its inception in September 2013.(23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Tunisia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action to Combat Child Labor (2013 – 2014)	Aims to combat child labor by raising awareness, building the capacity of stakeholders, and encouraging action from NGOs and the public. Supported by the ILO.(25, 26)
Action Plan of the Country Program (2015 – 2019)	Joins plan with support of UNICEF to decrease drop-out rates and improve education quality and access to early education, teach life skills to adolescents, and improve access to information in order to improve child protection against violence and economic exploitation.(28, 29)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2015 – 2017)	Mandates a variety of activities, including passing the draft anti-trafficking bill; building capacity of civil society to address human trafficking; boosting public awareness of human trafficking; and training police, customs, and penitentiary officials in identifying victims of human trafficking.(24, 30) The Government began implementing the Plan in 2014.(22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Tunisia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Universal Primary Education*	UNICEF-funded program supported by the Government that promotes quality education with a goal of achieving universal primary enrollment.(31)
School Drop-Out Prevention Program*‡	Ministry of Education program that maintains over 2,300 social protection units in schools and mobile units in rural areas to monitor students and prevent school drop-out.(32)
Assistance to Needy Families*‡	MSA program that provides support to poor families and children through cash-transfer and access to healthcare to ensure school attendance.(31, 33)
National School Feeding Program*†	UN-funded program that provides technical support to the Ministry of Education to create and implement a national school feeding program. Provides improved access to education and aims to reduce drop-out rates in all public primary schools. The Memorandum of Understanding between the Ministry of Education and WFP was signed in January 2014.(34)
Trade Apprenticeships‡	Government program that provides wage earning and trade apprenticeships to youth ages 15 to 20, as an alternative to exploitative child labor.(35)
Shelters for Street Children‡	Government-operated shelters to serve children at risk of human trafficking.(4)

Program	Description
Child Protection and Youth Center Network‡	Government program that maintains 21 youth centers and 67 child protection institutions that are able to serve up to 6,000 children engaged in or at-risk of child labor.(22, 32)
Support Efforts to Combat Human Trafficking (2014 – 2017)†	USDOS-funded 3-year project implemented by IOM to carry out anti-human trafficking activities in collaboration with the Ministries of Justice, Interior, Social Affairs, and Women, Family, and Childhood. Includes the objectives: (1) build the capacity of relevant institutions and agencies to identify and assist victims of trafficking based on their individual needs; (2) strengthen cross-sector cooperation and the sharing of information through the implementation of a national referral mechanism to identify and assist victims of human trafficking; and (3) conduct an awareness-raising campaign to keep youth in school and discourage illegal migration that could lead to human trafficking.(22)
Shelters for Victims of Human Trafficking†‡	MSA-operated shelters for victims of human trafficking.(24) Services include lodging, food, clothing, psychological services, and legal aid through a network of pro bono lawyers, as well as full and free medical care in collaboration with the Ministry of Health. Unaccompanied child victims are placed in dedicated centers for minors, where they receive schooling in addition to the same services offered to adults.(27)
Taking Action Against Child Domestic Labor in Africa and the Countries of the Union for the Mediterranean (2011 – 2015)	$1.3 million Government of France-funded, 4-year project, implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child domestic labor.(36)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Tunisia.

In 2014, the MSA began updating a database on needy families and establishing a new social identifier code to provide adequate assistance to these families and to children at risk of the worst forms of child labor.(23)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Turkey made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Directorate General for Migration Management, a new coordinating body for the implementation of migration law, including laws related to child trafficking and refugee children, began functioning during the reporting period. In addition, together with the EU, the Government funded a project that included the goal of combating child labor by helping parents of working children to find employment. The Government also trained labor inspectors and law enforcement personnel on issues related to child trafficking and hazardous child labor. However, children in Turkey are engaged in child labor in agriculture, including in mobile seasonal work, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. The Government does not have laws that protect children working in agricultural enterprises employing fewer than 50 workers, in small shops employing up to three persons, or in domestic work. In addition, children in the growing Syrian refugee population in Turkey have low access to education and other social services, which leaves them at increased risk of exploitation in the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Turkey are engaged in child labor in agriculture, including in mobile seasonal work. (1-14) Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (12, 15-17) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Turkey.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6-14 yrs.	2.6 (320,254)
Attending School (%)	6-14 yrs.	92.4
Combining Work and School (%)	6-14 yrs.	1.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(18)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Child Labor Survey, 2006.(19)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cotton, hazelnuts, citrus fruits, sugar beets, cumin, peanuts, and pulses (1-12, 14)
Industry	Production of furniture, bricks,* shoes,* leather goods* (2, 12, 16) Auto repair*† (12, 16)
Services	Street work, including selling facial tissue packets or flowers, carrying bundles in market areas, cleaning car windshields, collecting recyclable materials, and begging (2, 12-14, 16, 20-22)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (12, 15-17) Used in armed combat by Kurdish militant groups sometimes as a result of forced recruitment* (12, 23-27)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Evidence suggests that the number of child laborers involved in the production of furniture has considerably declined in the past decade, although the significance of the decline is unknown.(13)

With the exception of the hazelnut harvest, which occurs during school vacation, children working in agriculture often migrate with their families for much of the year and may have limited access to health care and education.(1, 9, 10, 16)

There are reports that children are recruited by Kurdish militant groups that have been fighting in Turkey for nearly three decades.(12, 23-26) A ceasefire has been in effect since March 2013, but militant groups reportedly remain equipped to attack government forces if the ceasefire unravels.(28) Kurdish groups have committed to ensuring that children ages 16 to 18 are not used in combat zones and to releasing all children under age 16.(29, 30) However, media reports indicated that the recruitment of children under age 18 had continued.(23-27) The current number of child soldiers in Kurdish militant groups is unknown.(12)

Due to the Syrian Conflict, an estimated 1.7 million Syrian refugees have relocated to Turkey.(31, 32) Many refugee families lack adequate food, shelter, and employment.(20, 33, 34) At the beginning of the reporting period, only approximately half of the Syrian refugee population had registered with the Government and gained access to health care, education, and social services. However, due to an increased focus on registration efforts, the Government estimates that it has successfully registered more than 90 percent of the Syrian population, giving these refugees legal protections and greater access to health care and other services.(32-35) Approximately 840,000 Syrian refugees are school-aged children, less than 100,000 of whom are enrolled in school.(31, 32) This leaves the majority of child refugees out of school and at greater risk of exploitation in the worst forms of child labor. Reports indicate that a lack of schools for Syrian refugees especially in urban areas, a lack of teachers, and a lack of registration all contribute to the gap in education.(31, 36) In addition, poverty in the refugee community and a lack of meaningful employment opportunities cause parents to rely on children as contributors to the family income.(20, 32, 36) Due to their high level of vulnerability, some refugee children in urban areas may be subject to a range of abuses, including child labor, sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and begging.(13, 22, 32, 37)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Turkey has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 71 of the Labor Act (38)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 71-73 of the Labor Act; Annex 3 of the Regulation on Methods and Principles for Employment of Children and Young Workers (38, 39)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Annex 3 of the Regulation on the Principles and Procedures Governing the Employment of Children and Young Workers; Annex 1 of the Regulation on Heavy and Dangerous Work; Regulation amending the Regulation on the Principles and Procedures for the Employment of Children (39-42)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 80 and 117 of the Penal Code (43)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 80 of the Penal Code (43)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 77, 103, 226, and 227 of the Penal Code (43)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 37–38 of the Penal Code (43)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	21	Article 2 of the Law on Military Service (44, 45)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	NA*
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 3 of the Primary Education Law; Education Reform Law (14, 46-48)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 2 of the Primary Education Law; Article 42 of the Constitution of the Republic of Turkey (13, 46, 49)

* No voluntary military service (14)

Under the National Defense Service Law 3634, children ages 15 to 18 can be deployed in civil defense forces in the event of a national emergency.(44, 50)

As stated in Article 4 of the Labor Act, the provisions of the Labor Act do not apply to children working in agricultural enterprises employing 50 or fewer workers, in small shops employing up to three persons, or in domestic service.(38) These gaps in the law leave children vulnerable to exploitative conditions without legal protection.(16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspection Board Presidency within the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOLSS)	Implement laws on child labor and hazardous child labor, including regulating work environments and conditions for children. Monitor the implementation of the Labor Law provisions in workplaces under its jurisdiction.(14) Conduct joint inspections with the Mentoring and Inspection Presidency to find children under legal working age who have dropped out of school, and direct them back into education.(14)
Mentoring and Inspection Presidency within MOLSS	Monitor compliance with laws related to social security of all workers, including child workers. Conduct joint inspections with the Labor Inspection Board Presidency to find children under legal working age who have dropped out of school and refer them to education services.(14)
Turkish National Police (TNP)	Enforce laws defining criminal activity.(13)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecute legal cases regarding child labor or exploitation of children.(13)
Ministry of Family and Social Policy (MFSP)	Receive all referred child laborers in need of assistance. Coordinate services targeted to children living and/or working on the streets through the Directorate General of Child Services within MFSP.(13)

Law enforcement agencies in Turkey took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the number of labor inspectors authorized to conduct inspections decreased from 1,099 to 970. However, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOLSS) plans to increase the number of labor inspectors, which currently remains inadequate to fully enforce Turkey's labor laws.(14) Labor inspectors spend the first 3 years of their careers as assistant inspectors. They receive on-the-job training that includes modules to raise their awareness of child labor and of the legal provisions and enforcement mechanisms to address it.(14)

In 2013, the most recent year for which data are available, 23,504 inspections were conducted involving 2,209,565 workers, including 397 children. Child labor penalties were levied on 56 violations in 49 workplaces, and approximately $27,000 in fines were collected.(51) The fine for violating the ban on employing child labor is approximately $665, which the MOLSS acknowledges is insufficient to deter violations.(14) Inspectors both proactively plan inspections and conduct inspections in response to complaints. Inspections include unannounced inspections.(14) Complaints about child labor can be made to a phone hotline operated by the Directorate General of Child Services within the Ministry of Family and Social Policy (MFSP).(14) Complaints can also be submitted online through the Prime Minister’s Office Communications Center website.(52) Research did not find how many calls were made to the hotline or how many complaints were submitted via the website.

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Turkish National Police (TNP) are responsible for the enforcement of criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(14) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Interior and NGOs provided training to law enforcement, judicial, and Ministry of Interior officials on human trafficking and the law; the referral system for human trafficking victims; and identification of human trafficking victims.(37) Enforcement agencies refer child victims to MFSP services.(14) During 2014, the Government identified two victims of child trafficking.(22) Research did not find disaggregated data on the number of investigations, prosecutions, or convictions related to child trafficking.(53)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee (NSC) on child labor issues	Coordinate and monitor programs and projects to be implemented nationwide to prevent child labor, primarily its worst forms.(14) Chaired by the MOLSS Undersecretary and includes senior government officials, workers, employers, and NGOs. Coordinate the Time-bound National Policy and Program Framework for the Prevention of Child Labor.(13, 14)
Advisory Board on Child Labor Issues	Develop solutions for preventing child labor and ensure that institutions share information regarding their work on child labor. Chaired by MOLSS and composed of representatives from government ministries, workers’ unions, employers’ organizations, NGOs, and universities, as well as ILO and UNICEF representatives who participate as observers.(14, 54)
Child Labor Branch of the Employment Policies Directorate within MOLSS	Coordinate all child labor programs and efforts of the Ministry of Education, the Child Services Directorate General in MFSP, the Ministry of the Interior, the Ministry of Justice, and NGOs.(13, 51)
The Child Services Directorate General	Coordinate services for children living and working on the streets; located within the MFSP.(13)
Directorate General for Migration Management (DGMM)*	Coordinate the implementation of migration law, including laws related to irregular migration, refugees, and human trafficking.(34, 55)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

With the creation of the DGMM in 2014, responsibility for refugees and combating human trafficking shifted from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the TNP to the DGMM. The DGMM’s new infrastructure and lack of capacity has created challenges both in combating human trafficking and in registering and assisting refugees in 2014.(34)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Turkey has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Time-bound National Policy and Program Framework for the Prevention of Child Labor (2005–2015)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2015. MOLSS, through the NSC, is the coordinating institution.(13) Prioritizes reducing poverty, improving the quality and accessibility of education, and increasing social awareness and sensitivity to child labor.(13) Priority target groups include children working on the streets, in heavy and dangerous work in small- and medium-sized enterprises, and in mobile and seasonal agricultural work, except in family businesses. Articulates objectives, indicators, outputs, target groups, activities, and responsibilities for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(13)

Policy	Description
Second National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking	Outlines Turkey's strategy for the prevention of human trafficking. Identifies children as an exceptionally vulnerable group and calls for special security precautions for children at shelters for victims and increased international cooperation on preventing child trafficking.(37, 56)
Tenth Development Plan (2014–2018)†	Identifies Turkey's strategy and goals for economic development. Includes the priorities of alleviating child poverty and increasing equal opportunity in education.(57) Includes provisions for the prevention of the worst forms of child labor.(14)
Strategic Plan for the Ministry of National Education (2010–2014)*	Sets medium- and long-term objectives for education policy, including increasing participation rates from preschool to secondary education, promoting vocational education, and terminating gender and regional education disparities.(58)
National Child Rights Strategic Document and Action Plan (2013–2017)	Sets out the framework and actions for promoting services for children in fields such as health care and education.(59) Includes a section addressing child labor issues.(14, 60)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Government reports that it reviews the impact of policies on child labor when renewing or updating a policy. However, it did not make its assessments publicly available.(51)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Turkey funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Activation of Local Sources on Preventing Child Labor (2012–2014)‡	MOLSS-implemented, 3-year program to support the Time-bound Framework by enhancing local capacity and building an effective monitoring system.(61) Provides direct services such as child labor monitoring, vocational skills training, rehabilitation of children, and awareness-raising through the formation of Child Labor Monitoring Units in five pilot provinces. Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Turkey.(63)
Conditional Education and Health Care Assistance Program‡	Government program that aims to reduce poverty through cash transfers.(64) Requires children between ages 6 and 15 of participating families to regularly attend primary school.(52) Provides milk to all primary school children and distributes books free of charge.(61)

Aims to address poverty, lack of education, unemployment, and housing problems for socially vulnerable and disadvantaged citizens through services and grants, including a specific allocation of grant funding for projects targeting the Roma population. (14, 51, 65) Includes the goal of combating child labor by supporting the entry of parents of working children into the labor market.(51, 65)
Teacher Training Program	Joint Ministry of National Education (MoNE) and UNICEF project to provide training on teaching methods to Syrian teachers living in refugee camps. Includes training sessions for both Syrian and MoNE trainers who then move on to hold broader training sessions in selected refugee camps.(66)

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Turkey.

In 2014, Tuvalu made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government continued to review and revise its labor laws to improve compliance with international standards, including those related to child labor. However, limited evidence suggests that children in Tuvalu are engaged in child labor in fishing. Gaps remain in the Government's legislative framework. Children ages 15 to 17 are not protected from work in hazardous environments, and children, particularly boys, are not adequately protected from commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the Government has not collected data to determine the prevalence and nature of the worst forms of child labor in the country to inform policy and program development.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited and the problem does not appear to be widespread, children in Tuvalu may be engaged in child labor in fishing. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tuvalu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

In 2014, the Government of Tuvalu continued to engage in a legal revision process initiated during the previous year, which aims to modernize labor laws and improve their compliance with international standards, including those related to child labor. In cooperation with the ILO, the Government held a multi-agency consultation session to review existing labor laws in February 2014. (12, 13) However, the Government has not ratified ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, and Tuvalu's current legislative framework still has a number of gaps.

Tuvaluan law does not establish 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work. Although there are some provisions in the Employment Act that prohibit children under 18 from engaging in certain types of activities, the list is incomplete and at times conditioned upon approvals. For example, boys under 18 are prohibited from working underground in a mine and on a ship doing certain tasks, unless they are approved by a medical practitioner, in which case they can work at age 16.(6) Similarly, boys under 18 are prohibited from working during the night in any industrial undertaking, unless the Commissioner has given written permission, in which case they can work at age 17. Boys under 16 are not permitted to work in a mine.(6)

Although the Penal Code prohibits the commercial sexual exploitation of girls under age 18 and boys under age 15, there are no legal provisions protecting boys ages 15 through 17 from engagement in this activity.(7, 14) When the court has reasonable cause to suspect that a female child is being subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, it may issue the Tuvalu Police Force a warrant to search the premises and arrest the accused under Article 143 of the Penal Code.(7) The court may also appoint a guardian for female child victims if a case goes to trial. Since the law does not cover male children in similar circumstances, they lack this protection.(7)

All pornography is illegal in Tuvalu, and the Penal Code includes penalties for those who make, distribute, or possess obscene publications.(7, 15, 16) However, law does not explicitly prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of a child for the production of pornography.(7) In addition, while the law criminalizes the use of children younger than age 15 for illicit activities, it fails to protect children ages 15 through 17.(7)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor (DOL)	Enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.(12)
Tuvalu Police Force	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including those related to child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.(12)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Department of Labor (DOL) had two officers responsible for conducting labor inspections. Considering the lack of major industry and commerce in the country, as well as the limited employment opportunities for children, this number is determined to be adequate.(12) The labor officers did not participate in training during the reporting period, but sources report that they have received instruction from the ILO in previous years.(12) Funding for inspections is covered by the DOL's overall budget. Information was not available on the specific amount of money allocated for this purpose, though reports indicate that the Government does not have sufficient resources to formally monitor and enforce child labor laws.(2) The DOL reported that, although inspectors are empowered by law to conduct site visits at any place of employment, the agency does not carry out systematic inspections.(12) In 2014, the DOL did not conduct any labor inspections. As the DOL did not receive any reports of child labor law violations during the year, no citations or penalties were issued and no children were assisted.(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Government does not employ investigators to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and no relevant investigations were carried out during the reporting period. In 2014, research did not find any records of the number of violations involving the worst forms of child labor, and no known prosecutions, convictions, or penalties were issued for these crimes.(12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The National Advisory Committee on Children, chaired by the Ministry of Education, is responsible for coordinating general children's issues across government agencies. The Committee monitors and reports on the Government's efforts to fulfill its commitments under the UN CRC.(12) However, research found no evidence that the Committee functions as a coordinating mechanism to address child labor, including in its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Tuvalu has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Te Kekega II National Strategy for Sustainable Development (2005-2015)*	Seeks to promote sustainable livelihoods by developing the private-sector and promoting the effective use of public resources. Focuses on improving access to and quality of education for Tuvaluan children.(12, 17)
Tuvalu Education Strategic Plan II (TESP II) (2011-2015)*	Aims to enhance quality of education at all levels, from early childhood through secondary, technical, and vocational education.(18) Priority areas include improving curriculum and assessment measures, increasing student achievement, enhancing the quality and efficiency of management, developing human resources, and strengthening strategic partnerships.(18)
Education and Training Sector Master Plan*	Targets children who drop out of school. Offers children alternative education and training opportunities.(19) Implemented by the Ministry of Education.(16, 19)
UNDAF for the Pacific Region (2013-2017)*	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island countries and territories: Cook Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Fiji, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.(20) In Tuvalu, aims to increase children's access to health, education, and social protection systems.(21)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although Tuvaluan law does not guarantee free basic education, the Government has a policy to provide free tuition for children ages 6 to 13.(3, 18, 19, 22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Tuvalu participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (DWCP)	ILO-implemented program that aims to strengthen Tuvalu's labor laws, support the ratification of ILO C. 182, and improve labor market monitoring systems by collecting recent statistics on child labor.(23) The DWCP seeks to improve labor market information and calls for the inclusion of child labor modules in planned household surveys.(3, 23)
Education for All Program*	Australian Government-funded program to improve access to quality education in Tuvalu. Objectives include increasing capacities in education planning and administration, teacher training, and early grade literacy.(3) Since 2012, the program has helped over 18 vocational teachers throughout Tuvalu to graduate from the Australian Pacific Technical College in courses related to training and assessment and early childhood education.(3)
Community Post-Primary Vocational Programs*‡	Ministry of Education program that provides vocational training to children in the outer islands. Frequency of training sessions depends on the availability of trainers.
High School Vocational Training Program*‡	Government-funded vocational training program at Motufoua Secondary School that provides Fiji National University-accredited vocational training to students starting at year 13.(3)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Tuvalu.

Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address child labor in the agricultural sector.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Tuvalu (Table 8).

Table 8. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Uganda made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed a law that prohibits child pornography and appointed 10 members to the Industrial Court. It also launched a national child helpline to report cases of child exploitation to district officials and conducted a child labor prevalence study. In addition, the National Council on Children established an inter-ministerial task force to coordinate resource allocation and programming on child labor across ministries. However, children in Uganda are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Gaps in the legal framework persist, such as between compulsory education and minimum working ages, and enforcement information is not made publicly available.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uganda are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-19) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uganda.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked internally for sexual exploitation and forced labor in fishing, agriculture, and domestic service.(4) Children from the Karamoja region are trafficked to towns in Eastern Uganda for agriculture and domestic service, or to Kampala where they engage in begging.(28) In some cases, Ugandan children have been trafficked to East African countries for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.(4) Children from Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Kenya, Rwanda, Tanzania, and South Sudan are also trafficked to Uganda for commercial sexual exploitation and agricultural work.(4)

Section 10(3)(a) of the Education (Pre-Primary, Primary, and Post-Primary) Act, 2008 calls for free primary education through age 12, but fees for school supplies and operating costs are often prohibitive for families.(6, 10, 29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Uganda has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

Uganda has not ratified the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.

Uganda has ratified the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa (Kampala Convention).(30) The Convention prohibits armed groups from recruiting children or from allowing them to participate in conflict in any manner.(31)

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription (38)

Regulation 5 of Uganda’s Employment (Employment of Children) Regulations prohibits the use, procurement, or offering of any child for commercial sexual exploitation.(33) Despite this Regulation, Section 131 of the Penal Code only criminalizes those who procure or attempt to procure a girl for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. The Penal Code does not protect boys from being procured for the same purpose.(36, 39) The Penal Code penalizes intermediaries, but it is not clear whether it penalizes clients. It also does not protect children who are procured or offered for commercial sexual exploitation from being treated as offenders rather than victims.(36, 39)

During the reporting period, Uganda passed the Anti-Pornography Act, which fully prohibits child pornography.(37)

Section 10(3)(a) of the Education (Pre-Primary, Primary, and Post-Primary) Act calls for compulsory primary education to age 13, but the law leaves children ages 13 to 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as children are not required to be in school nor are they legally permitted to work in areas other than light work.(10, 29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

TABLE 5. AGENCIES RESPONSIBLE FOR CHILD LABOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD)	Enforce labor laws.(3, 7, 40) District labor officers conduct labor inspections, including occupational safety and health inspections, throughout the country.(40-42) The Child Labor Unit develops policies and programs on child labor, serves as a resource for MGLSD’s non-specialized labor inspectors and occupational health and safety inspectors, and works with partners to implement awareness raising campaigns.(7, 42)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MIA)	Enforce criminal laws against forced labor, trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children for illicit activities. Lead investigations related to trafficking in persons.(7) Within MIA, Uganda Police Force's (UPF) Special Investigations Unit manages trafficking cases while the Sexual Offenses Department manages cases of commercial sexual exploitation. The Child and Family Protection Unit (CFPU) processes child abuse cases, including child labor.(42) CFPU liaison officers handle child labor complaints and overall child protection issues at police posts that do not have a CFPU officer.(7) MIA's Immigration Department assists in identifying potential trafficking victims.(43)
Ministry of Local Government	Oversee district labor officers and deploy community development officers (CDOs) at the district level. CDOs serve as labor officers when a district labor officer is not available.(23)
Ministry of Justice and Directorate for Public Prosecutions	Prosecute human trafficking cases.(44)
Industrial Court*	Handle labor disputes. Labor officers have the authority to bring cases before the court.(23) In 2014, 10 members were sworn in to the court.(23)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Uganda's centralized labor inspection system was taken apart in the mid-1990s, following the decentralization of the country. The Local Governments Act, No. 1 of 1997 transferred labor issues from the central government to the districts.(41) The labor inspection function in the country has subsequently deteriorated.(41) Each of the 112 districts in the country is supposed to have a district labor officer responsible for addressing all labor issues, including child labor. There are conflicting estimates of the total number of district labor officers; however, the highest estimate is 49 officers countrywide.(23, 42) Training, funding, and logistical support for district labor officers is inadequate; some officers are responsible for additional non-labor duties.(3, 23, 42, 45)

Comprehensive information on labor inspections is not available, but the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD) reported having inspected more than 300 workplaces, largely in the agriculture sector. This level of inspection is inadequate according to the Government, and lack of funding prohibits a sufficient number of inspections.(23) Labor inspections are generally conducted based on complaints or in a certain geographic area, with random workplaces chosen. Notice is not usually given to employers in advance, and labor officers have the ability to close workplaces or processes that pose an imminent danger to workers.(45) During the reporting period, MGLSD worked with UNICEF to launch a national child helpline for reporting cases of child exploitation to district officials.(23, 46) Initial reports from the helpline indicate that approximately 100 to 150 calls related to child labor are received monthly. The helpline is only active in three districts, Kampala, Rakai, and Mukono.(23)

Comprehensive information is unavailable on the number of child labor law violations observed and the number of penalties issued.(23)

A source indicates that Uganda is developing a more comprehensive inspection program that involves all relevant public sector agencies.(47)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Uganda Police Force's (UPF) Child and Family Protection Unit (CFPU) has approximately 500 officers throughout the country who handle child abuse, including child labor complaints.(42)

During the reporting period, the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce trained more than 100 police officers on trafficking prevention and how to identify potential trafficking victims. In addition, more than 200 police officers were trained on victim management and investigation of cases.(28) Twenty magistrates were trained on implementing the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act.(28) However, this training has yet to be integrated into the general police training curriculum.(43) Training on other worst forms of child labor appears to be insufficient.(42)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, information was not available on the exact number of criminal law complaints related to child labor or on the number or the quality of the investigations, including on the presence of referral mechanisms to social services. The CFPU lacks sufficient resources to fully carry out its mandate of investigating child labor complaints, but it was able to record 143 cases of child labor.(23, 42)

The Government registered 88 male and 51 female child victims of trafficking. It investigated all 139 child trafficking cases and 4 people were convicted of human trafficking in 2014.(28) In February, the Uganda People's Defense Force assisted two children returning from the Lord's Resistance Army's captivity. The children were given medical assistance and then passed on to the army's child protection unit which works with NGOs to resettle the children.(43)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinate child labor issues and implementation of the National Action Plan (NAP) on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012/2013–2016/2017). Led by the MGLSD, with representation from several ministries, trade unions, development agencies, civil society, and media houses.(10)
Stop Child Labor Partners Forum	Coordinate, monitor, and evaluate child labor-related programs and policies in Uganda. Led by the National Council for Children (NCC), with representatives from several ministries, CFPU, and civil society groups.(10)
Coordination Office to Combat Trafficking in Persons (COCTIP)	Coordinate, monitor, and oversee implementation of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act of 2009. Began implementing activities during the reporting period, including coordinating awareness raising and training initiatives.(23)
Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce	Coordinate anti-trafficking efforts among government ministries, draft policy, implement public information campaigns, and establish a database for trafficking cases. Led by MIA, with 30-member representation from several ministries and government directorates, UPF, Interpol, and other security organizations.(10, 28)
National Child Protection Working Group	Address child protection issues. Led by MGLSD, with participation from various ministries and civil society.(10)
NCC Inter-Ministerial Coordination Mechanism*	Ensure effective allocation of resources and programming on child labor issues across multiple agencies. Members include MGLSD; Office of the Prime Minister; Ministry of Health; Ministry of Agriculture; Ministry of Defense; Justice, Law, and Order Sector; MIA; Ministry of Education and Sports (MOES); and Ministry of Water and Sanitation. Headed by NCC and meets quarterly.(23)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2014, all of Uganda's coordinating mechanisms for child labor met regularly.(23, 28, 48)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Uganda has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012/2013–2016/2017)	Aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor in Uganda by 2017, by increasing enrollment and completion of primary education; increasing households' access to social protection and assistance; increasing public awareness; strengthening the legal and policy framework; withdrawing, rehabilitating, and integrating working children; and enhancing tripartite collaboration among the Government, employers, and labor unions.(13)
National Awareness Strategy on Trafficking	Focuses on the prevention of human trafficking. Developed as a result of a training conducted by IOM and the National Coordinator of the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce for government officials from intelligence agencies and the Justice, Law, and Order Sector.(43)

Policy	Description
National Development Plan (2010/2011–2014/2015)	Outlines Uganda's development priorities and implementation strategies. Includes an objective to promote and empower artisanal and small-scale miners, in part by training mining communities on child labor issues and enhancing monitoring of child labor in the mining industry.(49) Addresses increasing household incomes, and the availability and quality of gainful employment and access to social services.(49)
Education Sector Strategic Plan (2004–2015)*	Supports expansion of the basic education system to include complementary programs for disadvantaged children and youth.(50)
Skilling Uganda Strategic Plan (2011–2020)*	Provides a strategic plan for business, technical, and vocational education and training. Seeks to provide vocational training to youth who drop out of school.(51)
UNDAF Uganda (2010–2014)*	Aims to improve the situation of vulnerable populations through sustainable livelihoods and access to quality social services.(52)
National Strategic Program Plan of Interventions for Orphans and Other Vulnerable Children (2011/2012–2015/2016)	Aims to monitor and protect children from child labor.(53)
Strategic Plan for the Implementation of the Amnesty Act of 2000 (2013–2015)	Continues activities to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate former LRA rebels, including child soldiers. Implemented by the Uganda Amnesty Commission along with other government agencies.(28)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

The National Anti-Trafficking Taskforce has drafted a national action plan to combat trafficking, which is in the final stages of review. The plan aims to prevent trafficking, increase prosecutions, and improve coordination and services.(23, 54)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Uganda funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Skilling Uganda Program*	MOES program providing vocational training to youth who drop out of school. During the reporting period, the World Bank contributed $75 million, OPEC contributed $25.5 million, and Saudi Arabia contributed $13.5 million.(10, 51) Government will improve 26 vocational schools with these funds.(10)
Uganda Social Assistance Grants for Empowerment (2011–2015)*‡	MGLSD program providing direct income support of approximately $8 per month to poor and vulnerable households in 15 districts located in Central, Northern, and Western Uganda. Supported by donors at approximately $49 million.(10) Government funded approximately $2.4 million in office space, equipment, and staff; also released $800,000 in funding for the program.(54) In 2014, the program expanded to Yumbe District and the number of beneficiaries increased to 113,000.(23)
Coordinated Response to Human Trafficking in Uganda	IOM project providing support to children trafficked from the Karamoja region for exploitive street work in urban areas of Uganda; builds capacity of services providers in Karamoja and elsewhere in Uganda. (55) Together with the Government, launched a Web site to raise awareness of human trafficking issues in Uganda and provide information on laws and government activities; Web site helps link trafficking victims to appropriate contacts.(43, 55)
Uganda Youth Development Link	Protects children from sexual exploitation, trafficking, and labor; provides rehabilitation and livelihood skills training to victims. Provides services through five drop-in centers and outreach posts in a Kampala slum; one drop-in center in Kitega, Mukono District; and one rehabilitation transit center at Masooli in Wakiso District.(56)
Child Labor Study†	MGLSD study to map areas with high prevalence of child labor. The main sectors covered include agriculture, mining, stone quarrying, and the service industry.(23, 48)
Uganda Women's Effort to Save Orphans	NGO-implemented initiative that provides shelter and counseling to trafficking victims under age 18.(43)
Combating Child Labor through Education (2010–2015)‡	MOES 3-hour after-school education program in areas where children are unable to attend school for a full day. Collaborates with MGLSD and received support from ILO and the Dutch Government.(10) Schools receive some funding from district budgets.(10)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project (2011–2016)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Uganda.(57) In April 2014, a report on child labor and youth employment was presented at a national workshop in Kampala.(58)
Country-Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor Project (2013–2017)	USDOL-funded capacity building project implemented by the ILO in at least 10 countries to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. Aims to improve legislation addressing child labor issues, including by bringing local or national laws into compliance with international standards; improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor; and develop, validate, adopt, and implement a NAP on the elimination of child labor in Uganda.(59)
African Youth Empowerment and Development Initiative (2013–2017)	A $3 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by World Education, Inc. to address exploitative labor among youth under the age of 18. The project will provide training to youth to help them develop marketable skills and serve as civic leaders in their communities.(60)
Decent Work Country Program (2013–2017)	ILO-implemented program that outlines strategies for promoting decent work in Uganda. Priorities include youth employment and improved social protection for both formal and informal workers; also includes a focus on prevention and elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(61)
Youth Venture Fund*‡	Government program aiming to reduce youth unemployment.(43)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Uganda.

In 2014, the Government continued to carry out a number of activities to raise awareness of human trafficking in Uganda. The Government’s anti-trafficking budget is small, and the country depends on agency and donor contributions for its activities.(28)

Although Uganda has programs that address child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, Ukraine made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, Ukraine experienced the election of a new government, armed conflict with Russian-backed separatists in the south and east of the country, and the illegal attempted annexation of Crimea by Russia, which may impact the Government's ability to address the worst forms of child labor. The Government partnered with the IOM, the OSCE, and the anti-trafficking NGO La Strada to carry out several awareness-raising campaigns to combat human trafficking. These campaigns were targeted at youth displaced by the conflict in eastern Ukraine and the occupation of Crimea, who are at increased risk of becoming human trafficking victims. The Government also published a report on the efforts made in 2013 to implement the National Program for Combating Human Trafficking Until 2015. However, children in Ukraine are engaged in child labor, including in street work and in the worst forms of child labor, including in pornography. There are no laws or regulations that prohibit possessing child pornography or benefitting from its proceeds, and the age of consent for sexual relationships is not clearly defined. The National Action Plan for Child Protection and the National Program for Combating Human Trafficking remained underfunded in 2014. Furthermore, shelter and rehabilitation centers for children, including street children and victims of human trafficking, are insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ukraine are engaged in child labor, including in street work. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, including pornography.<sup>(1)</sup> Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ukraine.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Ukraine experienced the election of a new government, armed conflict with Russian-backed separatists in the south and east of the country, and the occupation and attempted illegal annexation of Crimea by Russia, which may impact the Government's ability to address the worst forms of child labor.

Children from Ukraine are trafficked transnationally as well as domestically.(9, 10) Homeless, orphaned, and poor children are at high risk of being trafficked and are targeted by recruiters for child pornography.(9, 10) Commercial sexual exploitation of children, including for pornography, remains a serious problem in Ukraine.(4, 13)

During the reporting period, the conflict in eastern Ukraine created over 460,000 Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs), over a third of whom are children.(14, 15) The inability of many IDP families to access adequate shelter and available social benefits puts children at increased risk of exploitation in the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking.(16) The Ministry of Social Policy (MSP) has noted an increased vulnerability to both domestic and international human trafficking among the IDP community, and there have been reports of kidnapping of girls from conflict-affected areas for commercial sexual exploitation and labor exploitation.(5, 16) In addition, authorities have in some cases refused to grant Roma IDPs the same level of assistance as other IDPs, putting Roma children at an even greater risk of exploitation.(17)

There are media reports, to date unconfirmed by UN Personnel, of over a dozen cases of the use of children in conflict by combined Russian-separatist forces in the contested regions of Ukraine.(11, 12) An independent fact-finding mission by civil society organizations and staff of the Ukrainian Parliament's Human Rights Commissioner's Office reported evidence of children being used by separatists as guards at checkpoints and detention facilities. In addition, separatist leader Aleksandr Zakharchenko has allegedly stated that children as young as 14 are fighting in his rebel unit.(18) In addition, although the Government of Ukraine has proactively enforced prohibitions against the use of children under 18 in the conflict, credible media sources have reported 1-2 isolated incidents of children as young as 16 fighting with Ukrainian forces not under direct control of the Government.(12)

Although Ukraine's Constitution and Law on General Secondary Education guarantee free universal education, a reduction of educational facilities associated with the decreasing population of school-age children is limiting education access for children living in rural areas, Roma children, and children with disabilities.(13) Roma children are also sometimes denied access to education due to discrimination.(4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Ukraine has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 188 of the Labor Code; Article 150 of the Criminal Code; Article 21 of the Law of Ukraine on the Protection of Childhood (1, 19-21)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 190 of the Labor Code; Article 21 of the Law of Ukraine on the Protection of Childhood (20, 21)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Order No. 46 on the approval of the list of heavy work and work with dangerous and harmful working conditions, in which the employment of minors is prohibited; Article 150-1 of the Criminal Code (5, 7, 19)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 43 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 1 of the Law of Ukraine on Employment; Articles 172 and 173 of the Criminal Code (19, 22, 23)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 149 of the Criminal Code (19)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 301–303 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law of Ukraine on the Protection of Childhood; the Law of Ukraine on Amendments to Certain Legislative Acts of Ukraine on Combating the Distribution of Child Pornography; Articles 1 and 6–7 of the Law of Ukraine on the Protection of Public Morality (19, 21, 24, 25)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 304 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law of Ukraine on the Protection of Childhood (19, 21)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 15 of the Law of Ukraine on Military Duty and Military Service; Decree No. 447 On Measures to Improve the Defense Capabilities of the State (26, 27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 15 of The Law of Ukraine on Military Duty and Military Service (27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Articles 12 and 20 of the Law on General Secondary Education (28)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 53 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 2 of the Law on General Secondary Education (22, 28)

In Ukraine, the minimum age for work is 16. However the Labor Code allows children to be employed at age 15 with parental consent.<sup>(20)</sup> Additionally, in secondary or vocational schools, students may perform light work at age 14 with parental consent, provided that the work does not interfere with their education and is not harmful to their health.<sup>(20)</sup> Research found that minors in vocational training programs for hazardous occupations are permitted to perform hazardous work for less than 4 hours a day beginning at age 14, as long as occupational health and safety standards are met.<sup>(1, 29)</sup> Moreover, the CEACR noted that the minimum age for such work is 2 years below the international minimum age of 16 for entering hazardous vocational training.<sup>(29)</sup>

Existing criminal laws in Ukraine continue to have gaps in fully protecting children from the worst forms of child labor. While the Criminal Code prohibits commercial exploitation of children, it does not specifically define an age of consent for sexual relations, which has contributed to the prosecution of children ages 16 to 17 as offenders rather than as victims of sexual exploitation.<sup>(1)</sup> In addition, there is no law that prohibits the possession of child pornography or benefitting from its proceeds.<sup>(1)</sup>

In October 2014, the Parliament adopted the Law of Ukraine on Ensuring the Rights and Freedoms of Internally Displaced Persons, which developed a registration process for IDPs and instituted monthly benefit payments to displaced families.<sup>(30)</sup> However, many IDPs may be unaware of the resources made available by the new law, or may lack the identification papers required to access these resources.<sup>(17)</sup>

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Ukraine

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) within the Ministry of Social Policy (MSP)	Enforce labor laws, including laws on child labor, by conducting inspections.(1) Inspections related to child labor laws are coordinated by the Child Labor Division of the SLI, but are carried out by regular SLI inspectors.(1, 4, 31)
Department on Adoption and Children's Rights Protection within the MSP	Identify children involved in the worst forms of child labor, most of whom are in the informal sector.(1, 4)
Criminal Police for Children's Affairs (CPCA) within the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOI)	Identify and investigate the involvement of children in the worst forms of child labor.(1, 4) Refer children determined to be in need of assistance during criminal investigations to social services offered by the MSP.(32)
Criminal Juvenile Police within the MOI	Address crimes committed by minors and against minors.(1)
Department for Combating Crimes Related to Human Trafficking (CTD) within the MOI	Enforce laws against child trafficking and cybercrimes.(1)
State Migration Service	Assist refugees and migrants in need in the country, including victims of human trafficking.(1, 32)
State Border Guards Services	Protect the country's borders and identify cases of human trafficking.(32)
Office of the Ombudsman for Children's Rights	Monitor the rights of children, including regarding the issue of child labor, and ensure that Ukraine abides by international obligations regarding children's rights. Coordinate the development of laws on child protection.(33) Inform the public of children's rights.(33)
National Referral Mechanism	Identify victims of human trafficking, including children, and refer victims to appropriate government agencies for assistance and the provision of services. Led by the MSP.(5)

Law enforcement agencies in Ukraine took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the number of labor inspectors employed by the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) dropped from 572 to 437.(18) According to the SLI, the number of inspectors is inadequate compared to the number of registered employers in Ukraine.(1)

Funding for inspections is limited; inspectors lack sufficient office space, means of transportation, and travel budgets.(1, 34) Furthermore, a 70 percent cut to the SLI's budget enacted during 2014 resulted in forced furlough days and increased resignations among inspectors, many of whom worked less than one week a month.(18) Article 31 of the August 2014 Law of Ukraine On Amendments to the Law of Ukraine on the State Budget of Ukraine for 2014 stipulates that labor inspections can only occur at a company's own request or with the consent of the Cabinet of Ministers, unless there is a criminal investigation against the company. Because the Cabinet of Ministers publishes its decisions, including on whether to allow labor inspections, it is effectively impossible to conduct an unannounced inspection.(18) Due to these substantial bureaucratic barriers, inspections almost ceased in the second half of the year. Given the cutbacks in authorized inspections and resources due to the overall deteriorating budget situation in Ukraine, the SLI has described its ability to inspect for child labor violations as inadequate.(18)

The results of inspections conducted by the SLI are made publicly available on the SLI's website, which is updated quarterly.(1) During the first 10 months of 2014, the SLI conducted 5,038 child labor inspections. The SLI identified 202 employers using child labor.(18) The most common child labor law violations were for overly long working hours, failure to maintain work records, and lack of training. The SLI issued 197 citations, filed 101 administrative cases against employers in courts, and referred 19 cases to law enforcement bodies.(18) The SLI referred children found working in an unsafe work environment to social services, according to the MSP's policy.(1) According to SLI, fines assessed against employers for administrative violations and certain criminal violations are too low to serve as effective deterrents. Fines range from $35-$115.(1, 18)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Under the administrative reform undertaken by the Government over the last few years, the Criminal Police for Children's Affairs (CPCA) was reorganized into a unit under the Criminal Police Department of the Ministry of Interior, and the Department for

Combating Crimes Related to Human Trafficking (CTD) was reorganized as the Counter Trafficking Division under the Criminal Investigation Department and Cyber-Crime Division.(35) The reform resulted in the departure of specially trained detectives and a reduction in the time spent on trafficking investigations.(32) However, during 2013, the CTD was elevated back to the level of Department, allowing the CTD to increase the number of officers it employs from 270 to over 500. In 2014, the restoration of the Department continued to yield positive developments in the form of active cooperation on human trafficking cases with U.S. law enforcement, including initiating a joint investigation in cooperation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.(5)

During 2014, the CPCA employed approximately 3,000 officers throughout the country, while the CTD had more than 500 officers.(1, 18, 32) During the year, the IOM provided training on trafficking in persons to more than 277 judges, prosecutors, and law enforcement officers.(5) Since the passage of the Criminal Procedure Code of 2012, Ukraine has instituted a system of juvenile judges and police investigators to ensure the protection of children's rights and appropriate prosecution of minor offenders.(1, 35) Despite this, concerns have been raised that the training of judges is more focused on punishing offenders, even if they are under age 18, than on treating children as witnesses or victims.(1)

Children who are discovered to be in dangerous situations during the course of criminal investigations are referred to the MSP system of Shelters and Centers for Socio-Psychological Rehabilitation of Children.(1) In 2014, the Ministry of Interior recorded two victims of child trafficking, seven victims of child prostitution, and six cases related to child pornography.(5, 18) Two child victims of trafficking for labor exploitation in construction received official victim status.(5) Although the National Referral Mechanism (NRM) for victims of trafficking continued to be expanded in 2014, the MSP lacked sufficient authority and financial resources to establish and run the NRM efficiently.(5)

Data on child trafficking and other crimes related to labor exploitation of children are not disaggregated from law enforcement statistics.(9) Research did not find information on the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, or implemented penalties related to violations of criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Policy (MSP)	Lead the Government's efforts to combat child labor and human trafficking, including by drafting legislation and government regulations on these issues.(1, 9)
Interagency Council on Family, Gender Equality, Demographic Development, Prevention of Violence in the Family, and Counter Trafficking Issues	Coordinate efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, including trafficking of children. Chaired by the MSP; members include representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Education, Security, Health, Foreign Affairs, and from international and nongovernmental organizations.(1, 36)
Interagency Working Group to Protect the Rights of Civilians, Including Women and Children, during the Anti-Terrorist Operation in the Eastern Regions of Ukraine*	Protect IDPs and other civilians from negative consequences of the ongoing military operations in Ukraine, including the increased rates of domestic and transnational human trafficking. Established by the MSP; members include representatives from the Secretariat of the Verkhovna Rada Commissioner for Human Rights, the Authorized Representative of the President of Ukraine for Children's Rights, and other government agencies and NGOs.(16) The Interagency Group held its first meeting in June 2014.(16)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Although the Interagency Council's requirements call for a meeting every 3 months, research found no evidence that the Council met in 2014. Ukrainian authorities report that a meeting was scheduled for July 2014, but was canceled due to events related to the crisis in Ukraine.(16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Ukraine has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Ukraine

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Implement the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child through 2016 (NAP)	Aims to protect children, including from economic exploitation, through awareness raising, rehabilitation of victims found in the worst forms of child labor, access to education, and creation of a child labor monitoring system.(1, 32, 37) In November 2014, Parliament passed a National Action Plan for the implementation of the NAP in 2014. The 2014 National Action Plan specified that the worst forms of child labor must be captured in statistical reporting, beginning in February 2015.(38, 39)
National Program for Combating Human Trafficking (Until 2015)	Guides the work of the National Coordinator on Combating Human Trafficking and contains specific actions and timetables in regard to preventing, protecting, and prosecuting trafficking crimes.(40) Goals for 2014 include establishing a procedure to monitor local and central authorities' treatment of issues related to trafficking in persons; strengthening cooperation between local and central authorities; conducting a public information campaign on risk factors for human trafficking and the dangers of illegal migration; and fulfilling obligations to assist victims, including the provision of financial assistance.(41)
USAID Country Development Cooperation Strategy (CDCS) (2012–2016)	Aims to support democratic processes, advance economic growth and prosperity, and achieve greater integration into European structures. Includes a special objective on countering trafficking in persons that involves piloting a NRM for victims of human trafficking and improving methods for rehabilitation and reintegration of victims, including children.(42)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

In March 2014, the MSP published a full-year report on actions taken under the National Program for Combating Human Trafficking Until 2015 in 2013 and included the Program's goals for 2014.(41) Research did not find evidence of any actions taken in 2014 to meet those goals. In addition, research found no evidence of actions under the NAP during the reporting period. A lack of sufficient funding hampers the ability of the Ministries to implement actions called for under the NAP, including implementing the mandated child labor monitoring system, and the National Program for Combatting Human Trafficking.(1, 5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Ukraine funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor and forced labor through data collection and research in Ukraine.(43)
Shelters and Centers for Socio-Psychological Rehabilitation of Children‡	MSP-operated program to provide protection in 14 short-term shelters and 76 long-term rehabilitation centers for children in need, including street children. Short-term shelters provide accommodation for up to 90 days, and rehabilitation centers offer accommodation for up to 12 months, and regular social, medical, psychological, and other types of services for non-residents.(1, 5, 9, 16)
Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children‡	Government-run program to provide services for victims of human trafficking, among other populations in need. As of 2014, 687 shelters were available to assess victims' needs and draft rehabilitation plans.(1, 5)
Anti-Trafficking Awareness-Raising Programs‡‡	Joint effort by MSP and the IOM entitled "Safely to Success" that targeted youth through social media, TV, and on-the-ground events in areas of Ukraine with high levels of migration and high levels of IDPs from the conflict in Eastern Ukraine.(5, 9, 44) The MSP also partnered with the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the OSCE Project Coordinator in Ukraine, and the anti-trafficking NGO La Strada to design and print stickers for distribution in the IDP community with rules of safe behavior to avoid becoming a victim of human trafficking.(16) An additional program was initiated by regional governments at the urging of the MSP to distribute leaflets, posters, and other media with information about the risks of human trafficking to IDPs.(5, 16)
Multiplication of the Anti-Trafficking National Referral Mechanism in Ukraine‡	Joint program by MSP and OSCE to train officials in several regions of Ukraine to identify and provide services to trafficking victims. Involves collaborative work between local agencies and nongovernmental partners.(9)

Program	Description
Countering Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Project (2004–2018)	USAID-funded project implemented by the IOM to reduce trafficking in persons by building the capacity of Ukrainian institutions to address the problem by strengthening the NRM and increasing government funding for counter-trafficking efforts.(45)
Free School Lunches*‡	Government-sponsored program that provides free school lunches to certain categories of children including those from families with many children, families of Chernobyl victims, low-income families, and families in some rural areas.(46)
The Decent Work Country Program (2012–2015)	Government and ILO 3-year joint program that includes a social protection component to improve the social status of migrant workers, develop and implement a national occupational safety and health program, and strengthen the labor inspection system.(47)
Strengthening and Protecting Children's Rights in Ukraine (2013–2015)	$670,000 project funded by the Government of Norway and implemented by the Council of Europe in partnership with the Government of Ukraine. Aims to strengthen the protection of human rights in Ukraine through the prevention of violence against children.(48, 49) In 2014, conducted training for government officials on interview and data collection techniques to use with children who are victims of violence, such as human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(48, 49)
UNICEF Country Program (2012–2016)	Aims to decrease social exclusion and disparities affecting children and ensure that socially excluded children benefit from quality health care and social services.(50)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Ukraine.

There are a variety of service providers for victims of human trafficking in Ukraine. However, the MSP's delay in conveying the status of "victim of trafficking" to all children who have been trafficked prevents children without this status from accessing free government services. Research found that this delay may often result from the insufficient provision of documentation to the MSP. (5, 9)

Although the MSP provides services for children in shelters and social-psychological rehabilitation centers, the current availability of shelters and trained personnel is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(35) The Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children have experienced a large turnover of staff due to an excessive workload and low pay.(40) In addition, budget cuts enacted in 2014 due to the overall budget crisis in Ukraine resulted in the layoff of 12,000 social workers.(51) This may restrict the Centers in their ability to efficiently address the main needs of trafficking victims. Likewise, high turnover in the regions, where local agencies are responsible for identifying trafficking victims under the NRM, has hampered the provision of services to victims.(9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Ukraine (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibit all children under age 16 from working in hazardous occupations in vocational training.	2011 – 2014
	Ensure that laws treat children ages 16 to 17 as victims of sexual exploitation rather than as offenders.	2012 – 2014
	Ensure that laws prohibit possessing child pornography and benefitting from its proceeds.	2012 – 2014
Enforcement	Increase the budget of the SLI, in order to increase the number of inspectors, provide labor inspectors with appropriate resources to carry out inspections, and increase the number of inspections.	2011 – 2014
	Address the provisions of the Law on Amendments to the Law of Ukraine on the State Budget of Ukraine for 2014 that created obstacles to conducting labor inspections. Ensure that inspectors have sufficient ability to conduct both complaint-based and targeted inspections as needed, including unannounced inspections.	2014

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the fines for administrative and criminal violations of child labor laws are sufficient to effectively deter employers from violating child labor laws.	2013-2014
	Ensure that judges treat children who are victims of commercial sexual exploitation and other worst forms of child labor as victims and not offenders.	2013-2014
	Ensure that the MSP has the necessary funding and authority to effectively establish and operate the National Referral Mechanism.	2014
	Make data on the number of investigations, convictions, and implemented penalties related to violations of all criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor publicly available.	2014
Coordination	Ensure that the Interagency Council on Family, Gender Equality, Demographic Development, Prevention of Violence in the Family, and Counter Trafficking Issues carries out its mandate to coordinate the Government's efforts on all child labor issues, through regular meetings and other activities as appropriate.	2009 – 2014
Government Policies	Provide sufficient funds to implement the National Program for Combatting Trafficking and the NAP, including implementing the mandated child labor monitoring system.	2010 – 2014
Social Programs	Ensure that all IDPs are aware of the resources available to them and that internally displaced children are able to access adequate shelter and receive available social benefits, regardless of their ethnicity.	2014
	Assess children's access to rural schools and develop programs to facilitate access to education for Roma children, disabled children, and children in rural areas.	2010 – 2014
	Assess the impact that existing programs may have on child labor.	2011 – 2014
	Ensure that all children who are victims of human trafficking are able to access government services available for victims. Ensure all reasonable efforts are made to obtain needed documentation when considering whether to grant trafficking victim status to children.	2013 – 2014
	Increase the number of shelters and socio-psychological rehabilitation centers for children and the number of trained personnel staffing these shelters, in order to fully meet demand for their services. Provide sufficient funding to return the number of social workers to the level prior to budget cuts.	2013 – 2014
	Take steps to reduce turnover in both the Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children and in local agencies that are part of the National Referral Mechanism to ensure that victims of human trafficking are provided the services they require.	2012 – 2014

Uruguay

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Uruguay made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government expanded the National Action Plan to End Child Labor in Garbage Scavenging to include a study of adolescent work in agriculture in rural areas and established the Office of Rural Employment within the Ministry of Labor to work directly with rural communities. The Ministry of Labor hired 20 additional labor inspectors and the Ministry of Interior held a series of workshops to train police, immigration officials, prosecutors, and judges on human trafficking issues. However, children in Uruguay continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in garbage scavenging and commercial sexual exploitation. The Government does not collect or publish information on the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions for labor and criminal law violations. Uruguay lacks a comprehensive national child labor policy, and programs to prevent and eliminate child labor are limited.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uruguay are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in garbage scavenging and commercial sexual exploitation.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Uruguay.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	6.1(31,955)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	97.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	6.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2010, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Encuesta Nacional de Trabajo Infantil (MTI), 2009.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Livestock raising, activities unknown† (1)
	Fishing,*† activities unknown (1, 3)
Industry	Construction work† in buildings and roads (1, 4, 5, 8)
	Manufacturing,† activities unknown (1, 4)
Services	Street work,† including begging† and street vending† (2-5, 9-11)
	Garbage scavenging† and recycling (5, 8, 9, 12, 13)
	Domestic work† (1-4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work (1-4)
	Used in the production of child pornography* (10, 14, 15)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10, 14, 15)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The 2009 National Child Labor Survey found that 11.6 percent of children between ages 5 and 17 were engaged in some form of economic activity, and of these children, 8.5 percent were engaged in work that was considered to be hazardous. Engagement in such work is more likely to occur in rural areas.(1) The Government has found that the number of children of Afro descent engaged in child labor is higher than that of children of other ethnic groups in Uruguay.(1, 16, 17) Children of Afro descent are more likely to be engaged in work that exposes them to harm.(16, 17) The Ministry of Social Development (MIDES) and the National Statistics Institute have estimated that approximately 20,000 children work with their parents in recycling activities derived from garbage collection and sorting in the streets and at home.(9, 13, 18) A March 2013 MIDES report revealed that children in 1,211 homes in Montevideo, where families sort garbage and recyclables, live in unsanitary and unhealthy conditions. More than 70 percent of these children live in chronic poverty.(5, 9) Children are found in commercial sexual exploitation, especially in tourist areas and near the borders of Uruguay with Argentina and Brazil. There are limited reports that minors engage in prostitution as a way to help provide income for their families.(2-4) Children are victims of internal sexual exploitation and there is evidence that they are also used in child pornography.(10, 14, 15, 18) The Government identified the provinces of Canelones, Cerro Largo, Colonia, Lavalleja, Maldonado, Paysandú, Rio Negro, Rocha, San Jose, Treinta y Tres, as well as the capital Montevideo, as the primary areas of recruitment for trafficking in persons victims.(19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Uruguay has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 4 of the Military Training Law (28)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 7 of the General Education Law (18, 29, 30)

* No conscription (31)

The Adolescent Labor Division within the Institute for Adolescents and Children (INAU) grants minors between ages 13 and 15 permission to engage in light work. However, the Government of Uruguay has not drafted a list of what occupations constitute light work, or specified regulations governing the hours and conditions for light work.(12, 20) The Code for Children and Adolescents establishes a general prohibition against hazardous work for children under 18 and Decree No. 321 identifies the agricultural sector as hazardous and prohibits children under age 18 from working in this sector. While Decree No. 321 stipulates penalties for violations related to underage work in agriculture, research did not find penalties for violations related to other hazardous occupations prohibited for children by Resolution 1012/006.(21, 22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS)	Monitor overall enforcement of labor laws and compliance with labor regulations, and issue penalties for violations. Responsible for the legal protection of workers, including identifying locations and conditions in which child labor may occur.(5, 9, 32-34) Inspection Unit is responsible for inspections to address violations of the law. Inspectors refer child labor cases to the Institute for Adolescents and Children (INAU).(5, 9, 12, 32, 33)
Ministry of Social Development (MIDES) INAU	Lead agency responsible for children's issues in Uruguay. Assist all children, including those employed within the informal sector.(2, 35) Enforce and implement policies to prevent child labor and provide training on child labor issues.(34) Evaluate permit requests and grant work permits, ensuring that children under age 18 are not employed in hazardous work. Support child welfare and protection, and coordinate services for children found in child labor.(5, 9, 34, 36) Work with the MTSS and the National Insurance Bank to investigate child labor complaints, and with the Ministry of Interior (MOI) to prosecute cases when legal violations are found. (37) The responsibilities of INAU's Department of Child Labor include (1) preventing and monitoring the participation of minors in work activities that might adversely affect welfare and development; (2) monitoring work conditions and environment, as well as legislation on minors; (3) investigating all accidents and complaints of irregularities at the national level; and (4) proposing amendments and regulations of current legislation regarding child labor.(38)
Ministry of the Interior	Investigate all organized crimes, including child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and use of children in narcotics operations. Gather evidence for a judge to make ruling.(3, 15, 37, 39) Children identified as victims of the worst forms of child labor through MOI investigations can be placed under the protection or custody of INAU.(3, 39)
Specialized Court for Organized Crime	Mandate police investigations for cases related to organized crime. Operated by two judges and two public prosecutors.(3, 15, 18, 39, 40)

Law enforcement agencies in Uruguay took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, INAU employed 10 inspectors, the same number as in 2013. Two are in Artigas, one in Flores, one in Lavalleja, and six in Montevideo.(9, 12) There are 150 Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS) inspectors who conduct investigations and assess penalties associated with labor violations, including child labor; this is an increase from 130 in 2013.(9, 12) Labor inspectors did not receive child labor-specific training in 2014.(18) Although research did not find information on INAU's 2014 budget, the Government has stated that training and resources are adequate to enforce child labor laws.(12, 18)

Labor inspectors may conduct unannounced inspections in all sectors of the labor market, including on private farms and in homes. (12) When the MTSS receives a complaint regarding child labor via its hotline or by other means, it shares this information with INAU, which then investigates and assists the children who might be affected. The MTSS classifies hotline complaints under child labor only if the phrase is specifically mentioned, which may result in the misclassification of child labor cases.(3) INAU also operates a hotline to receive complaints about child labor, but it does not keep current statistics on reported cases. The medical staff of the National Insurance Bank may report possible violations, resulting in labor accidents, to the judiciary for further investigation. (37) Research did not find information on the number of labor inspections conducted in 2014. INAU's 2013 annual report indicates that it received 44 complaints of child labor violations and conducted a total of 4,046 inspections, compared to 3,200 in 2012.(8) The high number of inspections that each inspector carries out may compromise the effectiveness of the inspections. In addition, INAU conducts the majority of its inspections in the capital of Montevideo, despite evidence from the National Child Labor Survey indicating that most child labor occurs in rural areas.(3, 9) In 2014, the MTSS created the Office of Rural Employment to work directly with rural communities. The MTSS also began developing an employers' guide in which it will outline appropriate hiring practices and work activities for adolescents older than age 15.(12)

When MTSS or INAU inspections identify child labor law violations, each agency may carry out investigations and apply sanctions according to its legal mandate; for cases in which criminal laws may have been violated, the MTSS or INAU may report those cases to the judiciary for further investigation.(37) INAU's Adolescent Labor Division does not record how many penalties or citations for child labor law violations were issued or how many children were removed or assisted as a result of inspections.(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The enforcement of criminal laws is mainly the responsibility of the Ministry of Interior (MOI) and INAU. In 2014, the MOI held a series of human trafficking workshops focused on identification and response, victim referral and assistance, and international commitments; these workshops were attended by local police, officials working on organized crime, and immigration officials.(41) The MOI also held a workshop for prosecutors and judges on international standards in human trafficking detection, investigation, and criminal prosecution.(41) INAU reported that investigators had received adequate training on the worst forms of child labor and had sufficient resources to carry out inspections.(12) However, no information is available on the amount of funding provided for investigations, the number of investigators employed, the number of investigations or prosecutions carried out, or the number of convictions obtained.(12) MIDES implements a database for tracking victim services, and the Attorney General's Office will pilot an electronic case management system in 2015 to collect national data from the judicial system.(18, 41) Generally, it takes 1 to 2 years to resolve a case involving the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the same amount of time before penalties can be applied.(3, 39)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for the Eradication of Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (CONAPEES)	Implement actions to combat the sexual exploitation of children and adolescents.(2, 3) Develop public policies and a national plan of action with respect to the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents, taking into account Uruguay's existing norms and international commitments. Led by INAU and composed of representatives from several government agencies, NGOs, and UNICEF.(42)
Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor (CETI)	Coordinate efforts between law enforcement bureaus and NGOs to develop a plan of action for child laborers and their families.(35) Led by the MTSS and INAU, chaired by the Inspector General, and coordinated by the Sub-Inspector General of the MTSS. Composed of government agencies, industry representatives, labor groups, and NGOs; meets every two weeks.(2, 9, 42, 43)
Anti-Trafficking Interagency Committee	Coordinate Uruguay's anti-trafficking efforts; chaired by MIDES.(2, 3)

During the reporting period, the MTSS and INAU strengthened the existing mechanism for filing and responding to child labor complaints by improving coordination and information exchanges from their databases. Agencies that are part of the Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor notified INAU and referred cases to the appropriate services.(12, 18) The National Committee for

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Uruguay has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for Childhood and Adolescence (2010–2030)*	Identifies goals to be achieved by 2030. Developed by government agencies, political parties, civil society, and private-sector organizations; recognized as a roadmap for policies on children.(2, 44)
CONAPEES National Plan for the Eradication of Commercial and Non-Commercial Child and Adolescent Exploitation	Works to eliminate the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Goals include strengthening victims' rights, improving protection measures for victims and witnesses, keeping children in school, reintegrating children who had previously left school, and developing alternative income strategies for families.(2, 3)
National Action Plan to End Child Labor in Garbage Scavenging	Seeks to combat child labor in garbage dumps through specific projects that involve education, health care, housing, and law enforcement agencies. Launched by CETI and implemented by government agencies, including the MTSS and MIDES.(5, 9) CETI members are finalizing a draft protocol of action for the detection and assistance of child laborers in garbage collection. During the reporting period, the plan was expanded to study child labor in rural areas to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in agriculture.(12)
MIDES Plan to Combat Child Labor (2010–2015)	Includes a range of programs intended to impact child labor. Major focus areas include social and labor inclusion, citizen participation, social and educational inclusion, awareness raising, and programs giving special benefits to youth and populations at risk.(12)
MERCOSUR United Against Child Labor Campaign	Develops public awareness about the need to combat child labor in MERCOSUR. Addresses child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and sexual exploitation, with particular emphasis on communities along country borders.(45)
Second Presidential Declaration on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in MERCOSUR (2012)	Promotes greater articulation among governmental agencies, levels of government, and civil society among MERCOSUR members.(46)
MERCOSUR Southern Child Initiative	Aims to defend the rights of children and adolescents in the region by raising awareness and seeking coordination among member states regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking and pornography, child labor, and migrant labor by harmonizing country legal frameworks with international conventions affecting children and by exchanging best practices.(47)
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014–2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through signatories' efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Uruguay at the ILO's 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru (October 2014). (48, 49)
Presidential Decree: Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents: Obligations of Tourism Operators (2013)	Requires tourism operators to raise awareness, take preventative actions, and report incidents of commercial sexual exploitation of children to the Ministry of Tourism and CONAPEES. In 2014, the Ministry of Tourism printed stickers reading "We are responsible companies that condemn the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents" for tourism operators to display on their premises.(19, 50)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Research did not find evidence of the existence of a comprehensive policy aimed at combating the worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Uruguay funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Pro-Child (Pro-Niño)‡	Telefónica Foundation-implemented program focused on prevention and eradication of child labor. Established in 2000 and has more than 10,000 active youth participants nationwide.(2, 51)
National Plan of Equality*‡	Institute for Social Security program that mandates that beneficiaries have their children attend school and receive medical services. Established the Family Allocations Program, a conditional cash transfer program to reduce national poverty levels and assist working families with their children, as well as families in need.(52-54)
MIDES Youth Affairs Bureau Programs‡	MIDES Youth Affairs Bureau implements three programs intended to impact the worst forms of child labor: (1) Participation, Citizenship, and Culture; (2) Education and Educational Integration; and (3) Training and Work.(12)
Southern Child Initiative/ MERCOSUR (Niñ@ Sur)	MERCOSUR initiative that includes public campaigns against commercial sexual exploitation, trafficking, and child labor; mutual technical assistance in raising domestic legal frameworks to international standards on those issues; and the exchange of best practices related to victim protection and assistance.(55, 56)
Regional Action Group for the Americas ( Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas )	Regional program that conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(55, 57)
Regional Project to End Child Labor in Latin America (2011–2015)	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 3-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor.(58)
Education Program to End Child Labor (2012–2014)	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aimed to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in the Americas, including Uruguay. Ended November 2014.(58)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Uruguay.

Plans to address child labor in garbage scavenging, agriculture, and commercial sexual exploitation have been adopted, but programs to assist these children have not been established.(9, 12) Research did not find evidence of any existing or planned programs to assist working children in other sectors. While the Government has continued to fund and expand social programs to eliminate poverty and increase social inclusion in order to eliminate child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(12) More programs are needed to reach those who are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in the agricultural sector and in commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Uruguay (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the laws governing light work identify the activities that children between ages 13 and 15 can undertake, and regulate the hours and conditions of the work to ensure that children are not exposed to hazardous labor.	2012 – 2014
	Ensure that the laws establish penalties for violations related to all hazardous occupations prohibited for children.	2010 – 2014
Enforcement	Provide more comprehensive guidelines for the MTSS hotline operators to allow proper classification of calls regarding child labor.	2011 – 2014
	Institute systematic recordkeeping of child labor cases at INAU.	2009 – 2014
	Employ sufficient labor inspectors who are responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor in order to provide adequate coverage of the workforce without compromising the quality of inspections.	2013 – 2014
	Increase the number of inspections in rural areas.	2011 – 2014
	Collect and make publicly available information on the number of investigations, prosecutions, citations, convictions, and applications of penalties for labor and criminal law violations, as well as the number of children assisted as a result of investigations.	2013 – 2014

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Collect and make publicly available information about the number of investigators responsible and the amount of funding provided for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2014
Government Policies	Assess the impact that existing policies have on reducing the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2014
	Integrate child labor prevention and elimination strategies into the National Strategy for Childhood and Adolescence.	2014
	Draft and adopt a comprehensive national policy to address the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2014
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the nature of activities carried out by children working with livestock, in fishing, in manufacturing, and in the informal sector in order to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2014
	Assess the impact that the National Plan for Equality may have on child labor.	2011 – 2014
	Implement programs to provide assistance to child laborers, including those engaged in agricultural work, garbage scavenging, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2010 – 2014

NO ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT

In 2014, Uzbekistan made efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, but was also complicit in the use of forced child labor in the cotton sector. While the central Government made concerted efforts to prevent and to remediate forced child labor in cotton production, Uzbekistan is receiving an assessment of no advancement because of government complicity in forced child labor, particularly at the local level. Although there was no evidence of a large-scale, centrally-coordinated, forced mobilization of children, some local officials, in more than an isolated incident, continued to mobilize children during the cotton harvest.

In committing to end this practice, the Cabinet of Ministers declared its intent to ensure that no one under the age of 18 would participate in the cotton harvest; broadly communicated its new commitment through awareness-raising campaigns to prevent children from being forcibly mobilized to pick cotton; and sponsored after-school programs as an alternative to child labor. The Government also led a monitoring effort utilizing ILO methodology to observe the fall 2014 harvest in all cotton-growing regions of the country, finding 41 child laborers, assessing penalties to 19 school officials and farm managers for the use of child labor, and removing children from the fields.

Despite efforts to end the mobilization of children, in the course of widespread mobilization of third-year secondary school students (predominantly age 18) to pick cotton, an unknown number of 17-year-old students were also mobilized through this practice. Independent observers also reported some cases in several provinces in which younger students were mobilized. In a few instances, reports indicate that a local government authority such as a district or regional governing official (hokim) or town mayor may have directly ordered the mobilization of students under age 18.

In at least some cases, callers to hotlines for reporting labor violations in the harvest were unable to get through, leaving an important gap in the system for receiving and processing child labor complaints. The Government also maintained policies in the cotton sector that mandate regional harvest quotas and set crop prices at levels that create incentives for local administrators to forcibly mobilize labor, creating an ongoing risk of mobilized child labor. Several observers stated that any reduction in the mobilization of children was offset by an increase in the compulsory mobilization of adult labor, although this trend could not be confirmed. Some of these observers reported surveillance, intimidation, and detention by the local government authorities while attempting to gather information about labor practices in the cotton harvest.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

There is a lack of current data on child labor in Uzbekistan. To date, the Government has not conducted a national survey on child labor. However, evidence from multiple, independent sources shows that during the 2014 harvest, some local officials, in more than an isolated incident mobilized children to pick cotton, in contravention of the Government's official prohibition.(1-7) In addition, there have been limited reports that during the pre-harvest season, some children are forced to cultivate cotton.(8-10) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uzbekistan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	4.3 (244,095)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	84.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	5.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(11)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006.(12)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating* and harvesting cotton† (1, 7-10, 13-16)
	Cultivating and harvesting silkworms* (15, 17-19)
Services	Street vending and street begging (16, 20)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (21)
	Forced labor in cultivating* and harvesting cotton† (1, 14-16, 22-28)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2014, the Government-supported Coordination Council on Child Labor Issues (Coordination Council) reported that the monitoring exercise it had conducted found 41 children ages 9-17 picking cotton, and that all of those children reported having worked at the direction of their parents or of their own accord.(29)

While observers were unable to carry out formal third-party monitoring that could systematically check the validity of results reported by the Coordination Council, a number of independent observers attested that they did not see evidence of a centrally-coordinated, forced mobilization of children.(1, 30-33) A plan for the ILO to independently monitor for child labor and forced labor on farms and in communities associated with five World Bank projects was negotiated and received Government approval during the reporting period, however, there was insufficient lead time to implement the plan for the 2014 harvest. Instead, Bank staff and their Government counterparts conducted “intensified field supervision,” which consisted of visiting cotton fields, reviewing work contracts, and asking basic questions of the workers.(32-34) The timing of these visits was determined by Government officials, and local authorities generally appeared to have been informed in advance.(32, 33) As it has done since 2009, a Germany-based NGO, the Uzbek-German Forum for Human Rights, coordinated efforts by local human rights advocates, farmers, teachers, and other community members to observe and report on labor practices across the cotton-growing regions. The group stated that the efforts of at least two advocates were hampered by restrictions on their access to the fields, and some of their observers reported that they experienced surveillance, intimidation, and detention by the authorities while attempting to gather information.(6) U.S. Embassy personnel who conducted informal observations of fields and schools throughout the harvest inconsistently encountered police near the fields during their visits as part of the broader local government oversight efforts.(2)

Multiple sources reported cases of local administrators, in several provinces, mobilizing children for the harvest. Available evidence suggests that across the country local administrators mobilized predominantly age 18, third-year secondary school students. However, in the course of doing so, an unknown number of 17 year-old third-year students were also mobilized through this practice.(1, 4, 7) Reports suggest that in at least one case, administrators checked the passports of third-year students to ensure that those under age 18 were not mobilized, however, research could not determine to what extent this practice occurred.(2, 6) Credible statistics are not available on the number of underage third-year students who may have been mobilized. Independent observers reported some cases within several provinces, in which school principals mobilized classes of first-year and second-year secondary school students (ages 15 to 17) or in some cases, sixth to ninth graders (ages 11 to 15), particularly during the last two weeks of the harvest period.(1, 2, 4, 5, 21, 35) In addition, there were a few reports from different locations that a local government authority such as a district or regional governing official (bokim) or town mayor may have directly ordered the mobilization of students under age 18.(2, 4, 7, 28, 36)

Observers stated that any reduction in the mobilization of children was offset by an increase in the compulsory mobilization of adult labor, including of teachers.(1, 31) Comparative data on the adult cotton-picking workforce were not available to confirm or disprove this observation. The practice of forcibly mobilizing people to work in the cotton fields creates an ongoing risk that children may be mobilized when labor demand is high, particularly the final weeks of the harvest when the fall rains threaten to ruin the crop. Sources indicate that for the majority of the harvest period, most local administrators kept secondary schools (colleges and lyceums) open. However, many teachers were obliged to pick cotton, which disrupted class schedules and, in a number of cases, closed secondary schools.(1, 3, 4)

NO ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT

Sources reported that workers were expected to pick between 66 and 176 pounds of cotton per day, with the weight requirements declining toward the end of the harvest.(10, 28) Research could not identify whether a similar quota was in place for child pickers.(6, 37) Reports on working hours for child pickers varied; some worked a partial day after a few hours of school, while others worked 9 or more hours per day, including on the weekend.(1, 6) Some workers picked without gloves or other protective gear. (1, 6, 37) The Coordination Council reported that adequate housing and meals were provided to all workers, and the U.S. Embassy observed a number of well-provisioned worker camps.(29, 37) However, researchers for the Uzbek-German Forum for Human Rights found that some workers lived in unsanitary, unheated facilities and paid the farmer for meager food.(1, 6) According to one report, children in grades below the third year of secondary education returned home at the end of each work day.(6) Reports suggest a diversity of housing arrangements for student pickers, from homestays with local families to school gymnasiums or worker camps.(38) Research could not determine the housing conditions for third year students that stayed overnight at the worksite.

Another form of child labor occurring in Uzbekistan is the trafficking of children for commercial sexual exploitation. Children are trafficked for this purpose internally and abroad, primarily to destinations across Asia.(39, 40)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection	Conduct labor inspections, including inspections for compliance with child labor laws.(16, 53)
Ministry of Interior Office for Combating Trafficking	Investigate crimes related to child trafficking, which may then be prosecuted by the Prosecutor General's Office.(40)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecute criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(40)
Ministry of Public Education, Ministry of Higher and Secondary Special Education, and Center for Secondary and Vocational Education	Monitor elementary through secondary school students to prevent forced child labor, including in cotton. Monitor employment of all graduates of all educational institutions.(3, 54)
Coordination Council on Child Labor Issues (Coordination Council)	Monitor all forms of child labor.(24, 54) Comprises representatives from the Federation of Trade Unions (which serves as its Chair); the Chamber of Commerce and Industry; the Ministries of Labor and Social Protection, Public Education, Foreign Affairs, Health, and Interior; the Employer's Union; the Women's Committee; the Center for Human Rights; the Center for Secondary and Vocational Education; and NGOs.(3, 13, 29)
Women's Committee of Uzbekistan	Monitor school attendance through the academic year, especially during the cotton harvest. A total of 14 regional and 194 district branches of the Women's Committee involved in monitoring school attendance.(54)

Law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Ministry of Labor and Social Protection employs approximately 300 labor inspectors, about half of whom investigate legal rights in the workplace, while the rest conduct technical inspections on occupational health and safety requirements.(3, 53) Either inspectorate may address child labor, depending on the nature of the violation.(35) Information was not available regarding the total number of inspections that the Government carried out in 2014 for the purpose of enforcing child labor laws.

The Government, along with local administrators, continued its enforcement efforts to keep children in school and out of the fields during the cotton harvest.(29, 30) The Government-supported Coordination Council conducted a national monitoring effort during the fall harvest. In contrast to 2013, in which an ILO high-level mission organized, trained, and led the monitoring teams, the ILO played a supporting role to the Coordination Council in 2014 by training monitors and advising on the methodology for monitoring.(13, 29) Through this consultation, the Coordination Council decided to intensify its monitoring of children ages 16 to 18 by focusing on school visits to secondary-level institutions and selecting cotton pickers up to age 20 for interview. As in the 2013 ILO mission, site visits were to be unannounced.(3, 29)

The monitoring exercise took place from September 18 through October 25, 2014. Similarly to the 2013 ILO-led mission, it included eight monitoring units that were responsible for monitoring eight zones, which covered all the cotton-producing areas of Uzbekistan.(29) Each monitoring unit consisted of eight members, comprising representatives from the Trade Union Federation, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection, the Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and the Women's Committees of Trade Unions. In 2014, several local community youth, health, and women's groups joined the monitoring units.(29) The monitoring teams conducted 714 site visits.(3)

NO ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT

The monitoring teams identified 41 children, ages 9 to 17, who were working in the cotton fields during the harvest in violation of Uzbekistan's labor laws. Children were found picking cotton in six of the eight zones, with nearly half of these cases in Samarkand Province.(29) As a result of these violations, the Government reported that the children were immediately removed from the fields and that warnings or fines were issued to 11 school principals, 3 farmers, and 6 foremen. Fines ranged from 3 to 10 times the individual's monthly salary.(29) No local government officials were cited in these cases, and the monitors did not identify any cases in which an entire school class was mobilized.(29)

A key finding of the ILO's 2013 monitoring mission report was that recordkeeping at schools and on district lists of cotton pickers were not maintained consistently across all zones.(13) Research did not find evidence that the Government took action to address this issue in advance of the 2014 harvest. The Government's official report on the 2014 harvest monitoring stated that attendance at secondary schools averaged 91 percent.(29) However, observers who independently reviewed attendance records at a sampling of schools found great disparity in attendance rates among institutions.(3)

Differences previously noted between monitoring results reported by the Government and reporting by independent observers indicate that the Government's current monitoring and enforcement regime does not sufficiently investigate, identify, and punish the range of reported violations. Among the reported violations inadequately addressed by the Government are the mobilization of entire classes of schoolchildren, the closure of secondary schools to mobilize students, and the potential involvement of local or regional government authorities (such as hokim or town mayors) in such mobilization.(3-7) In December, Government officials stated that they were also following up on published reports of child labor in the harvest from independent sources.(55) Besides the cases identified during the monitoring exercise, there were no other reported sanctions or prosecutions during the reporting period against those responsible for engaging children to work in the cotton harvest or in any form of child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Government provided statistics on human trafficking law enforcement, but did not disaggregate data on cases involving children. The Government reported that in 2014 it investigated 1,016 criminal cases of human trafficking, prosecuted 641 individuals and convicted 583 individuals.(56) In 2014, the Ministry of Interior (MOI) converted an existing law enforcement unit in Tashkent to a section focused on the prevention of human trafficking of Uzbekistani citizens planning to go abroad.(3, 35)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Coordination Council	Coordinate efforts to address child labor issues, including monitoring of the cotton harvest.(13, 29) In 2014, the Coordination Council received monitor training from the ILO, monitored the cotton harvest with ILO consultation, and cooperated in planning for a national survey on labor recruitment in agriculture.(29, 48)
Interagency Working Group	Coordinate efforts to address labor rights issues, including child labor.(53, 57, 58) Report to the ILO on the Government's implementation of ratified conventions, prevent forced labor, and protect working minors.(57-61)
Interagency Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons	Oversee efforts to combat trafficking.(40, 62) Chaired by the Prosecutor General and includes representatives from other government entities, such as the Ministries of Labor and Social Protection, Interior, and Foreign Affairs; the National Security Service; and the State Customs Committee.(40)
Local interagency committees	Monitor human trafficking at the provincial, regional, and municipal levels.(40)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Uzbekistan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Memorandum of Understanding Between the International Labor Organization and the Republic of Uzbekistan†	Establishes terms of agreement between the ILO and the Government on cooperation to implement a Decent Work Country Program in Uzbekistan from 2014-2016.(63) This agreement represents an important step toward implementation of recommendations of the ILO supervisory bodies, including utilizing ILO technical assistance and continuing to work with the ILO or other credible third parties to observe cotton harvests.(22, 64)
National Action Plan for the Application of ILO Conventions	Includes a National Policy on child labor issues.(16, 60, 65) Also covers forced labor.(48)
Resolution of the Cabinet of Ministers No. 132 on Additional Measures to Ensure the Implementation of ILO Conventions†	Establishes actions and efforts to be taken to address the worst forms of child labor, and forced labor. Outlines additional activities to be implemented in 2014-2016 in response to ILO Convention requirements, including awareness-raising, monitoring of the cotton harvest, legal reform, data collection, and activities on the worst forms of child labor targeting government ministries, international organizations, students, trade unions, and employers.(66) Ministry of Labor and Social Protection is charged with implementation.(3)
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2013–2014)	Includes activities to enact legal reforms; conduct public awareness-raising; strengthen victim protections; and increase capacity for law enforcement bodies, ministries, agencies, and NGOs to combat human trafficking. (56)
Education Sector Plan (2013– 2017)*	Defines the 5-year development strategy for the education sector and aims to ensure equal opportunities and quality education for all.(67)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In August 2014, the Cabinet of Ministers affirmed in its internal meeting that the participation of children under age 18 in the cotton harvest was strictly prohibited, and this was broadly communicated through an awareness-raising campaign, including trainings for local officials, a public speech by the Prime Minister, posted announcements in schools, and school administrators' meetings with parents (although no official decree was published).(3, 7, 29, 30, 68) However, there are indications that such communications lacked a clear explanation of the legal standards and consequences for not observing the ban.(2) For example, at one college, parents were reportedly instructed to sign a letter pledging that their child would participate voluntarily in cotton picking.(7, 30)

Additionally, the national Government maintained cotton production policies that mandate harvest quotas and set crop prices at levels that offer strong incentives for local administrators to organize and impose forced labor, which create an ongoing risk that children may be mobilized.(1, 64, 69)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Uzbekistan funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government has other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms. (Table 8)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
After-School Programming†	Ministry of Public Education-implemented program during the cotton harvest to provide extracurricular sports and hobbies for students in order to prevent the use of child labor.(29)
Support to the Decent Work Country Program of the Republic of Uzbekistan†	USDOL-funded $2 million project awarded in December 2014 to the ILO to enhance the capacity of the Government and workers' and employers' representatives to prevent and reduce child labor and forced labor, and to promote decent work in Uzbekistan. (29, 70)
Global Partnership for Education†	Multilateral initiative to coordinate the efforts of developing countries, donors, international organizations, teachers, NGOs, and the private sector to secure universal access to quality education in the least-developed countries.(71, 72) In 2014, the Partnership endorsed the Government's Education Sector Plan and awarded a $50 million grant to Uzbekistan for its implementation in coordination with UNICEF and the World Bank. The program will promote child literacy and math skills; develop teachers' classroom skills; expand access to quality early childhood care and education in rural areas; raise the quality of secondary education; and increase the capacity of the Ministry of Public Education to monitor the education system.(71)
School Assistance*‡	Ministry of Public Education program that provides winter clothes and other educational resources to needy families to support their school attendance.(73)

NO ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Family Support Assistance*‡	Government of Uzbekistan program that provides an allowance to low-income families to be paid if their children continue their education up to age 18.(73)
Child Protection Assistance*	UNICEF program that engages with the Government of Uzbekistan to support the development of a national child protection system that will prevent and respond to children who are at risk of or have been subject to child abuse, exploitation, and violence.(74)
Child Rights Monitoring	UNICEF program that partners with local and regional governments, NGOs, and civil service training institutions to strengthen Uzbekistan’s application and monitoring of obligations under the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.(75)
Shelter Support‡	Ministry of Labor and Social Protection operates a shelter for trafficking victims that provides victims with medical, psychological, legal, and vocational training.(21)
Awareness-raising‡	Government broadcasts developed in partnership with an anti-human- trafficking NGO to raise awareness of labor trafficking.(21)
Human Trafficking Hotlines‡	Ministry of Labor and Social Protection operates hotlines for reporting incidents of trafficking.(56)
Labor Hotlines‡	Trade unions and Ministry of Labor and Social Protection operate hotlines for workers to report labor violations. (3) There were indications during the reporting period that some hotlines were not operational, leaving gaps in the system for receiving and processing child labor complaints.(3, 5)
Cotton Picking Machine Provisions*‡	Government program that rents harvesting machines to farmers to help reduce the need for human cotton pickers.(3, 54) In 2014, a limited number of harvesters were available for rent.(3)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was approved during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Uzbekistan.

Although the Government has implemented programs to combat child labor in the cotton harvest and to address human trafficking, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

During the reporting period, the Government engaged with international organizations in their efforts to develop a system for monitoring and remediating forced labor or child labor in the cotton sector among beneficiaries of agricultural and rural development projects. In response to international concerns about the risk that its portfolio of projects in Uzbekistan could incidentally support or use these prohibited forms of labor, the World Bank committed to create a mechanism for third-party monitoring and a feedback channel for child labor and forced labor complaints.(33, 76, 77) The Government actively participated in discussions regarding the design of these mechanisms and stated it would ensure labor standards are maintained during project implementation. Methodologies for forced labor monitoring and the feedback mechanism for child labor and forced labor complaints were still in a nascent state at the end of the year.(32, 76)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Uzbekistan (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Target labor and criminal inspections in areas where hazardous child labor is known to occur, especially in the cotton sector.	2011 – 2014
	Allow independent observers unrestricted access to monitor the cotton harvest through unannounced site visits, and punish officials who threaten or detain observers in order to suppress information about labor violations.	2014
	Publish updated information on investigations and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor and trafficking of children.	2011 – 2014
	Strengthen recordkeeping in educational institutions and maintain up to date records of cotton workers’ ages on district lists.	2013 – 2014

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Establish a comprehensive cotton harvest monitoring and enforcement system that investigates worker complaints and third-party reports of school closings and mobilization of children under age 18 to work in the cotton harvest or other forms of child labor, and applies sanctions against responsible individuals, including local or regional government authorities (such as hokim or town mayors).	2012 – 2014
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Plan.	2014
Government Policies	Strengthen efforts to raise awareness of the ban on child labor in the cotton harvest by developing and disseminating presentation materials that clearly explain the legal definition of prohibited child labor and the consequences of failing to abide by the law.	2014
	Revise policies that mandate cotton harvest quotas to help prevent forced involvement of children under age 18 in the cotton harvest.	2012 – 2014
	Conduct a national child labor survey.	2013 – 2014
Social Programs	Expand programs to address the worst forms of child labor, with a particular focus on children involved in cotton production.	2009 – 2014
	Ensure that hotlines for child labor, forced labor, and other concerns about cotton harvest labor practices are fully operational and hotline personnel are trained and ready to provide assistance.	2014
	Assess the impact that school assistance and family support programs may have on addressing child labor.	2011 – 2014

In 2014, Vanuatu made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government continued implementing the National Minimum Standards in Education, a key component of which is child protection. However, limited evidence suggests that children are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. The law does not establish a minimum age for hazardous work and the law does not prohibit hazardous occupations and activities for children. A mechanism to coordinate government efforts to combat child labor has not been established. Vanuatu does not have any social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Vanuatu are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Vanuatu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2010, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(2)
Data were unavailable from Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2015.(3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (4, 5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (1, 5, 6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3 (a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

There have been no national surveys of child labor in Vanuatu to determine the nature and prevalence of the problem.(7) By tradition, children in Vanuatu are expected to assist with agricultural production from a young age.(5)

The Vanuatu Education Road Map establishes a policy to make primary education, grades one to six, free to all children by 2015. (8) However, school fees and lack of physical access to schools continue to be significant barriers to education.(7, 9-11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Vanuatu has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor (cont)

Convention	Ratification
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 40 of the Employment Act (12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 7 of the Employment Act, Section 102 of the Penal Code (12, 13)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 102 of the Penal Code (13)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 101B, 101D, and 147B of the Penal Code (13)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A†
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	N/A†
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

† No standing military (14)

While the minimum age for employment is 15, the law permits children ages 12 through 14 to perform light domestic or agricultural work on third-party farms, if they are employed with a family member. The Employment Act does not define what constitutes “light work.”(12) The Government has neither established a minimum age for hazardous work nor prohibited hazardous occupations and/or activities for children.(12)

Information was not available on whether there are laws that regulate the use of children in illicit activities, such as drug trafficking; however, incitement of another person to any criminal offense is prohibited by the Penal Code.(13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Department	Enforce provisions set forth in the Employment Act, including child labor laws.(15)
Vanuatu Police Force	Enforce all criminal laws, including those regarding human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(5)

Research did not find evidence that law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Based on the most recent information available, four inspectors within the Labor Department are responsible for child labor cases. Labor inspector training on the topic of child labor is limited to informal presentations.(1) Information is not available on the number of labor inspections, violations of child labor laws, or citations and/or penalties issued during the reporting period.(16) Research did not find whether a referral mechanism exists between the Labor Department and the Vanuatu Police Force, or between the Labor Department and social protection and rehabilitation services.

Criminal Law Enforcement

Based on the most recent data available, the Vanuatu Police Force employs 50 investigators, who are responsible for enforcing laws against the worst forms of child labor.(5) Information is not available on the training of investigators or on the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions of crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.(7) Research did not find whether a referral mechanism exists between the Vanuatu Police Force and a social welfare program that can provide protection and rehabilitation for children involved in the worst forms of child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although a committee exists to improve the well-being of children, research found no evidence that the committee functions as a coordinating mechanism to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Children's Committee	Coordinate Government efforts to improve children's well-being, including eliminating the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Monitor child protection issues and create a comprehensive and integrated agenda for children's rights.(7, 17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Vanuatu has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
UNDAF for the Pacific Region (2013–2017)*	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island Countries and Territories: Cook Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Fiji, Kiribati, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Marshall Islands, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.(18) Includes initiatives to prevent and respond to abuse and exploitation of children in Vanuatu.(19)
Vanuatu Education Road Map*	Establishes a comprehensive strategic direction for the country's education sector and specifically supports the goal of achieving universal primary education by 2015. Includes three strategic goals: (1) to increase equal access to education, which includes increasing government grants and phasing out parental contributions; (2) to improve the quality of education; and (3) to improve management of the education system.(8)
Vanuatu Minimum Quality Standards for Primary Schools*	Includes a requirement that all primary schools develop and implement Safe School Policies that cover child protection and emergency preparedness.(20)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

Although the Government of Vanuatu has policies related to child labor, research found no evidence of a policy addressing child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Vanuatu (Table 8).

In 2014, Venezuela made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government signed the Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor and maintained policies and programs that aim to alleviate poverty and improve conditions for some working children. However, children in Venezuela continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic service. The Government does not have sufficient efforts in place to protect children in key sectors where child labor is prevalent and does not make information on enforcement efforts publicly available. In addition, information is not available on the effectiveness of the Government's coordinating body on child labor, and the Government has not established a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Venezuela are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic service.(1-6)

Data from the 2006 Household Survey indicate that children's employment levels are highest in the states of Apure and Guárico. The 2006 Survey also shows that among children ages 10 to 14, girls are more likely to work in manufacturing and trade while boys are more likely to work in agriculture.(7) The Government's 2011 census found approximately 262,000 children and adolescents between ages 10 and 17 working in Venezuela, but research could not determine the extent to which the survey encompassed the informal sector, or whether there are studies that target the worst forms of child labor.(8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Venezuela.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are sometimes trafficked to urban areas, such as Caracas and Maracaibo, or to resort destinations, such as Margarita Island, for commercial sexual exploitation.(3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Venezuela has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Articles 79 and 80 of the Regulations on Occupational Safety and Health Conditions prohibit activities considered to be dangerous or unhealthy for children under age 18, but they do not specify or incorporate a list of these activities. Similarly, article 96 of the Law for the Protection of Children and Adolescents prohibits children under age 18 from working in activities prohibited by law, but does not specify which activities are considered hazardous or prohibited for minors to perform. (21, 22) The Government has yet to establish a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children under age 18. (1, 5, 30, 31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Popular Power for Labor and Social Security (MINPPTRASS)	Enforce labor laws, including child labor laws. Develop policies and projects regarding child labor. (16, 32)
National Institute for Prevention, Safety, and Health at Work (INPSASEL)	Assist MINPPTRASS in enforcing labor laws and conditions of work in Venezuela. Help develop labor inspection apparatus as well as implement national labor policies. (33)
Ministry of Popular Power of the Interior, Justice, and Peace (MPPRIJP)	Investigate trafficking-in-persons cases through its Criminal Investigative Division and its Scientific, Penal, and Criminal Investigative Corps (CICPC). Role of CICPC is to help enforce laws related to commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities. (5)

Law enforcement agencies in Venezuela took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Although the Government has stated that the Ministry of Popular Power for Labor and Social Security (MINPPTRASS) and the National Institute for Prevention, Safety, and Health at Work (INPSASEL) carry out child labor inspections in the formal and informal business sectors, research did not find information regarding the number of labor inspectors employed to enforce child labor laws; it is unknown whether labor inspectors received training on child labor or had adequate resources. The number of labor inspections conducted during the reporting period is also unknown and research did not find information available on whether, or how many, employers were sanctioned for child labor violations, referral mechanisms to assist children, or whether penalties are sufficient to effectively deter child labor violations. (5)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find publicly available information regarding criminal law enforcement, including the total number of victims, investigations, prosecutions, or convictions for trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation.(5) In January 2014, three women in the state of Anzoátegui were convicted for human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of four minors. One woman was sentenced to 18 years and 6 months of prison for sexual exploitation and cruel treatment of minors; the other two women were sentenced to 8 years and 9 months of prison for collusion on sexual exploitation.(34) Human trafficking victims are typically referred to government agencies and local organizations for legal and psychological services, however research did not find information regarding a formal referral process for officials to implement.(6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role and Description
System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents	Coordinate and protect children's rights and address child labor issues through policies and programs at the national and state levels. Comprised of several government ministries, government councils, and representatives from civil society.(21, 35) Mandated by the Law for the Protection of Children and Adolescents.(21)

Research could not determine the extent to which the System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents was active during the reporting period. Research could also not determine whether the Government maintains a coordinating body that addresses the trafficking of children, including for commercial sexual exploitation.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Venezuela has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Second Socialist Plan for the Economic and Social Development of the Nation (2013–2019)*	Provides a roadmap for reducing poverty by improving economic opportunity, access to health care, education, and housing.(36)
National Plan of Action Against Abuse and Commercial Sexual Exploitation (PANAESC)	Addresses the prevention of commercial sexual exploitation of children under age 18 and the rehabilitation of victims.(37)
Second Presidential Declaration on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in MERCOSUR (2012)	Promotes greater coordination between governmental agencies, levels of government, and with civil society among MERCOSUR members.(38, 39)
MERCOSUR's Southern Child Initiative	Aims to defend the rights of children and adolescents in the region by raising awareness and seeking coordination among member states regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking and pornography, child labor, and migrant labor; by improving country legal frameworks to harmonize them with international conventions affecting children, and by exchanging best practices.(40-42)
Declaration of the Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2014-2020)†	Aims to increase regional cooperation on eradicating child labor by 2020 through the signatories' efforts to strengthen monitoring and coordination mechanisms, government programs, and South-South exchanges. Reaffirms commitments made in the Brasilia Declaration from the Third Global Conference on Child Labor (October 2013), and signed by Venezuela at the ILO's 18th Regional Meeting of the Americas in Lima, Peru (October 2014).(43, 44)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Venezuela has adopted poverty reduction strategies, as well as policies that target the trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, research did not find evidence of a national policy that targeted other forms of child labor, such as domestic service and garbage scavenging.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Venezuela funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to Dignify Working Children and Adolescents (PRODINAT)‡	National Council for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (IDENA) administered program that aims to eradicate exploitative working conditions and establish safe business environments in which children above the legal age may work.(5, 30, 45)
Children of the Barrio Mission ( Misión Niños del Barrio )‡	IDENA-administered program that provides services to at-risk and underprivileged children, including child laborers. Primary goal is to eradicate exploitation, abuse, and psychological and physical mistreatment of children from birth to age 17.(8, 16, 46)
Negra Hipólita Mission ( Misión Negra Hipólita )‡	Government program that provides assistance to vulnerable groups, including street children.(47) Assists children engaged in child labor, including those working at garbage collection sites and on the street.(48, 49) Has assisted more than 50,000 children since its inception in 2006.(49)
Communal Centers for Comprehensive Care*‡	IDENA-supervised centers that provide meals and educational assistance to at-risk children from birth to age 12. Also partners with the Ministry of Popular Power, Health, and Social Development to provide medical and dental care to children.(50)
National Day Camps*‡	IDENA-administered program under the Community Vacation Plan that provides summer day camps to children, with a focus on athletic, artistic, and cultural activities. In 2014, program received approximately $22.9 million and reached 1.6 million children and adolescents.(5, 8)
Regional Action Group for the Americas ( Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas )	Conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(51, 52)
Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America (Phase 4)	A $4.5 million, 4-year project funded by the Government of Spain and implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor in 19 countries, including Venezuela.(53)
Education and Monitoring Program for the Eradication of Child Labor	A $1.3 million, 2-year project funded by the Government of Spain and implemented by ILO-IPEC that aimed to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in Latin America, including Venezuela. Included the objective of developing information systems on the worst forms of child labor.(53)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Venezuela.

In 2014, research indicated the Program to Dignify Working Children and Adolescents (PRODINAT) had limited efficacy due to a continued lack of governmental funding.(5) Research could not identify government programs that targeted children engaged in other forms of child labor, for example in domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Venezuela (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Coordination	Make information on the activities of the System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents publicly available.	2013 – 2014

Yemen

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Yemen made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Houthis captured Sana'a, the capital, in September and established de facto control over the ministries and army. Prior to this, the Government had launched an action plan to end and prevent the recruitment of children by the Yemeni Armed Forces and established a Joint Technical Committee to monitor the action plan's implementation. The Government also participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. However, children in Yemen are engaged in child labor, including in fishing, and in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. Gaps in laws, enforcement, policies, and programs to combat child labor remain. Non-state armed groups continue to use children in the country's internal conflicts. No evidence was found of Government efforts to provide demobilization and rehabilitation services to child soldiers who have been involved in combat.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Yemen are engaged in child labor, including in fishing. Children are also engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Yemen.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	13.6 (834,866)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	68.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	10.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		69.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from National Child Labor Survey, 2010.(8)

According to the 2010 National Child Labor Survey, the majority of working children were in the agricultural and domestic work sectors.(5) Based on data from 2013, the national average child labor rate was 23 percent, although there are significant variations across governorates.(9) It has likely increased since then as a result of continued political instability and an economic crisis.(6) Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of qat* (a mild narcotic legal in Yemen) (2, 4)
	Production of cereals,* fruits,* and vegetables* (4)
	Fishing, activities unknown (3, 5, 6, 10-12)
	Hunting,* activities unknown (5)
	Raising livestock*, including sheep,* goats,* cows,* and chickens* (4, 5)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Working in rock quarries and mining (2, 5, 6)
	Construction,* activities unknown (2, 5)
	Working in auto shops,* washing cars* (6, 11)
	Working in welding,* glass shops,* and painting* (11)
Services	Street work, including begging (5, 6, 11, 13)
	Working in restaurants*† (2)
	Domestic work*† (2, 5)
	Waste collection* (6, 13)
	Selling goods in stores* (5, 14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11, 15, 16)
	Used in illicit activities, including smuggling of drugs and alcohol* (2)
	Forced labor, begging, and smuggling of qat each as a result of trafficking* (11, 16)
	Forced domestic work* and forced labor in agriculture* (14, 16)
	Used in armed conflict and armed guarding at checkpoints (6, 17, 18)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Yemen witnessed armed conflict in 2014. The Houthis, based in northwest Yemen captured Sana'a, the capital, in September, and established de facto control over the ministries and the military. Armed conflict involving Houthi and tribal forces persisted in western and central areas of Yemen and between Houthi forces and al-Qa'ida in the Arabian Peninsula in the south.(19, 20)

Children in Yemen are vulnerable to recruitment and use in ongoing armed conflicts.(6, 21) In 2014, 156 boys between the ages of 9 and 17 were recruited and used by the Houthis and other non-state armed groups.(18) While a 1991 law prohibits the use of child soldiers, the Houthis and other armed groups continue to have children in their ranks.(6, 22)

Determining precise ages of children recruited for military activity is a problem due to the low number of birth registrations.(14) However, limited evidence suggests that 12- to 15-year-old married boys in northern tribal regions are considered adults, and therefore obligated to show their allegiance to their tribe by participating in different activities in the internal conflict. Some reports indicate that boys under age 18 were tribal fighters in conflicts; however, other sources indicate that boys were used only as guards.(14)

Girls are trafficked within Yemen to hotels in Aden, Sana'a, Ta'iz, and other cities for commercial sexual exploitation. (16) Yemeni children are trafficked to Saudi Arabia for commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, forced begging, and smuggling of qat.(15, 16, 23) There is evidence that tourists, including those from Saudi Arabia, have entered into temporary marriages with Yemeni girls as a form of commercial sexual exploitation. Saudi tourists at times take the girls with whom they entered into a temporary marriage back to Saudi Arabia where the girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation or abandoned.(15, 16)

Enrollment rates in schools have been seriously affected by Yemen's internal conflict, high levels of violence, and internally displaced persons in the north and south. There is some evidence that these problems have prematurely closed schools and that school buildings have been destroyed during periods of violence.(10, 24, 25) The use of schools by parties to the armed conflict and subsequent attacks on such schools by other parties further limited access to education.(22, 26) In 2011, it was reported that less than half of all boys and about one quarter of girls attend secondary school.(15)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Yemen has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 5 of the Ministerial Decree No. 11 (27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 4 of Ministerial Decree No. 56 (28); Ministerial Decree No. 11 (29, 30)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Ministerial Decree No. 11 (29, 30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 28 of the Ministerial Decree No. 56 (28)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 248 of Penal Code (31)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 163 of the Child Rights Act; Article 27 of the Ministerial Decree No. 56 (28)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 26 of the Ministerial Decree No. 56 (28)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Child Rights Act; Ministerial Order No. 56 (15, 32)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Ministerial Decree No. 56 (28)
Free Public Education	Yes		General Education Law No. 45 (33)

* No conscription.(32)

Because Article 3 of the Labor Code excludes certain type of work from the labor code's protections, including workers engaged in domestic work and certain categories of agricultural work, children working in those industries are not protected by the Labor Code's minimum age provisions.(34)

There is no criminal law that prohibits foreign tourists from sexually exploiting children in Yemen.(14) In September 2014, the Ministry of Human Rights, in cooperation with the ILO, held a 3-day national workshop to revise the current anti-trafficking draft law, in which representatives from the Government, academia, and civil society participated.(35)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor's Child Labor Unit	Enforce child labor laws, conduct inspections, inform the Ministry of the Interior of any violations, and refer children found during inspections to appropriate social services.(30, 36) Receive complaints of child labor.(6)
Ministry of Interior	Enforce child labor laws. Police agencies within the Ministry handle trafficking investigations.(16, 30, 36)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce child labor laws and prosecute and adjudicate child labor cases.(36)
Ministry of Human Rights, Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Legal Affairs, Parliament, and the Social Fund for Development	Maintain supporting roles in combating child trafficking.(37)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor's Child Labor Unit lost all funding and did not perform formal inspections. Complaints received were handled on an ad hoc basis by the Director of the Child Labor Unit personally or through her immediate staff.(6) Research did not find further information on the number of child labor law violations and possible citations or penalties.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, research found no information on the number of investigators, investigations, prosecutions, convictions, as well as on the implementation of penalties.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor	Coordinate child labor issues in Yemen; consists of representatives from the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor, the Higher Council for Motherhood and Childhood, the Chamber of Commerce, ILO-IPEC, and local NGOs.(37)
Technical Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons	Develop a national strategy to combat human trafficking. Established in 2012, composed of government officials and representatives of the IOM, and meets on a weekly basis.(38)
National Network for Child Protection	Established by the Higher Council for Motherhood and Childhood. Its 2014 plan consists of establishing branches in Aden, Lahej, Taiz and Dhamar provinces; training programs and media awareness campaigns, and advocating children's issues.(9, 39)
Joint Technical Committee to prevent recruitment of children in Yemeni Armed Forces*	Implement and monitor the Action Plan to end and prevent the recruitment of children by the Yemeni Armed Forces. Composed of the Ministry of Defense, the Higher Council for Motherhood and Childhood, the Civil Status and Registration Authority, and UN representatives to.(40)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Yemen has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for Combatting Trafficking in Persons	Drafted by the Ministry of Human Rights, includes raising awareness, increasing cooperation between Yemen and neighboring countries, training officials, and creating protection procedures for victims of human trafficking. The strategy has not been finalized.(16)

Policy	Description
Action Plan to end and prevent the recruitment of children by the Yemeni Armed Forces†	Signed in May 2014 by the Minister of Defense, the Action Plan is designed to ensure national laws comply with international standards, prohibit the recruitment and use of children in the armed forces, investigate allegations of violation, and facilitate UN access to monitor compliance.(41) Due to political instability, the Government could not implement the Action Plan.(6)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In January 2014, most major Yemeni political factions approved the National Dialogue Conference outcomes, which included extensive new provisions for protecting children’s rights. However, the worsening political crisis during the reporting period prevented its implementation.(6)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Yemen participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Phase IV of the Social Fund for Development (SFD) (2011–2015)	$154 million, Government of UK-funded, 5-year project implemented by the SFD to improve access to education and provide employment opportunities and reduce vulnerability for disadvantaged groups.(42) Special needs groups, including child laborers and street children, are targeted under the SFD for social protection and education programs in partnership with the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor, and the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation. Includes improving centers for street children and developing safe child health and educational services.(43)
Social Welfare Fund Institutional Support Project* (2010–2017)	$10 million, World Bank-funded, 7-year project, implemented by the Social Welfare Fund to provide low-income individuals with vocational skills and economic opportunities, including small- and micro-enterprise development, in order to eventually graduate from the cash transfer program.(44, 45)
Temporary classrooms in conflict-affected areas	Government of Japan-funded project to support construction of 25 new schools in areas affected by conflict in Aden, Lahj, Abyan, Al Dhale, and Shabwa Governorates.(46)
Middle East Partnership Initiative projects	Government participates in project run by the USDOS that offers business training for high school youth; may encourage decent work for youth and reduce their vulnerability to worst forms of child labor. One such project targets youth in Sana’a and Aden for training and internships.(47, 48)
The Child Protection Sub-Cluster (CPSC)*	Coordinated by UNICEF, the CPSC in 2014 monitored grave violations in Al-Dale’e Governorate, provided after-school safe spaces for children and trained new volunteers to work in the centers.(49) It also launched the Minimum Standards on Child Protection Intervention in Emergencies, guiding compliance with international standards in areas of injuries, sexual violence, and unaccompanied children.(50)
Campaign to register birth certificates	Civil Status and Registration Authority, working in cooperation with UNICEF to issue birth certificates for children who lack registration. In 2014, more than 30,000 children received birth certificates in Aden, Abyan, and Taiz.(22, 51)
Global Partnership for Education School Rehabilitation program	UNICEF, in cooperation with the Government, rehabilitates many affected schools and constructs temporary schools in conflict-ridden areas. In 2014, schools in Sada, Sana’a, Mareb, and Aden Governorates received furniture.(51, 52)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Efforts to combat trafficking in persons in Yemen have been hampered by a lack of government funding and by weakened governance during the 3-year transitional Government.(53, 54) Research found no programs intended to remove and rehabilitate children recruited into the armed forces.(33) Although Yemen has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in fishing.(30)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Yemen (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

In 2014, Zambia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government undertook a massive scale up of its Social Cash Transfer program, adding 125,000 additional households. The Government put into force the Prohibition of Employment of Young Persons and Children (Hazardous Labour) Order. In addition, the Government participates in social programs including two programs to eliminate child labor in tobacco production. However, children in Zambia continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and mining. Gaps remain in the current legal framework related to children; for instance, the Education Act does not include the specific age at which education is compulsory and the Government has not defined what the school-going age is as required in the law, which may leave children under the legal working age vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zambia are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and mining. (1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Zambia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	28.1 (992,722)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	65.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	27.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.3

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 11)
	Agriculture activities such as plowing, weeding, harvesting, and transporting water and supplies and domestic work as a result of human trafficking (2, 12)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children who were trafficked in Zambia were primarily trafficked internally from rural to urban areas for domestic work and agriculture.(2, 12) Some children in Zambia are forced to load trucks with stolen copper ore by Jerabo gangs, which are illegal mining syndicates, in the Copperbelt Province.(11, 12) The Government has yet to release information on child labor from the 2008 Labor Force Survey, although the general Labor Force Survey results were released in 2011.(13, 14)

Large distances to schools and violence in and around schools create a barrier to education.(5) In addition, there are costs to basic education including fees for school supplies.(5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Zambia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Zambia has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography, although commercial sexual exploitation of children continues to be a problem in Zambia.

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 24 of the Constitution; Article 12 of the Employment Act (15, 16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 4 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Article 3 of the Prohibition of Employment of Young Persons and Children (Hazardous Labour) Order (17, 18)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Prohibition of Employment of Young Persons and Children (Hazardous Labour) Order (18)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of the Constitution; Article 263 of the Penal Code; Article 3 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act of 2008 (15, 19, 20)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 24 of the Constitution; Article 143 of the Penal Code; Article 3 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act of 2008 (15, 19, 20)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 144 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act (17, 20)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 2 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act (17)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 14 of the Defence Act (21)
Compulsory Education Age	No		Article 16 of the Education Act, 2011 (22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 15 of the Education Act, 2011 (22)

* No conscription (21)

At the end of the previous reporting period, the Government put into force the Prohibition of Employment of Young Persons and Children (Hazardous Labour) Order.(18) However, gaps continue to exist in the legal framework. Penalties for child prostitution violations in the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act are different from those in the Penal Code.(23) While the Penal Code treats child prostitution as a felony with a minimum 20-year jail sentence, the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act treats it as a civil penalty and imposes a fine of $35–$165. In practice, the Penal Code would be applied; however, research did not discover any such prosecutions in recent years.(24)

The Education Act requires the Government to provide free education up to the seventh grade, and stipulates that education is compulsory for children of “school-going age.”(2, 22, 25) However, the Act does not provide a specific age or definition of “school-going age,” which may allow children to leave school before they are legally able to work.(22) The lack of standards in this area may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Implement and enforce child labor laws.(2, 8)
Ministry of Gender and Child Development’s (MGCD) Child Development Department (CDD)	Enforce the Affiliation and Maintenance of Children Act and the Legitimacy Act, which support child labor enforcement efforts and provide services for children withdrawn from child labor.(8)
Zambia Police Service Child Protection Unit (ZPS-CPU)	Work with MLSS and MGCD to identify and remove vulnerable children from the streets. Work with 72 District Street Children Committees to rescue street children from child labor, including the worst forms, and place them with families, in foster care, or in children’s homes.(13) Work with immigration officials to combat child trafficking, with local officials regarding crimes against children, and with schools to educate and sensitize children about abuse; collaborate with the Ministry of Justice to investigate and prosecute child labor cases.(13, 26)
ZPS Victim Support Unit	Handle the enforcement of laws against trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and/or use of children in illicit activities.(2, 8, 13)
Ministry of Justice	Investigate and prosecute child labor cases.(13, 26)

Law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) employed 58 labor officers who also served as labor inspectors, a significant decrease from the 108 labor inspectors employed during the previous reporting period. The MLSS believes that the number is inadequate to conduct inspections countrywide.(2, 8) The labor officers received basic training on child labor in 2014.

Zambia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Child Labor Unit (CLU) was allocated $46,000 for 2014, which is a $11,000 increase from the budget allocated for 2013. (8) The MLSS stated that the training, budget, and transportation were inadequate to conduct inspections. (8) Information was not available on the number, type, frequency, quality, or the geographic location of labor inspections. The MLSS conducts labor inspections in registered private institutions only; it does not conduct any in unregistered institutions, as allowed by law, where child labor is more likely to be found. (2, 27) While the number of child labor cases for the reporting period is unknown, no prosecutions were recorded in 2014. (8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Zambia Police Service Child Protection Unit (ZPS-CPU) employed seven investigators but training was inadequate. (8) The investigators uncovered 142 cases involving child trafficking, hazardous work, abuse, and labor were identified by the ZPS-CPU. Inspections were only carried out based on complaints and included site visits. (8) However, the overall quality of the investigations and the referral mechanisms were not known. Referral mechanisms exist but social service resources were reported to be limited. (8) Information related to prosecutions, convictions, and implementation of penalties for the cases identified above was not available. However, one child trafficking case was prosecuted and a conviction was secured, but no information was available on the implementation of penalties. (12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MLSS	Coordinate government efforts on issues of child labor, including its worst forms. (2)
MLSS-CLU	Coordinate with District Child Labor Committees (DCLCs) in 26 of Zambia's 102 districts to increase local awareness and mobilize communities against child labor, including its worst forms. (2, 8)
MGCD-CDD	Coordinate Ministry's legislation on child labor. (8)
ZPS-CPU	Coordinate with the Ministry of Community Development, Mother, and Child Health (MCDMCH) to protect children from general abuse, including the worst forms of child labor. (2)
District Child Labor Committees (DCLCs)	Respond to child labor complaints at the local level and file complaints to the MLSS. Composed of ZPS, MLSS, MCDMCH, and civil society stakeholders. (2)

The Government intends to establish District Child Labor Committees (DCLCs) in all districts but lacks the resources to do so. DCLCs serve as the main referral mechanism for social welfare services, and it is reported that these mechanisms have been improving. (2, 8) During the reporting period, the Government formed two new DCLCs in Kaoma and Nampudwe districts, and 19 DCLC members were trained on child labor, withdrawal, and rehabilitation. (8) Due to overlapping responsibilities and communication lapses, individual agency mandates may not be carried out effectively in some cases, and a lack of DCLCs may lead to inadequate referral mechanisms. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Zambia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy	Establishes an action plan and designates responsible agencies to address child labor issues. (2, 25)
National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2010–2015)	Identifies five specific priorities for the Government to focus on: (1) improve and enforce existing laws and policies on child labor, (2) protect all children from hazardous labor, (3) strengthen institutional capacity, (4) raise awareness, and (5) establish monitoring and evaluation systems. (2, 25)
Revised Sixth National Development Plan (2013–2016)	Includes the eradication of the worst forms of child labor as a goal, and places emphasis on early childhood education and a child's right to education. (2, 8, 28)
National Employment and Labor Market Policy	Includes the elimination of child labor as a goal. (13, 29)

Policy	Description
UNDAF for Zambia (2011–2015)	Includes the prevention, protection, and rehabilitation from the worst forms of child labor as a policy outcome, in accordance with the Sixth National Development Plan.(30)
Education Policy and Education Act of 2011*	Includes rights of children, including the right to free education, and provides for the reentry of teen mothers into school.(2)

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

Efforts to implement the National Child Labor Policy have been restricted due to inadequate funding.(25)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Zambia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Achieving Reduction of Child Labor in Support of Education (2012–2014)	Japan Tobacco International (JTI)–funded, 3-year project that provides strategies to reduce the worst forms of child labor in tobacco-growing communities.(31)
Program to Reduce the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Tobacco-Growing Communities in Zambia (2011–2015)	A $4.5 million JTI-funded, 4-year project that reduces child labor in tobacco communities in Brazil, Malawi, and Zambia.(32)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project (2011–2016)	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. In Zambia, the project aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research.(33)
Social Cash Transfer Program*‡	Government program that provides funds on the condition that parents send their children to school rather than to work. In 2014, the Government undertook a massive scale-up of the program, by adding 125,000 additional households, and increased its contribution to the program.(8, 25, 34)
Government child labor sensitization efforts‡	Government programs and the national and district levels to sensitize the public on child labor through implementing partners.(2)
Strengthening Social Dialogue as an Effective Tool to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labour	Ireland-funded, five-country project that promotes social dialogue with the aim of reducing child labor.(35)
Decent Work Country Programme (2013–2016)	Government program emphasizes human development including social protection and addressing child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking.(36)
Protecting Migrant Children from Trafficking and Exploitation† (2013–2015)	A $2.7 million European Union funded, 3-year program implemented by UNICEF, IOM, the UN Human High Commission for Refugees, and the Government to combat child trafficking.(8, 37)
Zambia National Service Skills Training Camps*‡	Government program that provides life skills training camps to at-risk youth, including to victims of the worst forms of child labor.(13, 25)
Youth Empowerment Fund*‡	Government program that provides startup capital for youth to start businesses based on their skills.(2)
School Feeding Program*‡	Government program that provides meals for children that attend school.(2, 38)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was approved during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Zambia.

Although Zambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly for children working in agriculture and mining, and those working on the streets.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Zimbabwe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2014, Zimbabwe made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Zimbabwe passed the Trafficking in Persons Act that criminalizes trafficking offenses related to child labor and child pornography. However, children in Zimbabwe continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and mining. Zimbabwe continues to lack specific social programs targeting sectors in which child labor is most prevalent. Gaps remain in the country's legal framework against child labor, such as the lack of prohibitions of hazardous activities for children, and education is not compulsory or free, which increases children's vulnerability.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zimbabwe are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and mining. The Government's 2011 Child Labor Survey report, released in 2013, concluded that the worst forms of child labor are increasing and should be a cause for concern.(1-3) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of tea,* cotton,* tobacco,* and sugarcane* (3, 6-10)
	Fishing,* including casting nets,* hauling fish loads,* and sorting fish* (1, 6, 8)
	Forestry,* such as dragging logs from felling sites and loading logs for transport (3, 10)
	Cattle herding* (1, 3, 6)
Industry	Mining gold,* nickel,* chrome,* and tin,* and extracting material from underground passages and quarries*† (3, 6, 7, 11, 12)
Services	Street work,* including vending* and begging (3, 8-10, 13)
	Domestic work (3, 8, 10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Used in illicit activities, including drug trafficking* and gambling* (3, 6)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (6, 10, 13, 14)
	Working in agriculture and domestic work, each as a result of human trafficking* (6, 14)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The Government's 2011 Child Labor Survey found that of children 5 to 14 years of age engaged in economic activity, 96 percent worked in agriculture, forestry, and fishing; 95.9 percent of them were living in rural areas.(1) According to UNICEF, approximately 100,000 of Zimbabwe's 1.3 million orphans survive on their own in child-headed households.(15) This breakdown of the family unit, as well as poverty, are major factors in children's vulnerability to child labor.(1, 3, 6, 15) Many childbirths are unregistered in Zimbabwe due to poverty and lack of awareness of the requirements.(3, 6) Children are unable to sit for exams and move to secondary school without a birth registration, preventing them from obtaining an education and often leading them to enter the workforce at a young age.(3, 6) School fees are often prohibitively expensive and limit access to education.(1, 3, 8) The Government failed to meet its obligation of supporting secondary school students with school fees.(3, 6, 16, 17) The deterioration of Zimbabwe's economy and manufacturing sector has also led to a recent increase in child labor.(8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Zimbabwe has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	16	Section 5 and 10 of the National Service Act(22)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

In June 2014, the Government passed a Trafficking in Persons Act that prohibits both trafficking for the purpose of illegal labor, such as child labor, and trafficking for pornography or prostitution.(10) In addition, the Act considers offenses carried out against children as "aggravating circumstances"; it also increases the minimum sentence for violations to 10 years in prison, and the maximum sentence to life imprisonment.(10) Section 11(1)(a) and (3)(b) of the Labor Relations Act, permits employment of apprentices at the age of 13 and does not conform with ILO C. 138.(18, 23) In addition, Zimbabwean law does not provide free schooling or establish a compulsory age for children's education.(23) The lack of standardized education may increase the risk of children's involvement in child labor.(3, 6) Furthermore, Section 19 (2)(d) of the 2013 Constitution includes a right to a basic government-funded education but notes that the Government does not have to provide education if there is a lack of resources. (3, 6, 19) Section 19 (3)(a) – (b) of the Constitution addresses child labor by requiring legislation to protect children from exploitative labor practices and from work that is inappropriate for their age or could harm their well-being; education; physical or mental health; or spiritual, moral, or social development. Despite this, laws have not been passed or amended in accordance with these Constitutional provisions.(6, 19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare (MPSLW) and Department for Child Welfare and Probation Services	Enforce labor laws and investigate labor-related complaints, including complaints involving child labor. Responsible for child protection services, including investigating and intervening in cases of alleged abuse, providing case reports for courts, coordinating case management processes, and supporting community case workers.(6, 10)
Zimbabwe Republic Police (ZRP)	Share responsibility with the MPSLW and the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs for enforcing laws against the worst forms of child labor of a criminal nature.(6) Address issues related to child labor through victim-friendly units in every district. Conduct transnational trafficking investigations through an anti-trafficking desk at the INTERPOL.(6)
Ministry of Justice and Legal Affairs	Oversee all courts, including labor courts. Address trafficking and child victim cases through victim-friendly courts.(6)

Law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took no actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare (MPSLW) employed approximately 108 social workers to serve under the Department for Child Welfare and Probation Services, which was created in 2013. These social workers assist in the Government's efforts to develop a national child protection system by identifying children who are vulnerable to, or victims of, child labor.(10) However, information about the MPSLW funding level; the number of labor inspectors employed; the number and type of inspections conducted; and the number and type of child labor violations, citations, and penalties were not made publicly available.(10) Research indicates that the Government lacks sufficient resources, mainly finances, to adequately investigate and pursue violations of child labor laws. Inspectors received no training on the enforcement of child labor, including hazardous work for children.(10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information regarding the number and training of investigators; the number of investigations, arrests, or prosecutions; or the existence of referral mechanisms related to criminal laws on child labor, including its worst forms.(10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Address the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the MPSLW and includes several government ministries including the Ministries of Health and Child Care; of Primary and Secondary Education; and of Youth, Indigenization, and Economic Development. Also includes international organizations and civil society groups, such as worker and employer organizations.(17, 24)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry-level Committee on Children's Issues	Coordinate government ministries' efforts related to children's issues, including child labor. Separate from the National Steering Committee, which includes the MPPLW and the Ministries of Education; Women's Affairs; and Youth, Indigenization, and Economic Development; meets on a quarterly basis. (6, 10, 17)
Anti-Trafficking Inter-Ministerial Committee	Create a national action plan on trafficking in persons (TIP). Mandated by the President's temporary TIP regulation.(25)
National Task Force on Street Children	Strategize discussed include feeding street children at drop-in centers, reuniting children with their families, and offering counseling sessions. Chaired by the MPPLW and includes NGOs that work on street children issues.(6, 17) Also includes the Ministry of Home Affairs, represented by the ZRP, which also sits on the Task Force; meetings are held quarterly. (6, 17)

The National Steering Committee did not meet during the reporting period, and research did not find evidence that the task forces listed in Table 6 were active during 2014.(10)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Zimbabwe has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP)	Strengthens the analysis of child labor issues and creates an entity to coordinate responses to the findings of this analysis. Consists of three focus areas including (1) education assistance, (2) poverty assistance through a cash transfer scheme, and (3) health assistance.(6)
UNDAF (2012–2015)	Outlines the key issues that the Government should address, including women's empowerment and gender equality; universal access to HIV/AIDS treatment; access to social protection services for vulnerable households; and access for all to basic social services including education. Zimbabwe UNDAF supports major data collection operations, including the Child Labor Survey the Government aims to utilize in development planning, implementation, and monitoring key issues. (26)

In 2014, the Government took no action to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. In addition, research did not find that the results of the 2011 Child Labor Survey have been used to inform policies and programs in Zimbabwe.(10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Zimbabwe funded and participated in programs that may have an impact on child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Phase II of the National Action Plan for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (NAP OVC II) (2011-2015)* ‡	Government program with the support of the multidonor Child Protection Fund managed by UNICEF that includes a focus on equity and access to quality education for children. Aims to assist 80,000 people, including by providing protection services to 25,000 children. Provides a cash transfer program that encourages families to keep children in school.(13, 27, 28) With funding from the European Commission and the Governments of the Netherlands, Sweden, and the UK, provides food and health services to high-risk families, including child-headed households. Also provides protection services for child victims of abuse, violence, and exploitation. (13, 27, 28). During the year, the Government increased financial support by compensating officials that manage the program and by providing program oversight. (13, 27, 28).
Basic Education Assistance Module*‡	Government program, supported by the UK Department for International Development, which provides basic financial assistance to families for education costs such as tuition and examination fees. Aims to keep children in school and to enroll children who lack access to school as a result of economic hardship.(28-30)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Zimbabwe.

Research found no evidence of any programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Zimbabwe (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

There is limited information regarding child labor and government efforts to combat it in non-independent countries and territories eligible for GSP benefits.<sup>1</sup> Obtaining data on the prevalence and distribution of the worst forms of child labor is difficult, and statistics on child work and school attendance are often not available from the sources used in this report. In some cases, there is no evidence to suggest that the worst forms of child labor exist in certain territories. In these cases, when laws appear to meet the guidelines called for in ILO C. 182 and embodied in the TDA, and the territory has a good enforcement framework, no suggested actions have been included.

In regard to ratification of key international conventions concerning child labor, these non-independent countries and territories generally are not eligible to become members of the ILO. Even though they are not members of the ILO, ILO C. 138 and ILO C. 182 may extend to some of them.<sup>2,3</sup> Similarly, ratification of other conventions, such as the UNCRC, may also apply to some of them.

Across non-independent countries and territories, research indicates a variety of legal structures that govern laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms. Some territories are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic laws in the Metropoli do not generally apply to these territories, unless explicitly extended. In other territories, certain domestic laws of the Metropoli apply, and in a few territories, all domestic laws in the Metropoli apply.

Research found some information on the efforts of non-independent countries and territories in the areas of enforcement, coordination, policies, and programs, but this information in many cases was limited.

Assessments

Evidence suggests that the worst forms of child labor are an issue in some non-independent countries and territories. These entities are assessed in the same manner as all other countries included in this report. Other non-independent countries and territories do not appear to have a problem with the worst forms of child labor. These entities fall into three types.

The first type of non-independent country and territory is one in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small (under 50). For this reason, ILAB does not write profiles on these territories. The three territories that fit this category are Heard and McDonald Islands, the Pitcairn Islands, and the British Indian Ocean Territories/Chagos Archipelago. The Heard and McDonald Islands are uninhabited, and the population of the Pitcairn Islands is less than 50 people.<sup>4</sup> The British Indian Ocean Territories/Chagos Archipelago is inhabited by U.S. and U.K. military personnel.<sup>5</sup>

The second type of non-independent country and territory is one with no evidence of a worst form of child labor problem and with a good legal and enforcement framework. Given both the lack of a demonstrated problem and the presence of a preventive legal and enforcement framework, ILAB does not assess the efforts of or include suggested actions for these territories. Such entities will be marked “No Assessment.” Wallis and Futuna was the only territory not assessed in 2014.

The third type of non-independent country and territory is one in which there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem, but that lacks a good legal and enforcement framework. The lack of such a framework is a gap in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. For this reason, such non-independent countries and territories are assessed as “No Advancement.” For 2014, the British Virgin Islands; Christmas Island; Cocos (Keeling) Island; Falkland Islands; Montserrat; Norfolk Island; and Saint Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha, fit this category.

<sup>2</sup> ILO. Constitution of the International Labour Organization; 1948. <http://www.ilo.org/ilolex/english/constq.htm>. Most of the areas covered in the summary report are considered non-metropolitan territories and are therefore ineligible to become members of ILO. While ILO still does not have an official definition for “non-metropolitan territory,” in earlier versions of the ILO Constitution, “colonies, protectorates and possessions which are not fully self governing” was used in place of this term. An ILO member can submit a declaration to ILO requesting that these conventions apply to their non-metropolitan areas. Please see the chart regarding ratifications of international conventions and selected non-independent country and territory laws at the end of this discussion.

In 2014, Anguilla made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Government participated in the Child Safeguarding in the Overseas Territories Regional Project, a project designed by the United Kingdom's Department for International Development and UNICEF to increase the Government's capacity to address child protection issues. The Government also signed the Inter-Agency Child Protection Protocol to facilitate interagency collaboration on child protection issues. However, although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children in Anguilla are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, specifically in commercial sexual exploitation. The law in Anguilla does not appear to prohibit children ages 14 to 18 from engaging in dangerous work or provide a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. The Government also lacks a developed framework and targeted programs that address the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, children in Anguilla are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, specifically in commercial sexual exploitation.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Anguilla. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2008, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2015.(3)

Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2015.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (1, 2, 5, 6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some children reportedly perform sex acts in exchange for money and gifts. Evidence suggests that in some cases these transactions may occur with the knowledge, consent, or initiation of the child's parent.(5) Research has found no evidence that the Government of Anguilla collects or disseminates information regarding the prevalence and nature of the commercial sexual exploitation of children and other worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.

The following convention has been extended to Anguilla (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 1 and 3-4 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 1-2 of the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act (7, 8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	14	Articles 1 and 3-4 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 1-2 of the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act (7, 8)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 4 of the Constitution (9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 147-148 and 152-153 of the Criminal Code (10)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 147-148 and 150 of the Criminal Code (10)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Combat: Yes	18	Article 328 UK Armed Forces Act 2006 (11)
	Non-Combat: Yes	16
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 117 of the Education Act (12)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 106 of the Education Act (12)

* No conscription.

Article 3 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act prohibits children under age 14 from working in industrial undertakings such as mining, manufacturing, and construction. Article 2 of the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act prohibits children under age 14 from engaging in any occupation that is likely to be injurious to their health or safety.(7, 8) However, Anguillan law does not appear to provide protections against dangerous work for children ages 14 to 18. Research could also not determine whether Anguilla has a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.

In 2012, the Government received UNICEF funding to begin drafting legislation that would strengthen protections against child abuse.(13) However, research indicates that this legislation has not yet been completed. In addition, research could not determine the extent to which it addresses the commercial sexual exploitation of children.(14, 15) Research could also not determine whether Anguillan law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, such as drug trafficking.

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under-18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(11, 16-18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Development	Implement child protection efforts and ensure Anguilla complies with the CRC.(22, 23)

The Government of Anguilla coordinates child protection issues through the Ministry of Social Development.(23) However, the extent to which the Ministry addressed the worst forms of child labor, and particularly the commercial sexual exploitation of children, during the reporting period is unclear.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Anguilla has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, representatives from the Departments of Social Development, Education, and Probation from the Ministry of Social Development, as well as from the Royal Anguilla Police Force and the Health Authority of Anguilla, signed the Inter-Agency Child Protection Protocol to facilitate interagency collaboration on child protection issues.(26)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Anguilla funded and participated in social programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Safeguarding Children in Anguilla Project*‡	Ministry of Social Development media campaign that engages civil society groups on child protection issues. (13, 23)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Anguilla.

Research could not determine whether these initiatives have an impact on the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Research also found no evidence that the Government has carried out programs that specifically address the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

British Virgin Islands

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2014, the British Virgin Islands made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although no information suggests that the worst forms of child labor are a problem, the Government appears to lack a complete preventive legal framework to protect all children. The Government has not developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in the British Virgin Islands.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they are not part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.(2)

The following convention has been extended to the British Virgin Islands (Table 1).(2)

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations concerning child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 128 of the Labor Code of 2010 (3)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 130 of the Labor Code of 2010 (3)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of the Constitutional Order 2007; Article 130 of the Labor Code of 2010 (3, 4)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 201A of the Criminal Code, Article 130 of the Labor Code of 2010 (3, 5)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 284A of the Criminal Code; Article 130 of the Labor Code of 2010 (3, 5)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 201A, 284A of the Criminal Code; Article 130 of the Labor Code of 2010 (3, 5)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*†
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Combat: Yes	18	Section 328.2 of the UK Armed Forces Act 2006 (2, 6)
	Noncombat: Yes	16
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 1 of the Education Act 2004 (7)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22 of the Constitutional Order of 2007; Section 17 of the Education Act 2004 (4, 7)

* No standing military (2)

† No conscription (2)

The British Virgin Islands has no standing military or defense force, but citizens may join the UK military.(2) The UK Government has introduced systems to track the ages and locations of individual soldiers, to prevent those under age 18 from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(8-11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of labor laws for the British Virgin Islands (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforce labor laws and collect data and statistics on violations of the Labor Code.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of the British Virgin Islands participated in a program that may have an impact on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in the British Virgin Islands (Table 5).

In 2014, Christmas Island made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Christmas Island, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from involvement in the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of hazardous work prohibitions and a minimum age for hazardous work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms exists on Christmas Island.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Acts Interpretation Act 1901 provides that Christmas Island is included as part of the territory of Australia, as denoted by law. Accordingly, all legislation of the federal parliament applies to these territories unless specifically excluded, including Australia’s ratification of conventions.(2)

Because Australia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, the following conventions apply to Christmas Island (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Christmas Island is subject to the child labor laws of the state of Western Australia.(1, 3) The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 271.2 through 271.7 of the Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995 of Australia; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (5, 6)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 16 of the Western Australia Prostitution Act of 2000; the Western Australia Children and Community Services Act; Sections 271.2 through 271.7 of the federally enacted Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995 of Australia; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (4-9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 309 and 310 of the Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995 of Australia; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (5)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service*	Combat: Yes	18	Canberra Act (10)
	Non-Combat: Yes	17
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Sections 6 and 7 of the Western Australia School Education Act 1999 (3, 11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 98 of the Western Australia School Education Act 1999 (11)

* No conscription (10)

Research found that Christmas Island does not have a minimum age for hazardous work or a list of hazardous activities, which leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms, which apply to Christmas Island (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Australian Federal Police, the Department of Immigration, and the Department of Regional Development	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Issue orders for a child to stop working if there is risk of harm.(8, 12)
Australian Federal Police	Investigate the commercial sexual exploitation of children, including pornography.(8)
Australian Federal Police: Human Trafficking Teams	Investigate human trafficking for the purpose of transnational sexual and labor exploitation.(9, 12)
Australian Federal Police: Child Protection Operations Team	Coordinate and investigate online and multijurisdictional online child sex exploitation issues, including child pornography.(8, 9, 12)
Department of Child Protection	Issue orders to stop a child from working if there is a risk of harm. (1, 5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Acts Interpretation Act 1901 provides that the Cocos (Keeling) Islands are included as part of Australia as denoted by law. Accordingly, all legislation of the federal parliament, including Australia's ratification of conventions, applies to these territories unless specifically excluded.(2)

Because Australia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, the following conventions apply to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands are subject to the child labor laws of the state of Western Australia.(1, 3) The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 190 of the Western Australia Children and Community Services Act 2004 (4)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No		Western Australia Children and Community Services Act 2004 (4)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 270.6 and 270.7 of the Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (5, 6)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 271.2 through 271.7 of the Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (5, 6)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 16 of the Western Australia Prostitution Act of 2000; Western Australia Children and Community Services Act 2004; and Sections 271.2 through 271.7 of the federally enacted Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995 of Australia; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (4-9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (5)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service*	Combat: Yes	18	Canberra Act (10)
	Non-Combat: Yes	17
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Sections 6 and 7 of the Western Australia School Education Act 1999 (11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 98 of the Western Australia School Education Act 1999 (11)

* No conscription (10)

Research found that Cocos (Keeling) Islands do not have a minimum age for hazardous work, or a list of hazardous activities, which leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms, which apply to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Australian Federal Police, the Department of Immigration, and the Department of Regional Development	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(9, 12)
Australian Federal Police	Investigate the commercial sexual exploitation of children, including pornography.(9)
Australian Federal Police: Human Trafficking Team	Maintain jurisdiction in trafficking matters and investigate human trafficking for the purpose of transnational sexual and labor exploitation.(7)
Australian Federal Police: Child Protection Operations Team	Coordinate and investigate online and multijurisdictional online child sexual exploitation.(7, 12)
Department of Child Protection	Issue orders to stop a child from working if there is a risk of harm.(1, 12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands (Table 4).

Table 4. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

In 2014, the Cook Islands made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The Government participated in UNDAF Pacific, which includes youth initiatives related to access to education and security in the Cook Islands. Also, the Government began a baseline study on youth participation in the workforce, which will result in a Youth Monograph. Although research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in the Cook Islands, the Government's legal framework is insufficient to prevent children from engaging in prostitution and pornography, and research could not determine whether laws prohibit internal trafficking in persons or use of children in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in the Cook Islands.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Cook Islands is a self-governing territory of New Zealand. The territory follows a combination of its own laws and some of the laws of New Zealand and the United Kingdom that were enacted prior to self-government in 1965.(2, 3) There are no armed forces in the Cook Islands.(3, 4) New Zealand is responsible for the Cook Islands' defense at its request and in consultation with the Cook Islands.(3)

Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to the Cook Islands, unless New Zealand acted expressly on behalf of the Cook Islands.(5)

The Cook Islands has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 23.1 of the Education Act 2012 (10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22.2 of the Education Act 2012 (10)

* No conscription (11)

In 2012, the Cook Islands enacted the Employment Relations Act, which prohibits children younger than 13 years of age from being employed.(6, 12) The Act also prohibits a school-aged person, defined as 13 to 16 years old, from working during normal school hours, working for more than 10 hours a week outside of school hours, or doing work that is not considered light work. (6) Light work is defined in the Act as “work that does not threaten the child’s health and safety, or hinder the child’s education or vocational orientation and training.”(6) Under the Act, children under 18 years old are prohibited from working in hazardous occupations.(6)

Under the Crimes Amendment Act, trafficking in persons across borders is illegal; however, it is not clear whether internal trafficking in persons is addressed in the Act.(8, 13)

The Crimes Act and the 2004 Amendment prohibit prostitution but do not address child commercial sexual exploitation or child pornography.(8, 13, 14) In 2010, the Government of the Cook Islands began a comprehensive review of the Crimes Act to amend provisions of the Act to include criminalizing child prostitution and child pornography.(14-16) To date, the Act has not yet been modified.(1, 14, 16) Additionally, a draft Family Law Bill, which will include legislation on child protection, has been pending through 2014.(1)

Research could not determine whether laws prohibiting the use of children for illicit activities exist.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms to monitor the implementation of child labor laws in the Cook Islands (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Labor and Consumer Affairs Division of the Government	Implement child labor laws in the Cook Islands.(17)

Cook Islands Police Service	Enforce child labor laws.(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms to address children’s rights and protection (Table 4).

Table 4. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Minister of Health	Coordinate national efforts to comply with the provisions of the United Nations’ Convention on the Rights of the Child and its two Optional Protocols.(1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of the Cook Islands has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Policies Related to Child Labor

Program	Description
United Nations Development Assistance Framework for the Pacific (2013-2017)	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island Countries and Territories: Cook Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Fiji, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.(18) In the Cook Islands, includes different youth initiatives related to access to education, and safety.(18, 19)

In 2014, the Cook Islands began a baseline study of youth participation in the workforce, which will result in a Youth Monograph expected to be published in 2015.(20-22) The Youth Monograph is part of a new youth policy, but the policy has not yet been finalized.(21)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in the Cook Islands (Table 6).

Table 6. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2014, the Falkland Islands made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although no information suggests that the worst forms of child labor are a problem, the Government appears to lack a complete preventive legal framework to protect all children from trafficking for the purposes of labor exploitation. It also is unclear whether the Falkland Islands have established a more comprehensive list of hazardous work prohibited to children, and whether the use of children in illicit activities is prohibited. This leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in the Falkland Islands.(1, 2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they are not part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense.(3) Domestic UK law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended, and conventions ratified under UK law need to be officially extended to BOTs.(3)

The following conventions have been extended to the Falkland Islands (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 4 of the United Kingdom Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Ordinance of 1968 and 2006; Section 18 of the Children and Young Persons Act of 1933 (4-6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	15	Section 4A of the United Kingdom Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Ordinance of 1968 and 2006; Section 18 of the Children and Young Persons Act of 1933 (4-6)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance of 1968 (as Amended in 2006) (4, 5)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Chapter 1 Section 1 of the Falkland Islands Constitution Order 2008(7)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Part 1 of the Sexual Offenses Act
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Part 1 of the Sexual Offenses Act (8)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Education Amendment Ordinance of 2008; Chapter 1, Section 12 of Falkland Islands Constitution Order of 2008 (7, 10, 11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Amendment Ordinance of 2008 (10, 11)

*No conscription or no standing military (12, 13)

The Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Ordinance of 1968 (as amended in 2006) (the EWYPC Ordinance) and the Child and Young Persons Act extend to the Falkland Islands.(4) The EWYPC defines “child” as any person who is younger than age 14, while the definition of “young person” applies to ages 14 through 17. While the Child and Young Persons Act both prohibit the full time employment of children under 15, it includes an exception allowing the employment of children older than 14 in light work.(6) The EWYPC Ordinance makes it illegal to employ children under age 14 in work that exposes them to physical, psychological, or sexual abuse.(11) The EWYPC Ordinance protects children from work that is underground, underwater, at dangerous heights, in confined spaces, as well as from work that requires using dangerous machinery, equipment, or tools without training and supervision; it also prohibits work at night in any industry.(4, 5) No information was found on whether the Government has developed a more comprehensive list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children through age 17, or if the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities.(4, 5)

Although child trafficking has not been identified as having occurred in the Falkland Islands, the UK legal system and Falkland Island Ordinances do not appear to protect children, specifically young persons older than age 16, from internal and cross-border trafficking for the purposes of labor exploitation.(5, 7, 8)

The UK Government has introduced systems to track the ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing children under age 18 from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached age 18 is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent(12, 14, 15).

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate addressing child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in the Falkland Islands (Table 3).

In 2014, Montserrat made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although no information suggest that the worst forms of child labor are a problem, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from being involved in the worst forms of child labor. And although the Montserrat Labor Code protects children from performing hazardous work, it is unclear whether the Government has established a comprehensive list of hazardous activities. It also is unclear whether the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities such as drug trafficking, begging, and theft or burglary. These gaps in legislation leave children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Montserrat.(1-4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.(2, 5, 6)

The following convention has been extended to Montserrat (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Part 9 of the Montserrat Labor Code 2012 (7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Parts 9 and 10 of the Montserrat Labor Code (7)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Schedule II, No. 55 of the Constitution of Montserrat, and Part 138A of the Montserrat Penal Code (7, 8)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Part XIV of the Montserrat Penal Code 2010 (8)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Parts VIII-A and XIV-A of the Montserrat Penal Code 2010 (8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Combat: No Non-Combat: Yes	18 16	Part 14, Section 328 in the UK Armed Forces Act 2006 (9-11)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Chapter II, Part 3 in the Montserrat Education Act of 2008 (12)
Free Public Education	Yes		Chapter II, Part 1 in the Montserrat Education Act of 2008 (12)

* No conscription (9, 13, 14)

While the Montserrat Labor Code prohibits the employment of children under age 16, it includes an exception allowing the employment of children older than age 14 in light work. In addition, children under age 18 may not be employed at night or in occupations designated as hazardous.(7){International Labor Organisation, 2012 #17;, #2} The Minister of Labor for Montserrat is entrusted with the responsibility of deciding what constitutes light work and what constitutes hazardous work, but research found no comprehensive list of hazardous work for all children up to age 18.(6) In addition, research did not find any law or regulation prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities.

The UK Government has introduced systems to track the ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing children under age 18 from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached age 18 is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(3, 7, 10, 13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Royal Montserrat Police Service	Enforce laws involving children.(15)
Department of Social Services	Employ social workers to work on child protection issues.(15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The Government of Montserrat participated in programs that may include the goal of preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Program On Children's Rights, Policies, and Education, "Multi-country 2012–2016"	UNICEF program to address children's rights in the Eastern Caribbean. Ensures the Government complies with convention reporting requirements on children's rights, and assists the Government with developing policies and laws to protect all children, especially vulnerable children.(16) Also includes preschool and other educational opportunities for vulnerable children.(16)

* As there is no evidence of a child labor problem, the impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in Montserrat. (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish a list of hazardous work and activities for which children under age 18 may not be employed.	2011 – 2014
	Establish laws regarding the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.	2011 – 2014

In 2014, Niue made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The Government participated in UNDAF Pacific, which includes youth initiatives related to livelihood opportunities and food security in Niue. While there is no evidence of a child labor problem, the Government has not established adequate legal protection to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Niue’s Terrorism Suppression and Transnational Crimes Act of 2006 specifically address trafficking in children. There is no law addressing other forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children, nor is there a law prohibiting hazardous work or activities for children. There is no established minimum age for labor, and research has not identified any laws that prohibit the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Niue.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Niue is a self-governing territory of New Zealand and does not follow New Zealand laws. There are no armed forces in Niue, as New Zealand is responsible for Niue’s defense.(2, 3)

Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to Niue, unless it was done expressly on behalf of Niue.(4)

Niue has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

* No conscription (8)

In Niue, children under age 16 are prohibited from working in the public sector.(9) The Niue Public Service Regulations prohibit the appointment of permanent employment of any person under age 18.(10) However, children who are not in a permanent employment in public service are vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. There are no labor laws and no established minimum age for labor.(1, 9) There also is no law prohibiting hazardous work or activities for children.(1, 9)

The Terrorism Suppression and Transnational Crimes Act makes it an offense to traffic children, and any person convicted of this offense may be imprisoned for a term not to exceed 20 years.(5) Research, however, has not identified whether there are laws that specifically address child prostitution and other forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children, such as pornography. Research also has not identified whether laws exist regarding the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms to monitor the implementation of child labor laws in Niue (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Niue has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Policies Related to Child Labor

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in Niue (Table 6).

	Enact new legislation prohibiting hazardous occupations or activities for children under age 18.	2013 – 2014
	Enact new legislation to protect children from commercial sexual exploitation, drug trafficking, and illicit activities.	2013 – 2014

In 2014, Norfolk Island made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Norfolk Island, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Legislation fails to prescribe a minimum age for employment, prohibit hazardous work for children, and fully protect minors under 18 from exploitation in prostitution, which leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms exists on Norfolk Island.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

According to the Government of Australia, the extent to which legislation, including laws implementing Australia’s treaty obligations, applies to the external territories varies. In relation to Norfolk Island, legislation of the Federal Parliament applies only if it is clearly stated to do so or if it is obvious from the legislation in question that it was intended to do so. The territory follows a combination of its own laws and some of the laws of Australia.(2)

Evidence suggests that Australia’s ratification of conventions applies to Norfolk Island (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Norfolk Island is a self-governing territory of Australia.(1, 3) The Norfolk Island Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No		Norfolk Island Employment Act 1988 (4)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No		Norfolk Island Employment Act 1988 (4)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 270.6 and 270.7 of the Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995 of Australia, (applies to Norfolk Island); Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (5, 6)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 271.2 through 271.7 of Australia’s Commonwealth Criminal Code Act of 1995 (applies to Norfolk Island); Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (5, 6)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 270.6 of Australia’s Commonwealth Criminal Code Act of 1995 (applies to Norfolk Island); Section 93N of the Criminal Code Amendment Act of 1993; Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013; and Part 3.10 of The Norfolk Island Criminal Code Act 2007 (5-8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 305 of The Norfolk Island Criminal Code Act 2007 (7)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service*	Combat:	18	Canberra Act (9)
	Yes
	Non-combat: Yes	17
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 16 (1) of the Norfolk Island Education Act (10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 14 (1) of the Norfolk Island Education Act (10)

* No conscription(9)

There is no minimum age for employment on Norfolk Island. Children younger than age 15, however, are subject to limitations under the Norfolk Island Employment Act of 1988.(4) Children younger than age 15 may not work more than 20 hours a week, at night, or during school hours.(4) Parental consent and written agreement are required to employ persons younger than age 18.(11) Information is limited, but it does not appear that Norfolk Island has restrictions on hazardous child labor, and the Government has not developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. However, employers have a duty to provide a safe working environment as well as the required safety equipment and clothing, without any charge to their employees.(12)

Section 93N of the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1993 makes it illegal to employ a person younger than age 16 for the purposes of prostitution.(8) Therefore, the criminal laws fail to fully protect children ages 16 to 18 from prostitution. The Child Welfare Act of 2009, however, protects children under the age of 18 from sexual and financial exploitation by allowing officials to take children at risk of harm or injury into safe custody.(13-15)

In 2014, ministerial approval was received and draft legislation was being developed to introduce a number of child protection changes related to establishing a legal minimum age for employment, prohibiting children under age 18 from engaging in hazardous work, and protecting all children younger than age 18 from prostitution. This legislation is expected to be introduced to the Legislative Assembly in 2015.(1) Research indicates that such amendments have not yet been passed or implemented.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Employment inspectors and child welfare officers	Monitor the employment of young workers and take action with regard to their protection, including the production of child pornography.(12)
Australian Federal Police	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(11)
Australian Federal Police: Human Trafficking Teams	Investigate human trafficking for the purpose of transnational sexual and labor exploitation.(12)
Australian Federal Police: Child Protection Operations Team	Perform investigations and coordination role for multi-jurisdictional and international child sexual exploitation online, child sex tourism, and child pornography.(11, 16)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, Norfolk Island is included in Australia’s Interdepartmental Committee on Human Trafficking to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interdepartmental Committee on Human Trafficking	Chaired by the Attorney General’s Department, deals with child labor issues from a trafficking perspective and consists of 10 government agencies including the Australian Federal Police, the Office for Women, the Department of Immigration and Border Protection, the Australian Crime Commission, the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, Fair Work Ombudsman, Fair Work Building and Construction, the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, the Department of Education, and the Department of Employment.(3, 17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in Norfolk Island (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish a legal minimum age for employment.	2010 – 2014
	Establish laws to prohibit children under age 18 from engaging in hazardous work.	2010 – 2014
	Amend the Criminal Law Amendment Act 1993 to protect all children younger than age 18 from prostitution.	2010 – 2014

Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

(formerly called Saint Helena)

In 2014, Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán de Cunha made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although no information suggests that the worst forms of child labor are a problem, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from involvement in the worst forms of child labor. The Government lacks legislation prescribing a minimum age for work, and it is unclear whether a list of hazardous occupations exists for children. There are legislative gaps in the prohibition of trafficking of children for labor exploitation and the use of children for commercial sexual exploitation. These gaps make children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK Law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.(2)

The following conventions have been extended to Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 158 of Welfare of Children Ordinance (1, 3)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		St. Helena – Section 8, Ascensión – Section 125, Tristán da Cunha – Section 190, Constitution Order 2009 (4)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 57-60 of U.K. Sexual Offences Act 2003 (5)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 47-51 of U.K. Sexual Offences Act 2003 (5)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*†

(formerly called Saint Helena)

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Combat: No	18	Section 328, UK Armed Forces Act 2006 (2, 6, 7)
	Non-combat: Yes	16
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15 16	Saint Helena, Tristán da Cunha – Section 34 of the Education Ordinance (8) Ascensión – Ascensión Island Education Policy (9)
Free Public Education	Yes		Saint Helena – Section 16, Ascensión – Section 132, Tristán da Cunha – Section 198, Constitution Order 2009 (4, 8, 9) Saint Helena – Section 43, Education Ordinance(8) Ascensión – Education Policy 2010(9)

* No conscription (2)

† No standing military (2)

The Government has no legal framework establishing a minimum age for work.(10) The Education Ordinance prohibits children of compulsory school age from working during school hours.(8) No information was found on whether the Government has developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. The compulsory education age is ambiguous, particularly for Ascensión, where the Ascensión Island Education Policy notes that education is compulsory from age five until a child takes their General Certificate of Secondary Education (GCSE) exams.(9)

The UK Sexual Offences Act of 2003, which is applicable to Saint Helena, prohibits trafficking for sexual exploitation, but does not address trafficking of children for labor exploitation.(11) The Saint Helena Welfare of Children Ordinance Act of 2008 prohibits the exploitation of children for Commercial Sexual Exploitation (CSEC), by, for example, a brothel owner, but does not prohibit the use (by a client) of a child for CSEC. The ILO CEACR has requested that the Government of Saint Helena take corrective measures in both cases.(11)

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing soldiers under age 18 from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached age 18 is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(2, 6, 7, 12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address the worst forms of child labor in Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Table 3. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish a legal minimum age for work.	2012 – 2014
	Clarify whether the Government has developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.	2013 – 2014
	Establish laws to prohibit trafficking of children for labor exploitation.	2014
	Establish laws to prohibit the use of children who are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.	2014

In 2014, Tokelau made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The Government participated in the UNDAF for the Pacific Sub-Region Projects, which includes social development and education projects in Tokelau. While there is no evidence of a problem, it is unclear whether the Government has laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Tokelau.(1) However, in 2006, the Government of Tokelau carried out a study with support from UNICEF on the situation of women and children on the island, which indicated that 16-year-old males may work in hazardous conditions in construction.(1, 2) However, no recent data are available on the prevalence of child labor nor hazardous child labor in Tokelau.(1, 2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Tokelau is a dependent territory of New Zealand; however, international treaties are applied only with the consent of the Government of Tokelau.(3) New Zealand's ratification of conventions does not apply automatically to Tokelau (Table 1).(2, 3) It is unknown which international treaties Tokelau has consented to.

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
	UN CRC
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

New Zealand's laws apply to Tokelau. However, they are implemented complementary to Tokelauan domestic law, which applies to the local level.(4) Research did not find whether domestic laws ensure that children under 18 are protected from child labor and its worst forms. There are no armed forces in Tokelau, as New Zealand is responsible for Tokelau's defense (Table 2).(5)

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Unknown
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Unknown

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 49 and 50 of the Tokelau Crimes, Procedures, and Evidence Rules Act of 2003 (6)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	17	Government of New Zealand's general army requirement at Article 33 of the Defense Act of 1990 (7)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 63 of the Tokelau Crimes, Procedures, and Evidence Rules Act of 2003 (6, 8)
Free Public Education	Yes		Legislation title unknown (8, 9)

* No conscription (10)

Rules 52 and 53 of the Schedule of Transtok Tokelau Corporation Rules 1997 states that children under age 16 are prohibited from working on ships. However, it is unclear whether there is a minimum age for work outside work on ships.(6, 11) There is also a lack of hazardous work prohibitions outside of working on ships.(1, 3, 11)

The Tokelau Crimes, Procedures, and Evidence Rules Act prohibits prostitution.(6) It is unknown whether children are protected from use in illicit activities or protected from all forms of commercial sexual exploitation.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of New Zealand has established institutional mechanisms to address complaints related to child labor in Tokelau (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
New Zealand Ombudsmen	Address complaints related to child labor and support Tokelau.(1, 12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Tokelau has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Tokelau National Strategic Plan (2010 – 2015)	Implements the UNDAF Results Framework for the Pacific Sub-Region Projects 2013 – 2017, which includes national development strategies and priorities.(13)
UNDAF Pacific (2013 – 2017)	Promotes sustainable development and economic growth for vulnerable groups in 14 Pacific Island countries and territories: Cook Islands, Fiji, Federated States of Micronesia, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.(13) In Tokelau, includes different youth education initiatives related to environmental, health, and food issues.(14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in Tokelau (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Clarify whether Tokelau has applicable laws to protect children under 18 against the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2014
	Determine hazardous occupations and/or activities prohibited for children in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2014
Social Programs	Conduct a comprehensive study on children's activities to determine whether they are engaged in or at risk for involvement in child labor.	2014

Wallis and Futuna

NO ASSESSMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

For the 2014 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Wallis and Futuna's efforts to advance the prevention of the worst forms of child labor, because there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and the country has a good legal and enforcement framework on child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor, including its worst forms, exists in Wallis and Futuna. Wallis and Futuna has a total population of 12,200 inhabitants, 3,430 of whom are children.(1) The population has decreased by 18 percent since 2003.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Wallis and Futuna is considered a French "Overseas Collectivity." As such, Wallis and Futuna cannot ratify international conventions; however, France's ratification of such conventions applies to Wallis and Futuna.(2) France has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

French law applies in Wallis and Futuna.(1, 3) The Government of France has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms. These laws and regulations apply to Wallis and Futuna (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles L4153-1 of the Labor Code (4-6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article R234-6 of the Labor Code (6)
Prohibition of Hazardous Occupations or Activities for Children	Yes		Article R234-6 of the Labor Code; Decree No. 2013-915, Relative to Work That Is Prohibited and Regulated for Young People Less Than 18 Years (6, 7)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 431-1 of the Penal Code (8)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 225-4-1 to 225-4-2- 5 and Article 225-4-2-6 of the Penal Code (5, 8)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 225-7, Article 225-7-1, and Article 225-8, Article 225-9, Article 225-10, Article 225-10-1 of the Penal Code (8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 227-18 of the Penal Code (8)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Combat: Yes	18	Article L121-1 and Book II, Article L5 of Law on National Service Reform (9)
	Non-combat: Yes	17
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles L131-1 to L131-12 of the Education Code (10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles L132-1 to L132-2 of the Education Code (10)

* No conscription (11, 12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of France has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Service of Labor and Social Affairs Inspection of Wallis and Futuna	Enforce labor laws and report violations involving children to local social assistance personnel.(1)
Defender of Rights	Promote children's rights, including through the prohibition of child labor.(4)
French National Police	Oversee the health and safety of children.(1)

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms.

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2014, the Palestinian Authority (PA) made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the areas of the West Bank under its control. The PA acceded to the UN CRC and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict. However, children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in work on the street. The PA's legal framework does not include prohibitions against forced labor or human trafficking. The PA also lacks programs to prevent or eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in work on the street.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Data were unavailable from Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

According to the Ministry of Labor (MOL), there were approximately 104,000 children working in the West Bank and Gaza. Based on a labor survey conducted by various NGOs and financed by the EU, the three sectors in which most children worked were commerce (24.3%), agriculture (22.1%), and street vending (16.8%).(3)

Children are vulnerable to child labor in the agricultural sector partly due to the inability of the Palestinian Authority (PA) to enforce the law in Area C agricultural fields and settlements in the West Bank. There are reports of child labor in Israeli agricultural settlements in the Jordan Valley where children work in excessive heat and are exposed to dangerous pesticides.(8, 9)

Although in the past children were paid to smuggle goods through Gaza’s tunnels, in 2014 most smuggling tunnels were closed.(2, 25-27) The Ministry of Social Affairs (MOSA) reported that in 2014 children were used to smuggle items such as drugs from the West Bank into Israel.(9) Reports point to military training of children as young as age 12 by Hamas and at least one case in which a child was used as a human shield and informant by Israeli forces in 2014.(28-30) There are reports of child trafficking from the West Bank and Gaza into Israel as well as within the West Bank.(19, 24) Children were trafficked from the West Bank into Israel for begging.(3)

The West Bank and the Gaza Strip lack a sufficient number of schools to serve all children. Children often travel long and dangerous distances to attend schools, in some instances, because of Israeli restrictions on access and movement.(31, 32) Conflict hinders children’s access to schools. Some schools are physically used by military forces, which places children at risk.(20, 33)

According to the UN, in the summer of 2014, approximately 262 schools were damaged in the Gaza Strip, including 83 schools operated by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees (UNRWA).(20) Schools are also poorly equipped, and at times unhygienic or susceptible to weather conditions.(31, 32, 34) Violence and discrimination by teachers, as well as the cost of transportation, contribute to the high school drop-out rate of 16 percent.(35, 36) The 2013 statistics of the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics found that approximately 80 percent of children ages 10–17 who worked did not attend school.(3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The PA has Non-Member Observer status at the UN.(37) In April 2014, PA officials presented letters of accession to 15 UN treaties to UN officials.(38) The PA acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The PA has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The PA has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's (MOL) Labor Inspection Office	Enforce labor laws, including those on child labor.(3)
Ministry of Social Affairs (MOSA) Child Protection Department	Protect children's rights, including through the provision of services to children found in the worst forms of child labor.(23)
Police	Investigate violations of criminal laws, including provisions against commercial sexual exploitation of children.(23)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecute cases of child exploitation, including child labor.(23)
MOSA Child Protection Networks	Coordinate to protect vulnerable children, including those in child labor, including the referral system between service providers, law enforcement, and the Attorney General. Operate at a district level.(23, 46) MOSA, the police, the Attorney General, UNICEF, and NGOs make up the Child Protection Networks, which have specific annual plans that guide their work with children affected by or at risk of exploitation and violence. The role of some agencies is to provide services to vulnerable children, while others ensure crimes against children are prosecuted in accordance with the law.(23, 46)

PA law enforcement agencies took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms in the West Bank. In the West Bank, under the terms of the Oslo-era agreements between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Israeli Government, the PA has civil law jurisdiction in the areas of the West Bank designated Area A and Area B, which represent approximately 39 percent of the West Bank's land area and contain approximately 96 percent of the Palestinian population. The Israeli Government has control over the city of Jerusalem as well as Area C; the latter represents 61 percent of the West Bank's land area and contains approximately 4 percent of the Palestinian population as well as the vast majority of the West Bank's agricultural areas.(3, 47) Since the 2007 takeover in Gaza by Hamas, the PA has not had enforcement capabilities in the Gaza Strip despite the creation of the PA interim consensus government in 2014.(3, 47)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2014, MOL employed 42 labor inspectors, 12 of whom are trained on child labor issues. Government officials describe MOL as understaffed and in need of at least 300 labor inspectors in order to effectively enforce labor laws, including those on child labor.(3) MOL officials stated that they are not sufficiently funded and are lacking in professional training for their employees.(3)

In 2014, MOL employees carried out 6,500 workplace inspections of registered businesses, although by law they are required to inspect 100,000 annually.(3) MOL staff, in each directorate (local PA ministry field offices), only had access to one car for 1 day a week, while some employees reported using public transportation at their own expenses to perform inspections.(3) During site visits, MOL inspectors raised awareness among business owners that labor by children under the age of 15 was illegal under Palestinian law. They also worked with factory owners to keep children away from dangerous machinery.(3)

PA officials reported that numerous individuals have been fined following child labor inspections, but no specific statistics were available.(3) Similarly, research did not find information regarding the type of inspections and whether inspections included unannounced visits.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2014, child protection officers of MOSA, in charge of provision of services to children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, stated that they were unable to manage their large caseloads effectively.(3) As of December 2014, MOSA had fewer than 13 child protection officers in the West Bank. MOSA has no plans to increase staffing.(9) Similarly to MOL inspectors, MOSA protection officers stated that they need additional training and funding to carry out their responsibilities. Child protection officers in each directorate had access to one car for 1 day a week, which they shared with MOL inspectors and employees of other ministries.(3) Research did not find information on the number of investigations completed in 2014.

In 2014, MOSA referred 101 cases to the Attorney General for violating child labor laws, compared with 162 cases in 2013.(3) Research did not find information on the number of convictions and implementation of penalties. An unspecified number of specially trained labor judges were appointed during the reporting period, which reduced the wait for cases, referred to the Attorney General.(3)

Child Protection Networks served to coordinate between relevant actors how to best use all available resources and information. MOL and MOSA confirmed that the Child Protection Networks at the district level have successfully provided more rapid responses to child labor issues by cutting down unnecessary bureaucratic steps among multiple ministries that share legal authority on children's rights issues.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The PA has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the West Bank (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on Child Labor	Create national policy on child labor. Led by MOL, and includes representatives from MOSA and from the Ministries of Education; Health; and Justice; as well as from the ILO, UNICEF, and Save the Children.(17)

Due to a lack of resources, MOL and MOSA state that MOSA Child Protection Networks are more effective in coordinating efforts of Ministries and service organizations related to child labor.(3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The PA has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms, in the West Bank (Table 7).

* Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

Although the National Committee on Child Labor was established in 2013 to develop a national child labor policy, no national child labor policy was adopted during the reporting period.(3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the PA funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MOSA Social Protection Programs‡	MOSA programs in the West Bank that provide cash assistance, health insurance, and free education.(46) Families are assessed for eligibility; one of the goals is to prevent families from resorting to child labor. MOSA and the Ministry of Education also make efforts to ensure that children who have dropped out are sent back to school.(46)
MOSA Vocational Centers*‡	MOSA program in the West Bank that operates 13 vocational centers for children who have dropped out of school.(23)
Palestinian Child Protection Helpline 121*	Save the Children Sweden-funded program in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip implemented by Sawa, a civil society organization that supports Child Protection Helpline 121.(49, 50) Provides free support and counseling to children and adolescents to protect them from abuse, neglect, violence, and exploitation. PA officials work with the Helpline to provide services to victims.(49, 50)
Programs of the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA)*	Supports education for children and youth in refugee camps, and provide microfinance and other forms of support to families in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.(51)
Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH) in Schools (2013–2014)*	UNICEF-supported project in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip that aims to improve water, sanitation, and health facilities in schools in the West Bank.(52)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is partially funded by the PA.

MOSA continued encouraging families of child workers to send their children to school and provided stipends to families on the condition their children attended school, but it reported the programs were limited in scope and had limited success. MOSA continued to insist that expanded educational programs were essential to stopping the cycle of child labor, but officials stated that they lacked sufficient funding.(3)

Despite the above efforts, there are no programs in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip to address child labor in agriculture and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

In 2014, Morocco, which currently controls most of the territory of Western Sahara, made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Western Sahara. The Ministry of Employment and Social Affairs established a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Morocco does not conduct research on the extent or nature of child labor in Western Sahara or provide specific information on actions carried out in the territory to combat child labor. Evidence suggests that children engage in child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children are engaged in child labor in Western Sahara including in the agricultural sector.(1) In general, research has not been conducted on the extent of child labor in Western Sahara, nor has there been research about education levels. Data on key indicators on children’s work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The territory of Western Sahara is currently subject to Moroccan laws.(2-5) The Popular Front for the Liberation of the Saguia el-Hamra and Río de Oro (Polisario Front), a Sahrawi national liberation movement, controls 15 percent of the territory, and information on the laws applicable in this area is unavailable.(1, 4, 6) Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor, and those conventions extend to the areas in Western Sahara administered by the Government of Morocco (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Social Affairs (MOESA) Child Labor Task Force	Enforce child labor laws and oversee programs on child labor. Employ labor inspectors in 51 sectors across Morocco; one inspector in each sector dedicated to child labor.(12-15)
The Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Enforce prohibitions on prostitution and other exploitive crimes involving minors as established in the Penal Code. (15)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecute criminal offenses against children, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.(15)
MOJ's Child Labor Units	Process cases involving women and children within the court system.(2)

Information available on law enforcement activities carried out during the reporting period does not specify the region in which actions took place. Therefore it cannot be determined which actions took place in Western Sahara.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MOESA, Office for the Fight against Child Labor*	Coordinate policies and efforts to combat child labor.(13, 16) Provide guidance and limited funding to NGOs working against child labor.(2) Provided $166,000 to NGOs in 2014.(13)
Ministry of Solidarity, Women, Family, and Social Development (MSWFSD)	Coordinate the implementation of the National Plan of Action for Children (PANE) (2006–2015). Coordinate the Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children.(17) Establish continuity of child protection efforts, increase access to education, and eliminate child labor.(12, 15)
The National Observatory for Children's Rights	Register complaints related to child welfare and refer them to labor inspectorate units and law enforcement officials. Operate a toll-free hotline available to child victims of violence, including commercial sexual exploitation.(2) Operate 84 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence, sexual abuse or neglect.(2) Operate 75 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence, sexual abuse, or neglect.(15)
Inter-Ministerial Delegation for Human Rights	Establish policies that promote child protection policies.(13)

*Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Policies Related to Child Labor

Designates MOESA as the coordinating body for the fight against child labor. (13)
National Strategy on Migration*	Establishes policies that promote human rights-based approach to migration. Facilitates integration of legal immigrants. Provides services including expanding access to public education facilities for migrant children, decreasing their vulnerability to child labor and human trafficking.(2, 13)

Policy	Description

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2014, the Government of Morocco funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms, that extended to Western Sahara (Table 6).

Table 6. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Western Sahara (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

TDA CRITERIA AND CORRESPONDING GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- Although not explicitly discussed in the TDA conference report, any government that supports the use of forced child labor cannot be said to be implementing commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

Guidance Question

1. *Was the government complicit in the use of forced child labor?

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor;”
- “Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures;”

Guidance Questions

1. Did laws meet the following international standards:
  - a. a minimum age for admission to employment in line with ILO Convention 138;
  - b. a minimum age for admission to hazardous work in line with ILO Convention 138 and 182;
  - c. a minimum age to which education is compulsory in line with ILO Convention 138;
  - d. ratification of ILO Convention 182; and
  - e. prohibitions on each of the worst forms of child labor as established in ILO Convention 182?
2. If the country’s constitution and laws are not compliant with international standards embodied in ILO Conventions 138 and 182, has there been any change in the constitution or laws that brings the country closer to being fully compliant?
3. If laws were not comprehensive in their prohibitions of all variations of a particular worst form, has there been any change in the constitution or laws that brings the country closer to being comprehensive?
4. *Were there aspects of laws that are contrary to international standards and likely to increase children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor? This question would apply both to countries with child labor problems as well as countries in which there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and when the country has gaps in its legal and enforcement framework on child labor.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor;”

ILAB identified two distinct concepts from this criterion to assess country efforts. In this section (Section III), ILAB analyzed whether or to what degree the country had defined enforcement agency roles and had investigated and addressed complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor. In Section IV (below), ILAB analyzed whether or to what degree the country had institutions charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Guidance Questions

1. Was there an increase or reduction in inspectors to enforce child labor laws and regulations and was the number of inspectors adequate?
2. Was there an increase or decrease in the funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations? Was the amount an improvement or decline and were these resources adequate given the incidence of child labor in the country?
3. Did the country increase or decrease training offered to inspectors, including specialized training on child labor, and was this training sufficient?
4. Did the government create or improve a mechanism for filing and resolving complaints expeditiously regarding child labor?
5. Did the government develop and implement an adequate labor inspection strategy that allowed for different types of on-site inspections of worksites (for example, routine, targeted, complaint-driven, and unannounced inspections)? Were inspections conducted with sufficient frequency and in all relevant sectors? Was the number of inspections sufficient given the incidence of child labor in the country?
6. Did the government provide sufficient authority to sanction child labor violations? Was the quality and quantity of citations or penalties issued related to child labor adequate and was there follow up on any sanctions, if appropriate? Did the country make available information on specific inspection results and citations or penalties imposed for violation of child labor laws and regulations?
7. Was the quality and quantity of criminal prosecutions of crimes related to child labor adequate? Did the country make available information on criminal prosecutions of crimes related to child labor?
8. Did the government establish or improve a process for information sharing among enforcement authorities?
9. *Were there any aspects to the country's enforcement practices that likely increase children's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor?

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor;”

Guidance Questions

1. Was an agency or committee created to coordinate government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor? Did such an agency or committee meet more regularly and take more action, or did it meet less regularly and take less action?

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor;”

Guidance Questions

1. Did the government establish any new policies or plans that specifically address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor?

Appendix II

TDA CRITERIA AND CORRESPONDING GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

2. Did the government incorporate the worst forms of child labor specifically as an issue to be addressed in poverty reduction, development, educational or other social policies, such as Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers, etc?
3. Did the government establish any poverty reduction, development, educational or other social policies, such as Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers, etc., that did not explicitly address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor, but that might have had an impact on them or it? If so, have any studies been conducted to assess the impact of such a policy on the worst forms of child labor?
4. If the country established any of the above plans, do they designate responsibilities, establish goals, and set time-lines?
5. Using the criteria in Question 4, did the government effectively implement existing policies and plans?
6. *Were there on-going country policies or were there any changes to the country's policies that likely increase children's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor?

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria

- "Whether social programs exist in the country to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor, and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor;"

Guidance Questions

1. Did the government fund or participate in any new or ongoing programs that aim to eliminate or prevent the worst forms of child labor?
2. Did the government fund or participate in any social protection programs that could reasonably be expected to have an impact on child labor? Were any of the countries' programs shown, through research, to have an impact on child labor?
3. Are the countries' programs sufficient to combat particular forms of child labor given the scope and magnitude of those problems?
4. Do the programs provide services directly to children?
5. Do the programs adequately target at-risk populations?
6. Were the programs fully funded?
7. Are the programs meeting their goals?
8. Are the program efforts sustainable?
9. Using the criteria in questions 4-8, did existing government programs improve or worsen compared with the previous year?
10. *Were there any changes to the country's programs that likely increase children's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor?

**A yes response to questions with an asterisk indicates a country that would likely receive an assessment of minimal or no advancement.*
